New Flood Blows Strike Manitoba, Morris Evacuated

Winnipeg, May 1 (CP) — The Red River cut loose with new flood blows today at soggy, groggy southern Manitoba.

Manitoba telephone system officials in Winnipeg said the exchange at the border town of Emerson had been flooded out. Four telephone operators — living on the premises for the last week — were forced to abandon the premises.

The girls were evacuated by Red Cross workers. Their evacuation came as the Red River touched 46.18 feet at Emerson — highest level there in 124 years.

The Canadian army moved into the flood zone today as the swelling waters of the Red poured towards Winnipeg.

Thirty soldiers were rushed to Morris, 41 miles south, to throw a sandbag dike around a hospital. An amphibious "duck" stood by to remove patients if the army failed.

All of Morris, a town of 1,100 persons, was ordered by the mighty river water. Scores of residents, heeding their mayor's warning to evacuate, moved to Winnipeg and other places.

Morris was almost deserted. A hotel and snack bar were about the only business places open. Not more than one-third of its people were left in the town's outskirts were washed out.

Rose All Weekend.

In Winnipeg the river rose all weekend. By early today it stood at 22 feet, only 2½ feet below the level reached in 1948 when the last flood occurred. Streets in some residential suburbs were under water.

The highest water was expected to reach Winnipeg Wednesday or Thursday. It was not certain the peak of two years ago would be surpassed.

Even before Mayor Harry Stoneman of Morris had a public-address system to urge everybody to leave, an estimated 500 men, women and children left. The exodus was resumed in earnest today.

Emerson, at the international boundary, was the focal point of flood news up to Saturday. There the Red's rise was almost stopped as the flood crest moved slowly but relentlessly northward toward Lake Winnipeg.

Morris Takes Brunt

Today Morris took the main brunt of the river's fury. The built-up main street was filled with out warning. A wall of water 2½ feet high swirled down Morris' main street — highway 75 — from the north.

Reports to Winnipeg were jammed telephone and telegraph lines said it was 20 feet of water rivaled into the hospital. The town and the C.N.R. both called in army help to build a higher sandbag wall. Army engineers were exhausted after hours of ceaseless work.

Twelve patients — including two mothers and three-and-four-day-old babies — were moved from another hospital now threatened.

Hundreds of sandbags and 200 gallons of drinking water were also trucked southward.

Toronto, May 1 (CP) — Aimed at putting a stop to fish and game poaching, aerial patrols along the banks and waters of the St. Lawrence River on the Ontario Side of the U.S.-Canada border are being made by the Department of Lands and Forests, it was disclosed today.

Using a Beaver aircraft, which can operate on the surface of small bays and inlets, conservation officers now cover hundreds of miles in a day where previously they were limited to the areas which could be covered by motor launch.

The check-up by air was started following recent complaints by residents of the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence, east to the Quebec boundary, that invasions of their territory were being made by fishermen and hunters from the adjoining state of New York who, they claimed, were without licences and had been operating almost at will.

"We are just going to do a bit of checking on the hunting and fishing activities of residents from both sides of the river," Lands and Forests Minister Scott said.

First of the aerial patrols, out of Gananoque, near the eastern end of Lake Ontario disclosed fishing nets which had been set illegally.

During the trip those on the planes made a count of ducks and reported sighting about 7,000 scaups and goldeneyes from Wolfe Island to Prescott.

THREAT OF PHONE STRIKE IN U.S. IS AVERTED

End of 97-Day Chrysler Strike Seen

By The Associated Press

The threatened country-wide tie-up of telephone service in the United States was averted early today by agreement of the striking maintenance and installation men to resume negotiations.

The action ended at least temporarily the week-long strike of 10,000 members of Division 4 of the Communications Workers of America (CIO) who left their jobs here they were scheduled to set pickets at telephone exchanges in 43 states.

It was the picket line rather than the strike itself that was expected to hobble service. It was believed that most of the 230,000 other union telephone workers would refuse to cross picket lines here.

But another segment of communications was hit by a strike of teletype operators and other traffic workers against the United Press, a news service.

Strike Near End

There were indications that the end of the 97-day strike of 80,000 United Auto Workers against Chrysler Corporation was in the making at Detroit.

In New York, 13,000 service employees called off their four-day strike at 1,000 buildings. More than 280,000 apartment house dwellers had been deprived of elevator service, telephone switchboard, heat, hot water, garbage disposal and other services by the strike.

UP Operators And Maintenance Men on Strike

New York, May 1 (AP) — United Press teletype operators and maintenance men went on strike for higher wages today in the 36 bureaus of the news service in the United States.

The UP said its operations continued "almost normal," with executives and workers from other departments handling the transmitting machines.

The strikers, members of the Commercial Telegraphers Union (A.F.L.), originally asked a $15-a-week pay increase for their 365 members in the UP division.

The union reduced this to $6.50 in the last minutes of bargaining, and the company responded with a final offer of $2.50 only 30 minutes before the strike started last midnight.

The union said the walkout was the first to affect one of the country's three major news services since the general strike against the telegraph companies in 1907.

The strike vote was 312 to 14.

Theme of International May Day Celebrations For or Against Redism

(By The Associated Press)

Generalissimo Stalin reviewed thousands of cheering Russians today in a memorable May Day parade celebrating International Labor Day. The Communist slogans in Moscow's Red Square were echoed around the world, from west and divided Berlin to distant Burma.

In the face of the world, however, turned anxiously toward Berlin where nearly 1,000,000 persons converged to hold rival communists and anti-communist demonstrations, May Day celebrations was engulfed in a sea of red banting. A military parade marched past Lenin's tomb and Stalin's reviewing stand. Overhead roared Moscow's most spectacular peacetime display of Soviet aerial power, led by Stalin's son, Lt.-Gen. Vassili Stalin.

May Day, established as International Labor Day by the Socialist International in Paris in 1889, since has been traditionally celebrated throughout Europe.

But in the United States and Canada, Labor Day is designated as the first Monday in September.

And this year in the U.S. May 1 was observed generally at the request of President Truman.

Moscow, Wis., had the most elaborate show, with the American Legion staging a mock "communist insurrection" in which they rounded up city officials just before dawn and took over newspapers, banks, stores and other public activities for one day. Wisconsin communists distributed copies of the Daily Worker Sunday scoffing at the idea.

Find Illiterate Motorists Given Drivers' Permits

Toronto, May 1. (CP)—Highways Minister Doucett said today he thinks "quite a few persons who cannot read or write" have been issued drivers' licences in Ontario.

He commented on a report by Ivor S. Frake, manager of the Ontario Insurance Agents' Association, that an illiterate taxi driver in Kitchener held a licence.

"I think a man can get a licence if he can pass the test and answer the questions," Mr. Doucett said. I would have to check with the records office to see if they have any idea how many drivers can't read or write. They may have some idea.

"The matter has never come to my attention. I will have to look into it. But there are many people who are illiterate. They can usually read the signs and signals."

Mr. Frake said he has passed along to Mr. Doucett's department the information about the Kitchener driver, whose name was not disclosed. He said the man could not read highway signs.

Clues Are Few and Far Between, Police Stymied in Brink's Robbery

Boston, May 1 — (AP) — Can modern crime detection methods solve the United States' biggest cash robbery?

Today, after nearly 15 weeks, the top state and federal crime detection agencies are still stymied by the holdup of $1,300,000 in cash and $500,000 in cheques from the Boston offices of Brink's Incorporated.

But investigation of the spectacular haul goes on. The case is now No. 1 target of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and all Massachusetts police.

With an eye towards reward money of more than $150,000, amateur sleuths, too, are devoting time to pick up a trail.

To date, not a single tangible clue has been uncovered. All "leads" have fizzled.

Questions stumping investigators begin at the doors of the garage stronghold housing the money transportation's firm's street-floor offices in Boston's north end.

Even the actual number of gunmen who participated in the holdup on the evening of Jan 17 remains unknown. There were at least six, possibly eight.

Police's happened to all the "clues?"

The best still is being tracked down by a score of detectives who into small pieces with an acetylene torch and a sledge hammer found a month after the holdup on a dump in Stoughton, a few miles south of Boston. A similar truck was reported seen by two persons near Brink's shortly before the holdup.

Also under way is a check of some 200 former convicts who learned welding in prison at this time has led anywhere police are keeping it to themselves.

Berliners Jeer Each Other Across Sector Barriers

Police Kept Many Flare-ups From Breaking into Riots

Berlin, May 1 — (AP)—Hundreds of thousands of Berliners jeered each other across sector barriers in this tense divided city today during rival east - west May Day celebrations. There were sporadic flare-ups but police of both sides kept them from turning into riots.

Some 11,000 west-German police, backed up by 2,000 specially-trained Western Allied troops, kept affairs in the west sector in hand while an estimated 750,000 Germans cheered speakers lambasting Russia and communism.

A few blocks away thousands of East Berliners converged on the Lustgarten for the communist rally, a demonstration organized from start to finish and heavily guarded by communist sector people's police.

At one point anti-communist demonstrators at Potsdamer Platz began surging toward the Russian sector border, despite efforts of West-Berlin police to keep them in check. At the Brandenburg Gate, some of the demonstrators began shouting insults at the communist - controlled East-Berlin police, calling them "Black Bs," "Red Gestapo" and "communist pigs."

The West Germans — official said fifty appeared to be led by young communists who escaped the east-Berlin police showed remarkable restraint, merely dodging the stones without even drawing their clubs.

Trout and Weather Would Not Co-Operate, Season Opening Dull for Local Fishermen

There were no trout-glutted tummies in the city over the weekend.

Many a skillet which stood by ready to give a warm reception to the piscatorial delights, returned to the ice-box unheated and unhappy.

High water, old man weather and a general disdain on the part of the trout for man-made bait, were responsible for one of the poorest opening-days in years.

Generally speaking, the opening of the season was an overall disappointment, and while some fish were caught, the average catches were in no way comparable to those of the past year or two.

It appears that the fishermen outnumbered the trout at least two-to-one, if the hauls can be judged a criterion.

One party of this city which is more or less famed for getting its quota in a short time, fished all day Saturday and came home empty-handed.

A Sunday quartet had a little better luck, according to the spokesman and hauled forty beauties out of the chilly water. Other parties returned disappointed with one or two and a lot of them satiated their fish appetites with the humble sardine or something. Minnie bought it at the favorite grocery on Saturday.

Anglers Fooled

some anglers thought would be a perfect fishing Saturday. But they were fooled. The coenings-day opening proved one of many frosty air accompanied with brilliant sunshine, Sunday was ditto albeit a little warmer.

A Toronto angler who roamed the streams north of Marmora all day Saturday drew a "duck-egg". However, he contacted, during his trout-hunt, a party of native sons who had better luck. A few pieces of silver, it is alleged, and a noggin or two of firewater changed ownership, and everybody was happy.

Stories Differ

Stories differ regarding the water levels in the streams. Some anglers said it was low, others exceptionally high in the northern areas, while in a more southerly direction, it was just normal. The larger lakes were icelocked and some of the smaller ones were open.

All - in - all, the curtain-raiser of the trout season is not likely to write home about, and the majority of fishermen caught nearly worn thin through being photographed in the hands of different parties.

Tall tales were rampant over the weekend, with the stock answer to the query, "How's the fishing?" being "Fine, they were fresh" still holding good. At least it got a

Fire in Dump Keeps Firemen Busy Five Hours

A stubborn fire in the local city dump which burned down several feet and spread over a considerable area caused firemen a five-hour tussle with hose Sunday afternoon. The fire in the first dump fire of the season and firemen hope it will be the last.

Fire Chief Harold Tyson was considerably irked regarding the all afternoon fight necessary to extinguish the fire at the dump. Visualizing a recurrence of the many dump fires of other years, the chief stated there should be something done to prevent the frequency of fires at the local garbage dump.

"It is not that there is any danger from the fire," stated the chief, "but the fires are such a day on the dump and do no harm, but it is the smoke which residents of the district object to."

Right Wor. Bro. Carl D. Crosby, D.D.G.M., noted that Masons were about to build a new temple and asked within its four walls if members would not endeavor to build a temple of humanity, based on the solid foundations of brotherly love, relief and truth, upheld by the pillars of wisdom, strength and beauty.

COLLEGIATE NEWS

Assembly

Wednesday's assembly was made exciting by election speeches. All the candidates made an excellent showing. It is unfortunate they could not all have been winners. However B.C.I. has its new 1950-51 council. Whether wise choices were made or not remains to be seen. It will be hard to beat the past student council's reputation.

Practice for cadets is in full swing these spring like days and everyone is saying "left, right, left right" as they walk along. Belleville Collegiate is aiming for the honor of being the best cadet corps in the province this year. This is highly possible since we came third last year.

The spring formal was a definite success. Everything had been planned to perfection to give an enjoyable time. The gym was decorated as a fair. Betty Seldon is to be commended on her supervision of the decorating. It was truly gay and effective.

Radio Club—This Thursday marks the end of the radio program "Hi Time" for this school year. On behalf of the students I wish to thank the club for the news and talent they have given us for the past year.

Glee Club — Members are proudly displaying the smart cresta they received last week. They look "tres chic."

The Girls' Athletic Society is receiving orders for school crests and school blazers. If you are smart girls, you'll grab for the chance to display the emblems signifying you belong to B.C.I.

The fireworks are over, the smoke cleared away and a new student council is ready to take over next year "Bonne chance" to our new student council.

Things are shaping up in the cadet world as the big day drawn near. Everyone is working hard to make this inspection the best ever.

Sports

What are girls doing in P.T. these days? Playing ball Nope. Playing basketball? Nope. Playing speedball? Nope. They're practising for field day! You should see Joyce Firth go over that high jump. She runs sightly down the field leaps into the air catches her foot on the rope and falls flat on your face. Ah, such grace. (I should talk.)

The five-mile race is coming up this Wednesday. This exciting race starts from the campus at 4 o'clock. For the contest of the year be at B.C.I. on May 3rd.

By the way cadet inspection will be on May the 12th instead of May the 5th as I reported last week.

General Walk-Out of Industrial Workers May Result From Strike

Trenton (Special) — A general shut-down of the industries in Trenton and district may result from the strike at the Downs Coulter plant in Trenton. This was revealed at a meeting called by Local 105 AFL Textile Workers Union held Sunday night in the Queensway Hotel.

Practically every industry in Trenton and district was represented at the meeting which was held in an attempt to win their support in the union's struggle to receive a wage increase and better working conditions.

Says Action Needed

The officials of the various unions agreed that a general walk-out should be called if necessary to win the textile dispute. "Our companies have threatened to fire us if we give any individual support but they most certainly cannot fire us all if we walk out in sympathy," said a spokesman from the Dominion Tar and Chemical Co., one of the largest plants in Trenton.

AFL organizer, Val Bjaranson, said that Trenton was in the lowest paid district in Canada. "When you are coming east from Toronto you hit the low-paid district just as you pass Oshawa. There is no excuse for poverty, why the unions here in Trenton cannot get together and fight to raise the working standards to equal that of the rest of the Canada," said Bjaranson.

The hidden microphones which were discovered during a union meeting in a room adjoining the police station two weeks ago, were termed by Mr. Bjaranson as a deliberate conspiracy against our democratic rights and freedom of speech." Wide-spread interest across Canada has resulted in the flooding of wires and phones. Bjaranson announced that the microphone business had been placed into the hands of the Dominion Government at Ottawa. Bjaranson said union officials rapped the Trenton police force for their part in the escorting of workers back to the Downs Coulter plant on April 10th. "We need not be afraid of a few boys in blue," said Bjaranson, "most of us here have been boys in khaki and know how to handle ourselves."

A worker at the Creosote plant said: "They call us communists, well if a communist is a man who wants to provide a decent living for his wife and children, then that is what I am.

Douglas Tyrer of the United Electrical Workers Union in Kingston who attended the meeting stated that in his opinion the Trenton police had used every-

Three Hours Needed To Fight Grass Fire

Trenton (Special) —Trenton firemen were called out Sunday afternoon to extinguish a grass fire north of Mt. Evergreen Cemetery.

Fire Chief Harry Fillon stated that the fire swept over at least one square mile of ground. Extra fire-fighting equipment was brought in by the RCAF from the Trenton air station.

Although firemen were at the scene shortly after the alarm was sounded, the fire was not completely brought under control until 5.30 Sunday evening.

The fire is believed to have been started by a target wire when it was shot loose from a plane. The wire which is attached to the tail of a plane to carry a target through the air to be used for target practice is said to have been shot off the plane and fallen across the high tension wires by the No. 1 power plant just north of Trenton.

thing in the book to hinder the union, Tyrer said that the only solution was to organize all tradeunionists in the district to back up the Trenton union to the full extent.

May Call Emergency Meetings

All of the union officials present at the meeting stated that they would call emergency meetings to see what could be done to aid the textile union both financially and physically.

Mr. Thomas Reese of the Allied Labor Council in Belleville was one of the guest speakers for the meeting. Mr. Reese said that the council would continue to give their support as they had always done in the past. "It was 11 weeks before the Trades and Labor Council in Trenton made any move to help you," said Mr. Reese Our council has helped you from the first of the strike, and you have always received generous donations whenever you came to Belleville."

In closing the meeting Mr. Bjaranson said "we have been on strike for 18 1-2 weeks now. We have fought under the most difficult situations imaginable and we have had to buck unfair tactics used by those who are supposed to uphold justice but who have destroyed it. However, I know that if we stick together and receive the support that has been promised us here tonight that we will win."

The number of fires and the total loss and insurance loss were all lower than in the same period of last year. Number of fires was 3,460 as against 5,049, the total loss $4,875,249 as against $6,318,467, while the insurance loss was $3,797,285 in 1950 as compared with $5,165,884 in the previous year's first quarter.

The largest loss in property destroyed so far this year was in the farm risks with a total loss of $761,497 while the next largest loss was in the contents of retail stores and office buildings.

In protected brick dwellings were 1,204 fires for a loss of $446,121. Protected frame dwellings had 1,269 fires with a total loss of $630,427. Unprotected brick and frame dwellings suffered a total loss of $157,904.

Fires in retail stores and office buildings only caused a loss of $49,000.

Hotel losses were small in comparison, on the buildings only $33,220 and on contents in 17 fires $111,176.

Classification of clauses shows that there were 1,120 fires causing a loss of $250,000 due to smoking. Stoves and furnaces were given as the cause of the greatest total loss as a group $783,961.

The quarterly report of the Fire Marshall's Department shows that these officials never request nor participate in false alarms which take fire apparatus from fire halls where they might be needed and which exposes apparatus and men to danger on the highways. The reason is that an adequate test of the dependability of the quickness with which an answer to an alarm can be judged can be made from the time it takes the apparatus properly manned to roll its front-wheels out of the front door of the hall, says the quarterly report. The report adds "our paramount age is seen in testing how fast the apparatus may travel to some fire alarm box, particularly as traffic conditions may vary from hour to hour and day to day in accordance with the density of traffic, the weather and the conditions of the streets.

A valuable film picture library is being built up for loan to municipal fire departments and other responsible groups interested in fire safety and for use of the Fire Marshall's office.

Motion pictures can be valuable adjunct to the training of firemen. Movies are being used in many ways and none more effective than in the work of training members of the force so that they may do the most effective work.

HEROISM

There are many deeds of heroism performed which find their way into the press and none more striking than that of the Tennessee farmer who had got out of his car on a mountain road to watch the sunrise and acted as a human brake to prevent the car from rolling. He threw himself beneath and acted as a brake. He first tried to stop the rolling of the car but finding that fail he tried to stop the machine rolling. He was run over by one wheel and acted as a brake for about five minutes while his wife secured aid.

THE GLOVED HAND

If you ever meet a woman and get into a situation where the two of you are shaking hands, you will find that she may say all sorts of peculiar things, but one thing she will not say, "Please excuse my gloves." This phrase is used by men only. Women never apologize for wearing a glove. If they have gloves on, they seldom try to bare their right hand for a shake.

Men have a great job of trying to get the glove off their handshaking hand. They usually don't quite get the glove off. So then they say, "Please excuse my glove." It gives them something to say, something definite and socially safe to say. The phrase is much safer, for instance than "How are you?" when a further glance at the glove of the person at the other end of the handshake is in a bad way indeed. Some men put real emotion into "Please excuse my glove," sounding almost as though they were saying something new as they grin with relief at having the glittering bon mot ready.

At this time of year, however, men begin to find themselves and bracing themselves for a few words of conversation, and not having a glove to get fretting off and therefore not being able to apologize about it. When men became tongue-tied in the Spring it used to be thought that it was love, but now it is seen that they just haven't anything to say when caught without gloves.—Printed Word.

Coolness and absence of heat and haste indicate fine qualities. A gentleman makes no noise; a lady is serene.—Emerson.

MAY DAY

I wonder if in England still
They greet the month of May,
As was the custom long ago,
When maids were gay.
Does every cabble deck his horse with primrose—tall and mane—
To show that he is glad to see the merry month again?

In school yards are the Maypoles raised, with pretty ribbons strung,
And do the children dance them round as joyful songs are sung?

Once happy were all English hearts when May with blossoms came,
And though the world's in trouble now I hope it's still the same.

Today the lovely May arriver
With flowers in her hair.
The hawthorne will be red with bloom, but will the song be there?
Will there be twinkles in the eyes and smiles for May to see,
And will her welcome be as gay as once it used to be?

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

OF VIPERS AND VITTLES

At Lindy's the other night, after the usual talk of mice, men, dearth and Texas, the conversation got around to the subject of food.

"Present company excepted," said a vaudeville agent, "who's the biggest heel you've been out?"

"My candidate," said Ken Murray, "is that guy in San Antonio who put ground glass in his wife's cornflakes when she complained she wasn't getting enough roughage."

"Kid stuff," said Milton Berle. "My vot egoes to Harry Ness, a seven-ply heel that the O'Sullivan people would give their last peanut for."

"Harry Ness?" I said. "What orphan asylum did he burn down?"

Well, according to Berle, Harry Ness (not real name, but pretty close) was a hoofer who occasionally played the borscht circuit, and who, when he did, was generally paid off in borscht. In spite of which, he seldom went hungry, and for this he had his never-working wife, Evie, to thank.

Evie wasn't much to look at, but she was devoted to the hoofer and didn't mind tuning a switchboard to keep him in vim and vigor. Nevertheless, though Ness would have starved to death, famine without her, Harry was always griping at her. "Can't you do something about that hair?" he would say after she had brought home the bacon and fried it for him.

The biggest beef, however, was about her cooking. To hear him tell it, she was the worst cook who ever left a fingerprint on a can of beans.

One occasion, after sagging on a spinach pie Evie had left for his lunch, the hoofer set out to tell the rounds of the booking offices, and at one of them he met a girl named Flossie, a good ballet dancer named Zelda who was flat nowhere but in the feet. When she explained she was looking for a new partner, he gave her to understand her worries were over.

After a few weeks of rehearsal, the lotchey-

MacKenzie's Column:

Britain is Key European Country In World Plan

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The British Labor government's fight for life, with a bare majority of four votes over its combination opposition in the House of Commons, is about as much of a nerve strain for Allied onlookers as for the participants.

Britain is the key European country in the western world's program of defence against communist aggression. Thus the stability of her government is of deep concern to her allies.

One hastens to add that there is no reason to suppose the three parties (Labor, Conservative and Liberal) couldn't stand shoulder to shoulder in a national emergency. Britain has demonstrated that characteristic time often to leave room for doubt. However, a government which is dealing with great international issues, as well as a grave domestic economic crisis, needs freedom from political humdrum.

Twice last week the government experienced defeat by victory on two issues with margins of only five votes in each case.

Fine Sounding-Board

The Times of London (Independent Conservative leanings) said this drama "could not have been staged better," and even ridiculous state of affairs in which sudden illness or a heavy snowstorm can bring about the downfall of His Majesty's government."

Of course former Prime Minister Winston Churchill, leader of the Conservatives, could not be expected to bail the Socialist government out, but the Commons is a fine political sounding-board.

Still, there are close observers who doubt that Churchill really wants to see the Attlee government brought down now. That would mean another general election.

The fact remains, though, that the Attlee brand of bee-pee government can hardly be long.

The vote on Monday night last until October when it is due to name the board which will supervise the nationalization of the great steel industry. This is a highly-controversial issue and the Socialist regime might fall over it.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

INTERESTED

I have noted that those who have the largest number of interests to engage their minds and bodies are the ones the happiest, but the most creative and useful. People who have few interests or but one objective in life usually burn themselves out before attaining many years that might have been theirs to enjoy.

People with many interests are never dull ones to be around. Also they are alive, and their personalities are magnetic. People who have learned to furnish their minds with a well rounded and balanced diet, for example, always live healthier and longer lives. The mind, being one of the greatest life overseer, influences the life of the bodies of our far more than we ever realize. As has been said: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

With plenty to do, and a variety of interests to engage our time, worry, with all its destructive power, finds it difficult to make a lodging in the mind. In this manner fear is crowded out. But there are other chain mail bustle behind the saddle to protect the horse from a counter kick. Many of the horses head fitted a kind of helmet, with face-plate through which his eyes looked out.

The prince, who weighed about 104 pounds, counting his finger rings and gold cigarette holder, said that his ancestors had left precise records of his father's steeds. All, of course were stallions that were ridden in battle. The best of these were bred in Flanders, originally, but were bred in Italy over many centuries of the age of chivalry for size, power, obedience and fury in the charge. A good fighting prince would have five or six of these great brewery horses to take into battle with him; and he would wear out one after another in the progress of a campaign.

Then some agitator invented gunpowder and threw up walls. From the prince's villa, we went out and got back into our taxis and rolled on up the street.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

MUSIC OUT OF SORROW

Anyone who has ever listened to the singing of Brahms' Requiem realizes that here is one of the great masterpieces of music.

Brahms was probably influenced to write this superb composition by the death of his dear friend Robert Schumann. But the immediate reason why he wrote it was because he was filled with a sense of sadness over the death of his mother. She had lived a most unhappy life. She was a cripple and her husband early in their married life had come to despise her and had cast her out. She pinned all her hopes on her gifted son, and his care and thoughtfulness regarding her were beautiful indeed to behold.

No doubt there was a noble little woman often felt that her life was a failure. Deserted, despised and lonely—she knew the bitterness of unhappiness. But she was the mother of one of humanity's great geniuses. Furthermore, it was her pathetic loneliness and physical disability which did much to stimulate in Brahms those fine qualities which later burst forth in music of incomparable beauty. The words with which the Requiem open express the suffering and triumphs of this devoted woman. "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. They that weep in tears shall reap in joy."

WHAT WILL THE BARTENDER THINK?

In the Jour. of Clinical Psychopathology Dr. Robert . Seliger opines that "perhaps we should change the prevailing social attitude about heavy social drinking, especially during the drinking, so that instead of being considered obligatory, smart . . . even the waiter would look astonished or disapproving."

Social drinkers, light or heavy, afternoon or evening, are nearly as concerned about what the waiter or the bartender thinks as they are about what their drinking companions think. What somebody else thinks or what the somebody character thinks somebody else will, probably when a drinker out of many a young person who, with just a little better education, might enjoy a happier life as a teetotaler.

Lest any light, medium or heavy drinker utter a hackneyed smartcrack at this, I'll say right here that aside from the question of what the waiter, the bartender or other person in authority would think, inferiority feeling is a cause a great deal of drinking. As one alcoholic expressed it, "I drink because I want to feel better."

Any one, young, middle aged or elderly, who has mental health feels good and has no need of or desire for any kind of stimulant, sedative, narcotic or even synthetic bracer or "tonic" or cheer. The growing evil of alcohol drinking should, but does not seem to, give physicians and others concerned about the welfare of the nation a good deal of thinking.

The reason why a great many Americans don't feel as good as they would like to is that although they may have no present ailment or complaint, is that they do have underlying physical inferiority. This keeps them always more or less conscious of physical inferiority in one respect or another. It is this inferiority feeling that makes them "want to feel better"—and a drink or even a cocktail, highball or a shot of the narcotic, alcohol, in any-form numbs or removes that sense of the inferiority for the time being. So the damn fools take readily to "social drinking."

No one can question the fact that alcohol is good for some but in any does acts as a depressant and a narcotic.

Instead of making one "feel better" it merely makes one less conscious of whatever weakness, defect or disability onh happens to have, for an hour perhaps. When this brief respite from in-

KILLED ON 'SCRAMBLER'

Atlanta, May 1 — (AP) — One man was killed and four girls were hurt when small cars on a "scrambler" ride at Lakewood amusement park went out of control Sunday. Police quoted a passenger, who gave his name, Campbell, as saying the little cars went in every direction." Normally, they go in opposite directions and miss each other by safe margins.

CHALLENGES TITLE

Manila, May 1 — (AP)—The Philippines House of Representatives has challenged Britain's title to North Borneo. The House adopted a resolution authorizing President Quirino to start out diplomatic negotiations with Britain for return of North Borneo to the Filipino heirs of the Sultan of Sulu, who ceded it to the Philippines when British angered the Spanish empire-wide territory in June, 1903.

STIRLING

Oddfellows Mark 131st Anniversary

Stirling—Commemorating the 131st anniversary of the founding of the order the members of the various branches of Oddfellows in Stirling and visiting brethren attended divine worship in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Rev. W. H. V. Walker delivered the message of the day.

Led by the Stirling Citizens' Band the members of Stirling Lodge No. 238, Stirling Encampment No. 80 and Bellevue Canton No. 8 together with a large number of visiting brethren from Trenton, Campbellford, Tweed, Springbrook and Madoc, paraded from their lodge room on Front St. At the church they were joined by members of Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211 who occupied the front pews of the church. Altogether there were close to one hundred and fifty members of the order present.

Among the guests were Mrs. Isabel Carr, Grand President of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario, Mrs. Eva Turvey Inside Guardian of the Assembly and Mrs. Hilda McGowan District Deputy President.

The Jericho Road is the road of Christian love in action stated Rev. Walker. It is the road of friendship and of compassion. Jesus travelled the Jericho Road and is our great example. When He saw the multitudes He was moved with compassion on them because they were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd.

The Rebekah assembly spoke briefly and R. E. Fox Grand Marshal of the Grand Encampment read the Scripture lesson. Spiritual music by the choir included a solo "Trust in Him" by Miss Marilyn Eggleton and when "I Was Glad" in which Misses Mary Agnes Fox and Marilyn Eggleton sang the duet parts and a solo "Like As A Father," by Wm Reynolds. Mrs. R. H. Williams presided at the console of the organ throughout the service. Meeting at St. Paul's

The regular meeting of St. Paul's United Church Young Married Club was held in the church on Wednesday evening. President David Duffin opened the meeting followed by a hymn and prayer by Rev. A. E. Baker. The treasurer's report was given by Mr. Harold Wells which showed a balance of $58.75 from the proceeds of the play presented by the Eggleton Young People.

The president suggested that the club undertake a definite project and after some discussion it was decided that a committee composed of Messrs. Harold Wells, and Dr. Cornett investigate the cost of replacing the floor in the Sunday school room.

Following the business portion of the meeting a hymn "What A Friend We Have in Jesus" was sung. The Guest speaker for the evening was Mr. Earl McMaster of Ivanhoe who gave a most interesting resume of his trip to Mexico and across the western states to California and at the conclusion of his talk he showed fine films depicting the various places he visited and these were very much enjoyed by all.

Harold Wells moved a very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. McMaster after which Rev. Baker conducted a few short contests. Refreshments were served by members of group three. Mr. Charlie Davidson expressed a vote of thanks to the host and hostess Ray and Hilda Ross for a very fine program.

Swordfish Holes Aussie Surfboat

Sydney, Australia, — (CP)— When five lifesavers from the North Bondi Surf Club here were off Crowdy Head, 300 miles north of Sydney, a swordfish charged their 30-foot boat and made a hole in it. They plugged the hole with an old sock.

The lifesavers reached Coolangatta, Queensland, after an openboat voyage of 600 miles, made, in 27 days. They had a small sail but rowed most of the way. After competing in a surf carnival at Coolangatta they rowed on to Brisbane, another 100 miles.

Smartness Brings Death to 'Alfred'

London —(CP)—Asked a voice on the telephone: "Can you preserve Alfred?"

Said a spokesman for a Piccadilly firm of taxidermists, discussing the odd order:

"He talked as if I could have no doubt to whom he was referring. I even thought it might be a local celebrity by the confidential way he kept referring to Alfred."

The celebrity, it turned out, was a gorilla in a Bristol zoo, where the name Alfred meant only one thing.

The taxidermists weren't too keen at first. They had six year's work on hand, including the job of stuffing more than 100 wild beasts such as elephants, giraffes and the occasional rhinoceros.

"But because of Alfred's local significance we decided to do it in a rush job, and today he is back in Bristol, looking very life-like," said the spokesman for the Piccadilly firm of which had been in business for 150 years.

Authorities decided that Alfred died because he was too intelligent.

"Yes, intelligent," said the spokesman, "this fearsome fellow learned to connect the sound of planes with falling bombs. One day, when a plane flew over his cage, he was so scared that he had a heart attack and died."

Tipplers Smilmg In South Africa

Johannesburg, South Africa— (CP)— South Africa's whisky drought is being relieved by a drink which is prepared locally. Its base is a concentrate imported from Holland, but it is blended and broken down with spirit in the Union.

Regulations do not permit the new drink to be called "whisky," but its base and name stores it is offered as a substitute by its trade-name when Scotch is not available. It has been widely accepted and customers regard it as "the next best thing" to Scotch.

Trophy 30 Years, Cannon Blows Up

Birmingham, England—(CP)— One of the trophies of the First World War, a 76mm. German cannon now a plaything of children for 30 years as it stood outside a Birmingham school.

In 1938 it was removed to a scrap yard.

The gun exploded.

There had been a live shell in it for 30 years.

Derrick suffered burns about the eyes.

WEDDINGS

WILLIAMSON—CLARKE

"Bonnie Doon Farm", Napanee, was the setting for a pretty wedding on Saturday, April 29th., at 11:00 a.m. when Lois Lennor Clarke, Napanee, Ontario, niece of Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. William Douglas Graham, Napanee, became the bride of Gordon Douglas Williamson, Belleville, Ontario, son of Mr. Thomas Norman Williamson, Belleville, and Mrs. Lillian Williamson. The wedding music was played by Mrs. H. D. Wightman, of Napanee.

'Adults and A Mature Mind' Topic of Discussion by Guild

The Women's Guild of Tabernacle Church met at the home of Mrs. M. F. Buck, Chatham Street. Miss Jean Sinclair conducted the devotional period on the theme "There is Work To Do".

During the business period, it was decided to make a donation to U.N.I.C.E.F. in June instead of sending the customary Individual food parcels. The May meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. A. Wella, Geddes Street. The subject for discussion will be "Can We Guarantee Freedom and Human Rights in Canada?"

Miss K. Daly presented the topic dealing with adults and a mature mind first reviewing the previous month's study, by a few leading questions—Who are the most dangerous members of society? Grown ups whose powers of influence are adult but whose motives and responses are infantile. Some signs of immaturity are, indifference to world affairs, not being interested in anything but animal survival, voting without discovering what is at stake, and ceasing to be a learner.

It is necessary for individuals to develop a sense of responsibility, first in the home, then in the school, immediate surroundings, your city, province, country and the world at large.

Stresses Manner of Speech

Every person should be able to say what he wants to say with confidence, precision, beauty and a sense of awareness that he is putting in the situation. This is important as speech is our most used means of communication.

Sympathy is the power to see yourself as one another does, and to do unto others, as you would have them do unto you.

A teacher who carries personal angers into the classroom, and a preacher who uses the pulpit works only for his own riding were given as examples of people whose world has not become large enough.

Modern are many practices and institutions that affect development. In Germany the Mad Philosopher Nietzsche influenced students, his followers spoke without weight or mercy and glibly referred to Jesus' teachings as slave morality. They proclaimed a superman beyond good and evil, hard, heroic, and fearless. Others taught the superiority of one race —the German. This led to the beginning of Anti-Jewish views. Darwin's theory of the survival of the fittest used to mean that those who could not compete in the struggle were nature's unfit and sympathy was wasted on them. He overemphasized the animal side of human nature.

Hitler's racial enlightment one class—one portion of humanity plitted against all others, concentrated on its own advantages not seeing the needs and problems of any other group.

Four Influences

There are four great influences at work constantly shaping our character—newspapers, radio, movies, and advertising. Is today's newspaper reader made wiser? What are most readers interested in? Catastrophes, murders, wrecks, scandals and fights? Yet there are many good articles, scientific, religious, educational and editorial. They expose many evils and fight for human decencies. Radio— Is the listening public prepared to make more mature responses to human situations? Most people prefer just to be entertained, the most popular being the type that arouses the emotion and does not tax the mind. There is much great music and drama available. Advertising—We are constantly being invited to buy something. It would appear that the majority of our problems arise because of the lack of the right toothpaste, cold cream, or face powder.

All four influences would provide whatever the average person wants, if and when we all want maturity, they will no doubt give it.

Many parent and teacher groups are raising objections to the current movies and radio programs. Students are being taught to evaluate books, papers, motion pictures etc.

Frightened by Problems

Too many people avoid thinking about international problems because they appear too complex and frightening. There is a feeling of helplessness abroad, which is not the sign of a mature mind. There should be more groups meeting to study the problems of our times. Have we any workable plans for peace and reconstruction? Only a small proportion of the population are well informed on world affairs.

Man matures as he gains knowledge enough to handle with competent understanding the situation in which he finds himself, and to the extent that he has the habits and means of gaining further knowledge as he needs it.

There is less tyranny of one sex over another. Men are less able to satisfy by force the egonificance by childish forms of domination. Women are more able to develop full individual powers. They should be able to develop an enriched companionship in which the maturity of each will be encouraged.

Has Artful Character

Most jobs affect the character of the person performing them. It directs the ambition and determines the respect accorded friends and enemies. There are four basic fears in our lives— Fear of losing our job, of not making a good impression, of not being liked by the right people, and of not being invited to the right places.

The home is a large influence on our lives. In these days of crowded housing many are brought up in undesirable surroundings. Home is a place for growing, so the adults also must keep growing. It can be made into a place where we learn not only the ways but the rewards of genuine maturity. If parents are eager to learn, the children will also be eager to learn. As individuals we must aim at a higher more enticing image of adulthood.

Wm. Sheldon said "The human mind at 40 is commonly vulgar, smug, deadened and waste its hours like blighted trees that died in the promising spring. We must shape a new image by our development, the way we meet situations at home and at work.

It is important for an adult to lead himself learn and soul to something beyond his own self satisfaction. Adults should continue a plan for the growth of their mind. They should demand an education that recognizes their entrance into a new and uniquely significant stage of life experience. Children and adolescents cannot experience the mature insight of adulthood. They can only prepare for it. Adulthood is the significant period toward which life heads.

Mr. Timmons is a graduate of Normal School and of Queen's University and was a Belleville resident for a number of years, before he was stricken with blindness. Mr. Timmons spoke of the Institute as a rehabilitation service organization for the blind and gave an interesting account of all phases of the work. The purpose of which is to become as nearly self-sufficient as possible. To this end they are taught handicrafts, how to use the typewriter, braille, also practice in finding their way around the house and doing housework.

All field secretaries throughout Canada are blind persons.

Social needs are also attended to, bowling groups are formed. Also games are played. These include cribbage, bridge, checkers, chess etc. Summer camps are held. One at Ancaster near Hamilton had an enrollment of 75 blind people and a 75-year-old blind man learned to swim.

Mr. Timmons also told of the talking book service and other aids supplied by the Institute.

Mrs. Rollins thanked the speaker for his wonderful exposition of the work of the institute.

After the program the ladies were invited to stay for a cup of tea and a social half hour.

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

It would be unchivalrous for anyone talking about ham not to pay tribute to the present queen of the hog world.

Her name is Ringold Lady Dora, and she enjoys her title by virtue of the fact that she is the most prolific of all pure bred sows in America. To date Lady Dora has given birth to 129 pigs and raised 105 of them to weaning age—an achievement any mother might envy.

The present queen reigns in the pig pens of Meadowbrook Farms, Sullivan, Indiana.

High pig production for many months now has made it possible to prepare economical meals from almost any form of pork, fresh or smoked.

Sliced cooked harm which you can buy in any grocery or delicatessen store is the base for the casserole dish below. To save labor, use frozen spinach which eliminates trimming and 6 washings and any fresh vegetable. As a finesauce sauce, used canned condensed chicken soup. To bake this dish use an earthenware or glass casserole that can be brought directly to the table while the food is piping hot.

Ham and Spinach Casserole Serves 4.

Melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine in a saucepan. Add 1 tablespoons finely chopped onion. Simmer slowly until onion turns yellow. Be sure flame is low or onions will char easily. Remove from flame.

Add 1 can condensed chicken soup and 1-2 cup milk. Return to a slow flame and bring to a boil slowly.

Add 1-2 pound sliced boiled ham, cut into 1 inch square pieces. If you want a very generous portion of meat use 3-4 pound of ham.

Pare and core 2 large Rome Beauty baking apples or any sweet boxed apple. Cut into 1-2 inch thick crosswise slices. Arrange apple slices over ham mixture. Sprinkle apples lightly with cinnamon and sugar.

Place in a moderate over 375 degrees for 30 minutes or until apples are tender.

Girl Guide Activities

At this meeting plans will be finally made for the annual Spring Tea of the local association which is being held this year at the home of Mrs J. H. Forrester, 63 Bridge St. East. This tea is one effort on the port of the local association to raise funds which are used where needed in Guiding and the co-operation of the public is asked. Cake, pie and other articles of this at a later date.

4th Belleville Brownie Pack: The Pack will be made into two Guides from Company 7 Shirley Terpe and Frances Gordon who are working for their first class badges have been coming every week to teach the Brownies scamphore. They have been a great help to Pixie Owl, who has been extra busy as Tawnie Townson was away for several meetings. Also thanks go to Mrs. Fisher, the mother of one of the Brownies who helped at one meeting. There are 13 new Tweenies all working hard to learn how to be Brownies. Two Brownies were enrolled in March, Barbara McMillan and Lenore Laughlin. The Brownies have been learning how to darn and tie knots and some have been tested in buttons, skipping, flag, and balance. The pack had a disappointment over Cookie Day. Both Brown Owl and Tawnie had to be out of town for the weekend and there was no one to take charge for the Pack Three enterprising Brownies went out and made $3 and thanks go to Brown Owl Bell of Pack five who looked after them as well as her own big pack.

The next notch will be busy with testing and some surprises, being planned, be sure to attend all meetings Brownies.

FARM SINKS

This caved-in section of a 30-acre farm is viewed sadly by Mrs. Leo Gudyk, wife of a Ukrainian farmer in the Espanola district of Northern Ontario about 30 miles west of Sudbury. During the last few weeks, almost all the land the elderly couple cleared from the bush 34 years ago has sunk, in some places as much as 65 feet. The sinking is believed caused by erosion from an underground stream. Advised to vacate their home, Mr. and Mrs. Gudyk say they have no place to go. — (CP Photo.)

U.S. May Stage New Atom Tests in Pacific Ocean

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Washington, — (CP) — Indica- one of another atomic-weapons t this summer seem to be in

This is true literally, because on April until around August, evailing winds at the testing ronde at Eniwetok Atoll, fac t in the Pacific, move in a vorable western direction. An nderly wind might push radio tive clouds across Hawaii. Therefore summer seems to be best time for such experi- ents.

Whether a hydrogen bomb ight be ready for a test in the ext few months, along with im- roved atomic bombs, is a matter f speculation. There have been nverified conjectures that the overnment already may have some hydrogen bomb tests a minor way.

But some atomic experts have aid it would take at least a ew or two to develop H-bombs nd some even have suggested we ay not succeed in perfecting hem.

Besides the factor of favorable eeks at this time of year, there are other signs that an atomic test may be coming up at Eniwetok.

Without mentioning dates, the United States Atomic Energy Commission and defence depart- ment advised President Truman last November that they were planning a new round of tests. Since the war, there have been only two, one at Bikini Atoll in 1946 and one at Eniwetok in 1948, so the time may be about ripe for number 3.

A contract has been let for repairing and improving techni- cal facilities at the Eniwetok proving grounds, obviously to get ready for something. An army construction force recently was assigned to help with the work and a joint force, commanded by Lt. Gen. E. R. Quesada of the air force, has been set up to man- age the next tests.

Evidently some U. S. ships are moving to Eniwetok. The "Elder," a small naval vessel which caught fire and got in trouble recently, is a buoy-marker layer that was Eniwetok bound.

Presumably it was going to drop new or additional buoys to mark the safe channels into the area around Eniwetok where the United States has posted "keep out" warnings.

This forbidden area, roughly 150 by 200 miles, was blocked off at the start of 1946, when word was passed that it was a danger zone, and only persons authorized by the government to take part in experiments at Eniwetok would be welcome.

But despite such precautions, and although government author- ities are keeping a strict silence about details of tests, military officials believe Russia will man- age to find out about new atomic experiments.

And if the Russians do get a line on the next tests, authorities here fully expect them to take up patrol stations this side of the Marshall Islands, where Eniwetok is located, to check on ships out- bound from this country.

Even if they stationed sub- marines far outside the danger zone, they still might be able to pick up scientifically valuable information or clues with seismo- graphic or radiological recording instruments, or with balloons sent into the upper air to take radio- logical readings.

They might even get something out of visual checks, since radio- active clouds at Bikini were visi- ble through polaroid glasses for several hours at distances of 30 to 40 miles or more.

Radio Links Regina With Remote North

Prince Albert—(CP)—The vast "unknown" northland of Sask- atchewan now is only as far away as the telephone.

A vast radio network links the northerly three-fifths of the pro- vince to officials of the forestry and fisheries departments in Re- gina.

The 144 station government network—one of the biggest in the Dominion—has removed one of the major deterents to devel- opment of the once-isolated area. No longer do timber, prospec- pector and forest ranger dis- appear for weeks and months.

In fire-lookout towers, in field officers' cabins, at the edge of a forest blaze, in a canoe knifing down the river, in a plane speed- ing on a mercy mission or a car rushing supplies to fire-fighters, the crackle of radio voices is only a moment away.

It is a far cry from the days of hand-operated—and often un- reliable—telephone and heavy transmitters of 25 years ago. Com- munications now are as mobile as the people who make their living flitting through forest and mus- keg, river and lake.

The change began when Ron Hook, now head of Saskatch- ewan's communication system, joined the department of natural resources in 1936.

"They had about 22 transmit- ters and receivers then," he re- calls. "Compared with today's equipment they are like the old Red River wagons and present- day automobiles."

Now the province builds all its own non-land-assigned radio equipment, Mr. Hook is working on an even-smaller set suitable for smoke-jumpers, woodland pa- trols, and timber cruisers.

The system comprises regional networks feeding through a dis- trict centre. Four districts near Prince Albert work through Meadow Lake, Hudson Bay, La Ronge and Prince Albert. With this breakdown they operate on a relatively-small power out- put. The centres relay infor- mation through Prince Albert.

At present Mr. Hook and his aides are busy rigging additional two-way equipment for coming fire season. It too will work through Prince Albert.

Sometimes the air-waves carry messages of importance to Hook's own staff—as the time when a technical assistant perched in a remote fire tower learned he was the father of twins. And there is the odd humorous incident too.

Mr. Hook tells of one message that still gives him a chuckle.

Addressed to the administrator of northern education, it read: "School to be closed. On fish haul."

The officials were in a flap, thinking the teacher had, aban- doned his charges to go fishing.

A checkup, however revealed that it should have read: "School to be closed. Unofficial."

Saskatchewan Serves Remote Areas by Air

Prince Albert, Sask.—(CP)— Since its inauguration August 15, the Saskatchewan Government Airways has grown from a couple of small planes on forest patrol work to 17 aircraft serving every settlement in the northern section of the province.

The airways energetic manager, Floyd Glass, said it was realized that if the north was going to de- velop at all, residents had to have faster means of travel than just canoe or dog team. The govern- ment always provided that ser- vice by operating scheduled flights on four routes to every settlement.

Government is only a small part of the airways' operations. It is licensed by the Air Transport Board for charter service from bases at Prince Albert, La Ronge and Goldfields. Any one of the scheduled flights may be inter- rupted at a licensed base for the plane to take men and freight of all kinds to the most inaccessible spots.

It has been known for a flight to take a prospecting party clear across the Barren Lands almost to the Arctic Ocean.

When Mr. Glass first took off in his plane to plan the routes and the service, he had no fields and actually was going into the un- known. Today, he has a group of former R. C. A. F. pilots and engineers under his control whose equal for the work they do "can't be found anywhere."

Versatile Pilots

The pilots are called upon to take up any one of the aircraft —A Norseman, Beaver, Stinson, or Canso— and not one plane has yet been involved in a serious accident.

In addition to flying passengers, mail and freight into the various settlements, they engage in for- est patrol work, aerial photo- graphy and fish-spotting work. They also fly in supplies for schools, hospitals and transport officials.

The government airways, in addition to its flying activities, operates here the only com- mercial aircraft overhaul shops between Winnipeg and Ed- monton. The shops can handle aircraft engines up to 900 horse- power and can build airframes up to 22,000 pounds. Planes from Churchill and other northern Manitoba points, the Keewatin and northern Alberta come to the Prince Albert shop for overhaul and repair.

The airways also is a boon to the tourist trade. Fishing and hunting parties are continually being flown into northern areas, adding many tourist-dollars to the provinces coffers.

Two Boy Scouts Drown as Canoe Is Overturned

(By The Canadian Press)

Seven fatalities, including a double drowning at Almonte, were reported in Ontario during the weekend a Canadian Press survey showed today.

Besides the drownings the other deaths were caused by a fall from a tractor, an accidental shooting, a planing-mill mishap and two traffic accidents.

Harold McGrath, 15, and John J. Lyons, 14, were drowned when their canoe overturned, throwing them into the near-freezing wa- ters of the Mississippi River. They were on a boating expedition with eight other members of their Scout troop.

Alphonse Bezaire was killed in a fall from his tractor near Wind- sor while Donald Pisto, 12, was accidentally shot by his father with a .22 calibre rifle at Fort Erie. Norman Smith, 62, a pla- mill employee at Kincardine, was killed when the pulley he was testing snapped, fracturing his skull.

The traffic victims were— Wladyslaw Huduch, 30-year-old Polish immigrant, at Simcoe, and Grant Robinson, 24, near Streets- ville.

SENTENCED AT BELLEVILLE

Sudbury, May 1. (CP)—John J. Broadbent, who escaped from the Burwash Industrial farm near here Friday, was recaptured Sat- urday, a few miles distant. Broad- bent was sentenced at Belleville last Nov. 18, to six months on a charge of shopbreaking.

NZ Bird Watcher Lives Like Hermit

By J. C. GRAHAM

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Dunedin, N. Z.—(CP)—A man who has just returned from three months of self-imposed exile on a deserted island is developing methods of measuring bird pop- ulations which may be adopted by ornithologists throughout the world.

L. E. Richdale of Dunedin lived alone in a small shack on Whero Island, a half acre forest-clad piece of land off the south coast of New Zealand.

For his study Richdale has chosen five species of petrels which inhabit Whero Island. He has been watching the birds for 10 years now and in that time has spent a year on the island.

His first task when he arrived for his latest stay was to check the 865 burrows he had recorded on previous visits. The petrels nest in burrows and some return to the same one each year while others move on to new ones. Rich- dales next job was to search the island for new burrows and re- cord them.

Then the night work began. Each burrow had to be inspected in turn and the birds in them checked. Many had bands fixed by Richdale on previous visits, while on hundreds of others he had to place new bands.

To get the work done in the correct season Richdale had to work in all types of weather, sometimes in terrific winds. So exacting was the work that he lost 14 pounds and became so weak after prolonged observation in bad weather that he had dif- ficulty at times in keeping to his schedule.

Now that his observations have been completed, a major task re- mains in collating all the dates and putting his findings into a form readily applicable to other types of birds. Ornithologists in many parts of the world are wait- ing the results of his work with interest.

Tire-Test Driver Has Tiresome Job

Birmingham, England, —(CP)— Every day in his five-day work- ing week, Arthur Atkins drives a car from Birmingham to Lon- don, has a bite of lunch, then drives all the way back to Birm- ingham.

He has been doing it week after week for the last 10 years.

Arthur, aged 52, is a tire-test driver for a well-known rubber company. His job is to give tires the wear-and-tear they would re- ceive at the hands of an average motorists, under normal con- ditions.

A Londoner, he started tire- testing in 1920 and has since cov- ered 1,5000,000 miles, equivalent to 60 times around the world.

18 Women Douks Are Sentenced To Penitentiary

Nelson, B.C., May 1 — (CP) —The Doukhobors are leaving British Columbia, but the exodus is not exactly what police would like to see.

Within 30 days 18 female members of the Sons of Freedom sect will be lodged in Kingston penitentiary. They were part of the 100-odd sect members arrested within the last week for nude parading.

Three-year prison terms Friday were handed out in quick trials marked by stirrings in the crowded courtroom. The hall of justice, like the tiny Nelson jail, bulged after a week of burnings and mass disrobing at Krestova, a 3,500-a village 23 miles west of here.

Members of the 5,000-strong Orthodox Doukhobor sect joined with citizens of this West Kootenay valley, 250 miles east of Vancouver, to protest the outbreaks. The Nelson board of trade urged more prison space and special assizes so that "speedy justice can be rendered."

British Columbia police have taken many of the names of demonstrations, but arrested only a comparative few. They just haven't space.

The board of trade wants more arrests to manage "disturbed" public opinion.

Besides the east-bound women, 23 men will be removed to New Westminster, B.C., within a month. They also were charged with parading in the nude. Two men were committed for trial on arson charges.

The Sons, who say burning of their own and other homes is a form of protest against an impending world war, kept up their stripping during the hearings.

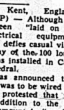
Couple Advised To Leave Home

Espanola, May 1 — (CP) — Leo Guglyk, 62, and his wife said Friday they are in fear of their lives after an unexplained sinking of the soil on the little farm they carved out of the wilderness here 34 years ago. The Ukrainian couple are afraid the earth will swallow them.

During the past five weeks almost all the 20 acres which they cleared from the bush has sunk, the cave-in edging within 25 yards of their house near the Spanish River 30 miles west of Sudbury. The earth sank as much as 65 feet, but the nearby river-bank showed no changes.

"We haven't slept a wink in the last month and we are so worried we can't eat," Mrs. Guglyk, Friday night. "There is still the sound of rumbling and the earth each day the cracks are bigger and nearer the house."

Officials of the Lands and Forests Department said they believe the cave-in results from an underground stream joining the Spanish River on the farm property. They have advised the old couple to vacate their home.



Dey Visitors to Spot 100 Loudspeakers In Old Cathedral

Canterbury, Kent, England, May 1 — (CP) — Although no sooner than a service on the Fine," an electrical equipment Firm (Pridlip) defies casual visitors to spot any of the 100 loudspeakers it has installed in Canterbury Cathedral.

When it was announced that the Cathedral was to be wired for sound it was protested that the equipment's addition to the interior would amount to "vandalism."

Actually, says the firm, unobtrusiveness has been the key-note of the installation, with each instrument painted and colored to match the stonework with which it would be associated.

Josephine, one of the 36 whooping cranes left in the world and world's only whooper honeymoon couple, made big news for bird-lovers recently by producing an egg and preparing to hatch it. Shown tending two eggs which proved infertile last spring, Josephine is nesting in a bird refuge near Corpus Christi, Texas. If the new eggs come to maturity, the refuge will have the only whoopers ever raised in captivity. Josephine was born introduced to her present mate, Crip, in last October. — Central Press Canadian.

WOULD OUTLAW COMMUNIST PARTY

Australia's Prime Minister Menzies on Thursday introduced a bill described as a measure of public safety and self-defence to outlaw the communist party in Australia. "We could not have tolerated a fifth column in 1939," he told the House of Representatives, "We certainly do not propose to tolerate one in 1950." The bill calls for the dissolution of the communist party, provides prison terms up to five years for communists who refuse to cease party activities and bars reds from holding jobs in the government or private enterprise vital to the country's security. — Central Press anadian.

COSTS CAFE TIDY PENNY

Newark, N.J., May 1 — (AP) — It cost the Belmore Cafeteria $5,000 Friday for chasing a customer who didn't pay his cheque. A jury awarded the money to 78-year-old Mrs. Susan Dorsey, who charged she was knocked down and injured by a restaurant employee chasing the defaulting customer last March.

It was not revealed in court whether the non-paying guest was caught.

250,000 Back In Cliff-Dwelling Age in New York

New York, May 1 — (AP) — Nearly 250,000 New Yorkers were back to cliff-dwelling today as Manhattan's apartment elevator strike headed into a long and weary weekend.

Garbage was beginning to collect—and spoil—on the upper floors of the city's skyscraper apartments.

Mail lay unsorted in the foyers.

Grocery boys refused to deliver food to the higher floors where whole families were marooned.

The tenants, short of breath and with aching feet and legs, plodded up flight after flight of stairs.

Meanwhile, the striking members of the Building Service Employees International Union (A.F.L.) and the apartment house owners still were deadlocked over the major issue — wages.

The strikers, who include janitors, maids and janitors as well as elevator operators, want $2.75 a week, a 40-hour instead of a 48-hour week, and a pension plan. The union says present wages average $42.50 to $50.32.

Owners Friday offered to arbitrate—but there was a catch. They asked that any awards be deferred pending a rent increase. Under state law, no rent increase can come before December.

The union took the offer under consideration. The strike began Thursday.

In the taller buildings, where a single trip on foot is a major athletic project, some tenants simply quit and moved to hotels for the duration of the strike. Hotels are not affected in the walkout.

BRAM HUMPHREYS OPENS NEW STORE

New Store Will Carry Complete Lines Paper, Paints, Varnishes

Combining an efficient and up-to-date shoe repair service with an "up front" retail store that offers a wide range of commodities ranging from paints and varnishes to luggage, Brown's Campbell St. store, operated by Bram Humphreys today commenced operations at a new location.

Brown's Campbell Street store is now located at 19 Campbell St., directly across the street from the Y.M.C.A.

Although several new lines have been added to Brown's Campbell St. store, as in the past, shoe repairing of all kinds will be featured. New equipment, including an auto-soler which automatically nails and countersnks, stitching machines and an electric cement-on press, enables rapid completion of any type of new soles.

Also a feature of the repair department is Brown's Campbell St. orthopaedic work for special adjustment of shoes. According to Bram approximately 75 per cent of the population is suffering from some sort of foot ailment and when specially adjusted shoes are required the Campbell St. store is equipped to make the adjustment. A prescription card will be made out for each specially adjusted shoe.

Invisible re-soling, coloring and dyeing, together with purse, bag and zipper repairs are among the other services offered by the repair shop.

In the "up front" store, Pratt and Lambert paints and varnishes, products of a company whose paints have been tried and proven for the past century, will be offered. Paints, enamels and varnishes for every purpose will be carried in stock as well as a full line of painter's supplies and sundries. The store will also be local representative for a well known brand of wallpaper.

Catering to the dog population of the city, the store will carry a full line of dog harness, leashes and muzzles. Canvas and rubber-soled gym shoes will also be stocked.

A full line of O'Cedar mops and floor waxes will also be carried in stock.

As may be expected in a shop featuring leather repairs the store will also offer a line of baggage with clubbags and suitcases being stocked in a price range to satisfy every customer's requirements. Sporting goods, including fishing tackle and baseball equipment will also be be carried. Umbrellas will also be stocked.

Altho' not a native son of this city, Bram Humphreys, nevertheless, has lived in Belleville for the greater part of his life. He went to school here and outside his four years' service in the army has continuously been associated in the shoe repair and wallpaper business.

As a musician Bram is well known. He was trumpet player with the original Bon Ton Orchestra of a decade or so ago and has been active in church orchestras and as a member of the Belleville Band.

He joined the Army in 1942 and served four years, two of them overseas as an Auxiliary Service officer. He was with the Canadian forces at Oetend, took part in the advance across France and the Lowlands and ended up with the occupation forces in Germany. He received his discharge in 1946.

Back in Canada he immediately looked around for a business opening. He purchased Brown's Campbell St. store and has seen the business expand until larger quarters were necessary.

At the new location Bram and his competent staff of four assistants, are equipped and ready to give service — the kind of service which will bring old customers back and interest new customers.

Most Spectacular Peacetime Air Show Staged by Russia Viewed by Thousands in Square

CANADIAN DELEGATE

R. G. (Gerry) Riddell, special assistant to External Affairs Minister Pearson, is expected to succeed Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton as Canada's permanent delegate to the United Nations. He will move to New York this summer to get ready for the U. N. General Assembly in September. — (CP Photo.)

Moscow, May 1 (AP)—Roaring Russian Air Force planes staged their most spectacular peacetime air show ever red square today with Generalissimo Stalin and more than 1,000,000 Soviet May Day paraders looking on approvingly.

Big four-engined bombers led the thundering air armada that featured the annual parade in celebration of International Labor Day. The Russian premier's son, Lt.-Gen. Vassily Stalin, led the air parade.

Behind the great bombers zoomed groups of jet planes.

Moscow's citizens, who jammed red square for their traditional May Day demonstration, gave Stalin a mighty cheer as he mounted the platform near Lenin's tomb. He was dressed in a military uniform and communist party leaders.

All eyes were turned on Stalin as he wheeled slowly up the steps to the rostrum.

Foul play is feared as 100 men under provincial supervision continue to scour the countryside for a 32-year-old war veteran farmer, Fred Ascomb, missing since Tuesday morning from his home at Shelburne, Ont. After careful investigation of the facts of the case, police have decided that Ascomb did not disappear voluntarily. — Central Press Canadian.

Among searching party who scoured marshes and wood unsuccessfully were Harold Starr, left, Leo Readman; Arthur and Alfred Ascomb, brothers of the missing man, and Brownie, Ascomb's dog. Missing man, last seen wearing overalls, rubber boots and a ski cap, was described by his wife as a "God-fearing man who neither drinks smokes nor swears." Disappearance followed Ascomb's drawing money out of the bank to pay a garage bill. — Central Press Canadian.

Women Plan Week's Boycott Against Grocers

London, May 1 — (AP) — British housewives, up in arms about the high cost of fresh vegetables and fruits, are plotting against their grocers.

They are planning a week's boycott, starting May 8, in an attempt to force prices down.

The leader is 46-year-old Mrs. Dilara Lasdun, chairman of the Shrewsbury Housewives' Association. She said today housewives couldn't pay the prices asked by grocers for their vegetables.

"In some cases these prices are three times as much as a year ago," she said.

The rebellious Shrewsbury housewives received quick support from similar organizations in the Midlands — from Merseyside, Bradford and Darlington in Yorkshire, in Leeds, Middlesbrough and Stockton-on-Tees between scheduled meetings to discuss the boycott.

The National Federation of Fruit and Potato Trades admitted prices were high but blamed bad weather for the shortage of supplies and consequent high prices. Others claimed they were selling practically at cost price.

Says More Learned In Reform School Than in Industry

Toronto, May 1 (CP) — Principal of the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph learn more in less time than they could as apprentices in industry, says Col. Bradley Basher.

The reformatory superintendent told the Ontario Magistrates' Association Saturday the prisoners are "doing" have to spend the first three months of their training in sweeping up the shop and running errands for the boss."

"It's the same trouble it is nine months before an apprentice is allowed to touch what he is going to use," he said. "We are the victims of habit."

The prisoners' production record, however, was no match for the apprentices.

"Our cows have set one world record and the Canadian record in milk production during the past year."

ROBBED WHILE STANDING ON STOOL, FAPERING

Edgeley, May 1 (CP)—Arthur Buel, 55, standing on a stool, was papering the living-room walls Saturday when a well-dressed, fast-moving gunman walked into the cover his back.

It all happened so quickly, said Buel, that it wasn't until the bandit had stolen $40 from his wallet and fled — that Buel even got down off the stool.

RECEIVED AT PALACE

London, May 1 —(CP)— The King and Queen today received the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. Ray Lawson, and Mrs. Lawson at Buckingham Palace.

A palace spokesman said the Lawsons had a "very pleasant" visit with their Majesties.

Lawson, on a vacation to Britain since before Easter, is waiting for Canada later this week.

Controversy Over Infant Baptism Will go Before B. of Q. Conference

Bethany, Ont., May 1 (CP)—The spirited controversy over the use of the minister who refuses to baptize infants will go before the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church in June, it was reported today.

Meanwhile, the Peterborough Presbytery has forbidden Rev. W. N. Crandall to mention the subject of baptism from his pulpits in this part of the Kawartha Hills, 70 miles west of Peterborough.

Mr. Crandall says "infant baptism wrong; it has no Biblical backing." He contends that children should not be formally brought into the church in the baptismal ceremony until they reach the age of discretion.

The Presbytery has indicated his resignation would be welcomed but has not taken direct action except to refer the matter to the conference.

The minister remarked in an interview that it his resignation from the United Church is forced he will resign "only to the conference, not to the Presbytery."

The 500 members of Mr. Crandall's congregation are split on the controversy. An indication of the attitude was the fact that only 25 of the 70 members attended his service in nearby Yelverton Sunday.

Strong defence of the minister was made by 75-year-old William Hall who rode over bumpy gravel roads to get to Ebeneezer Church.

"Preachers today are falling down but not preaching enough on the Bible," the sturdy old farmer growled. "I have read my Bible and there is nothing in it to support infant baptism. It is just a custom started in Rome a long time ago. But Jesus Himself was not baptized until he was a young man."

Howard Malcolm, a steward at Yelverton Church, thought baptism should be an introduction to the church, proving the parents are doing the right thing by their children."

Mr. Crandall took 10 years of study to make up his mind. Now he expects us to change ours overnight," he said.

An official of the United Church in Toronto said that if asked to resign, Mr. Crandall would not be stripped of his clerical title or unfrocked.

"Once a man has been ordained he cannot be unordained very easily," the official said. "But if he should refuse to resign his charge there are various processes of ecclesiastical procedure that might be invoked. I can't recall when a minister has refused to resign when requested to do so."

Bodies of Couple Found in Cellar

Winnipeg, May 1 — (CP) — The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph (Mickey) Kolt, both about 36, were found today in the basement of their home in Northern Winnipeg. A .32 - calibre rifle was found close by.

Police said that the couple and their four-year-old daughter Gloria had gone down to the basement about 9:30 a. m., Mrs. Kolt apparently to do her washing.

Gloria said her father sent her out to "look at the neighbor's baby." She returned 15 minutes later and found her mother lying in a pool of blood on the floor. Her father was nearby, stretched out on his back, with a hole through his head.

Police said that neighbors reported the couple had been quarreling Sunday night and had continued the argument early today.

ROBBITS STEALING SISTER'S CAR

Brantford, May 1 (CP)—Alex Balaga of Brantford pleaded guilty today to taking his sister's automobile without her consent and was ordered to pay the $130 it cost to send police to Sherbrooke, Que., to bring him back.

Balaga was arrested in Sherbrooke when the car was involved in an accident. While being escorted back to Brantford Balaga became ill and was taken to hospital in Montreal for an appendectomy. Brantford police had to make a second trip to Montreal to bring him back when he recovered from the operation.

Objects to Having War Surplus Shop As Neighbor

Toronto, May 1 (CP) — Judgment has been reserved in the case of a Peterborough haberdasher's neighbor who is trying to force a war surplus goods dealer to get out of the building next door.

Mr. Justice G. A. Urquhart shortly will hand down his ruling on a motion to discover whether Bertram Levy should be allowed to continue operating the war surplus store.

"I know what these stores are like", said Mr. Justice Urquhart. "I've been in them myself looking for bargains in fishing equipment. Nobody wants a junk shop next door to a good business if they are detrimental to good stores adjacent to them."

The action arose from a complaint by Eric and Pauline Hobard, operators of a clothing store in Peterborough. The hearing was held in Peterborough, and Mr. Justice Urquhart announced in Toronto that he was reserving judgment.

The parade is being sponsored by the Catholic Lay Guild of Assumption College and the Young Christian Workers of the London diocese. Some 15,000 persons are expected to participate in the parade, and another 10,000 are expected for dedication services in a Windsor park.

The procession through downtown city streets will be led by Most Rev. John C. Cody, co-adjutor Bishop of the London diocese.

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—Keyoshi Nakishima, 30, today was remanded one week on a charge of assaulting his wife. Police said he smoked his wife and her sister out of the bathroom of their home by lighting a fire outside the door when they locked themselves inside. Then he struck his wife, broke her nose and dragged her about by her hair, police reported.

He said there was apparently no reason for his actions.

Toronto, May 1 — Prices of 169 brands of liquor and wine will be reduced in Ontario, effective today.

The Ontario Liquor Control Board said the reductions included the balance of brands affected by devaluation of the British pound. Two brands of Canadian whisky are being reduced.

Hamilton, May 1. (CP)—Andrew G. Gault, 61, well-known traveller and chairman of the Hamilton Harbor Commission, died suddenly today, while playing golf at nearby Ancaster. Native of Rostock, Ont., he was Past District Governor and Dominational vice president of the Kiwanis Club.

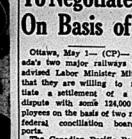
Mr. Gault, a jeweller on downtown King Street since 1914, was playing his first game of the year. He and his partner, Judge William Scheuenger, were on the 17th hole.

Surviving are his widow, a son, John, Winnipeg, and a daughter, Mrs. Carl Linkert, Stratford.

Funeral service will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at St. Peter's Church.

Youths Severely Injured as Car Hits Trailer-Truck

Barrie, May 1 — (CP) — Two youths were severely injured today when their small 75-horsepower automobile crashed head-on into a trailer-truck a few miles north of here.



Condition of John Scott, 18, and Sigmund Pritchard, 19, both of Toronto, was described by hospital officials as "critical." The truck driver, Alvin Wood of Agincourt, was not injured.

Provincial police said the small car turned out to pass another vehicle and smashed into the truck. The small car was pushed nearly 100 feet and wrecked.

Ascomb disappeared in Shelburne, a village of 1,005, shortly before noon Tuesday. He had gone to town to shop and have his car repaired. After purchasing some groceries, he was traced to bank where he drew money to pay the garage bill. Returning to the garage he stowed his groceries in the car — and disappeared. Constable W. T. Farnell, seen above, believes foul play with foul play. — Central Press Canadian.

CPR and CNR Are Willing To Negotiate Wage Settlement On Basis of Recent Reports

DELEGATION HEAD

Ottawa, May 1— (CP)— Canada's two major railways today advised Labor Minister Mitchell that they are willing to negotiate a settlement of a wage dispute with some 124,000 employees on the basis of two recent federal conciliation board reports.

The Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian National Railways emphasized that "the additional costs involved can only be met by increasing the charges made for our services to the public."

The railways estimated implementation of the board's findings would cost between $19,225,000 and $27,000,000 annually.

The majority report of the two conciliation boards handed down April 21 in favor of 17 railway unions' claims for outright pay increases. They recommended a formula that would give the employees a shorter work week, higher hourly rates and generally less in the weekly pay envelope.

Reduction of Hours Asked

The unions had asked for reduction in the work week from 48 to 40 hours with a five-day week and no loss in take-home pay, plus wage increases above that of from seven to 10 cents an hour.

The railways' acceptance of the boards' findings was contained in a joint letter delivered to Mr. Mitchell today. The letter was signed by S. F. Dingle, vice-president of the C.N.R. and N. R. Crump, C.P.R. vice-president.

"The executives of the railways have given careful study to the boards' analysis of this dispute," said the letter. "We are impressed that the members of the majority have resolutely faced the problems laid before them, and that their reports are as fair and impartial documents as could be produced in the circumstances.

"It had been hoped by the railway managements that the appearance of these reports would initiate a new and more fruitful stage of negotiations.

"Unfortunately the immediate reactions of the union representatives, as reported in the daily Press indicate that there has been no change in their attitude. This is all the more regretable because railway unions have in the past enjoyed a reputation for moderation and restrain in the conduct of their bargaining activities."

Would Be Pattern

The two officials said the conciliation boards had rightly described the railways' proposals as "unreasonable." Cost of the proposals of the 17 unions, also representing the non-operating employees, "those who do not run the trains — would be met, it would set a pattern for all employees in Canada, with the result of "all demands now in contemplation would add to an increase of at least $115,392,000 annually for both railways—$57,696,000 each for the 20-percent increase in their railway wage bill."

"Moreover," continued the letter, "the fact cannot be ignored that the granting of any such demands to railway workers, the largest single industrial group in Canada, would in the public mind which would clearly dislocate the existing wage structure in this country and impart a serious threat to business confidence and price inflation of major proportions would be inevitable."

Spring Seeding Late in W. Ontario

Guelph, May 1 — (CP) — Only three times in the last half century has spring seeding been as late as this year in Western Ontario, according to Dr. G. P. Mosteller, head of the field husbandry department at the Ontario Agricultural College.

It is usually well under way by May 1, he said.

L. B. Wade, manager of "Weldwood," the Farmer's Advocate farm, reports that there is usually more seeding done "after April 20 than before." In this immediate vicinity, but it's usually finished by now.

Few district farmers have commenced operations, nor are they likely to while present weather conditions continue.

FIRE LOSS HEAVY

Halifax (CP) — Fires in Halifax County killed 13 persons, injured 34 and caused $357,000 in property damage during 1949, Fire Marshal J. E. Kinsman reports. There were 517 fires.

CPR Does Not Foresee Unification It Proposed in '38

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)— The Canadian Pacific Railway now does not advocate the railway unification plan it advanced in 1938, the company today told the Royal Commission on transportation.

K. D. M. Spence, C.P.R. commission counsel, gave this information as the commission continued inquiring into the extent of co-operation between the two major railways under a 1933 statute instructing them to effect joint economies.

Mr. Spence said the C.P.R. now is opposed to the 1938 proposal, which called for the use of physical rail facilities as a single system, with each company keeping its corporate identity.

The purpose of that plan had been "complete co-operation" through the elimination of effective competition.

Leeway for Savings

(Earlier CPR evidence had been to the effect that different operating conditions from those of the previous years now left leeway for savings through joint economies.)

Today, John E. Armstrong, CPR chief engineer, also expressed opposition to a proposal by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture for a tribunal to supervise the railways' economies.

The C.P.A. proposal, made to the commission last year, was that the tribunal should recommend economy measure to the railways and report to Parliament annually on those which had and which had not, been undertaken.

Mr. Armstrong said it seemed to him the purpose of the federation plan was to force co-operation. He believed it was impossible for force and co-operation to go hand-in-hand.

Under the C.P.A. idea, Mr. Armstrong said, one or the other of the railway companies could be compelled to adopt measures damaging to its competitive position.

"We favor co-operation that will not damage the competition" he said. "We are interested in anything that goes beyond this."

C. W. Frazier, British Columbia counsel, asked if economies could be made by pooling transcontinental passenger train services.

Mr. Armstrong said it had not been found that substantial economies could be made under present conditions.

The B.C. counsel asked if there was enough traffic to warrant five daily transcontinental trains.

Mr. Armstrong said he would assume there was enough traffic.

WAR IN NEAR FUTURE NOT UNLIKELY—ADMIRAL

Melbourne, May 1. (Reuters)— Admiral A. W. Radford, commander in Chief of the United States Pacific Fleet, said in an interview today that war in the Pacific in the near future is unlikely. He arrived here as guest of honor at the 50th anniversary of Coral Sea week, which commemorates the Coral Sea battle of 1942, the Allied first naval victory over the Japanese fleet.

Civic Leaders View Students' Riot With Alarm

This scene was one of many similar incidents staged in New York City by thousands of high school students as fresh waves of riotous demonstrations broke out throughout the city. About 5,000 hooky-playing students have clashed with police and other officials for the past four days protesting a virtual halt in after-school activities and demanding a pay increase for their teachers. Rioting, which has brought expressions of alarm from judges and other civic leaders, also caused Dr. William Jansen, superintendent of schools, to charge in a special broadcast that subversive groups were inciting the students to continue and extend their demonstrations. — Central Press Canadian.

Tower of London Displays Armor of Black Prince

By WILLIAM ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London —(CP) — For a brief period during April and May, Tower of London visitors are being shown the armor of Edward, the Black Prince.

For almost 600 years—with but one previous visit to the Tower—after having been carried before the bier at his funeral. The Prince died in 1376 after turning over his French dominions to John of Gaunt.

Father of Richard II, he was known in his own day as Edward of Woodstock, and the description "Black Prince" is believed to stem from the color of his armor and to have been first applied 200 years later.

The armor was sent to the Tower of London last autumn for cleaning by its armorers. The repair has been so successful that dean and chapter have given permission for the armor to be exhibited in the Tower before being restored to its place in the cathedral, high above the canopy and beyond range for close examination.

Its first cleaning was in 1894, the last time it was seen in the Tower, and a test "parade" upon then to hold it together has rotted since.

The present netting was worked by the Royal School of Needlework with resident stitchers specially prepared.

A lion atop the Prince's helmet has been restored to its original gilt, as have the gauntlets, made of a type of medieval brass.

Apart from their historical significance as articles used by the Black Prince, the equipment is valued as a rarity.

Exports of Textiles Disappoint Britain

Manchester —(CP) — Canada was a "disappointing" market for British textiles in 1949, the Manchester Guardian says.

In a financial-page story, the Liberal newspaper said that the value of shipments to Canada was smaller last year than in 1949 for virtually all kinds of yarns and fabrics.

"In several important classes of textiles, indeed, exports to the United States fell appreciably less in value than did those to Canada," the paper said.

Devaluation of the pound sterling and the smaller reduction in value of the Canadian dollar had prejudiced the expansion of Canada's export trade in textiles. If the Dominion's overseas outlets are reduced, the Guardian warned "competition in the domestic market is likely to become keener, so that British manufacturers may have even greater difficulty in finding qualities and prices which attract Canadian buyers."

Geese Sanctuary May be Opened On Muskrat Lake

Pembroke, May 1 — (CP)—Establishment of a geese sanctuary on Muskrat Lake, near Cobden, was urged Sunday by the executive of the St. Lawrence-Ottawa Zone of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters.

The executive went to battle on behalf of more than 2,000 hungry geese now resting on Harry Berry's farm near Cobden, and in a unanimous resolution favoring sanctuary for the birds, demanded that no further steps be taken to scatter them.

It was further resolved that necessary food be provided immediately and for as long as necessary.

The resolution supported the policy of Pembroke Fish and Game Association, which last week urged the setting up of a sanctuary on Muskrat Lake.

The geese at Cobden consist of more than half a flight of 4,000 which for a time were fed by game wardens. They ran through $350 worth of feed — all that was available — and then started to work on neighboring farms.

Last Friday the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests ordered the wardens to get the geese on the wing and out of the area. But most of them seem reluctant to leave.

Youth Assembly For Peace Plans Ousted by Police

Montreal, May 1—(CP)—The Leftist Youth Assembly for Peace, ousted from downtown Dominion Square Sunday when members attempted to stage a "memorial" service at the cenotaph, today planned a "speech-making" trip to Toronto.

A spokesman for the assembly said a delegation probably would leave here today to attend the Canadian Peace Congress in Toronto next weekend. En route, the delegation will stop off at several points, including Cornwall, to deliver speeches.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the Youth Assembly faces arraignment in court today on a charge of carrying a banner without a permit.

Leo Hardy, 27, of suburban Dowmount was arrested Sunday by members of the city's antisubversive squad for carrying the banner—a painted torch—to the cenotaph in Dominion Square. Hardy's companions were ousted from the Square by police, who then herded several hundred Sunday strollers from the grounds and stationed a guard to prevent people from entering.

Service Ruled Out

The Assembly decided to hold the "solemn memorial service" at the cenotaph after police refused permission to stage a "peace torch" relay at Lester's Field in north-central Montreal.

The pair will have included a non-stop relay from Montreal to Toronto with the final runner arriving in Toronto for the opening session of the Peace Congress.

Hardy is the fourth person connected with the Assembly to be arrested in less than two days.

Two men and a woman were arrested, Friday night on charges of being found in possession of and distributing subversive literature after McGregor, Joe Sindler and Homer Smith appears in court Saturday and were remanded one week for trial.

Police said the trio were arrested in an automobile which contained thousands of circulars advertising the "Peace Youth Rally" sponsored by the Montreal Peace Council, parent body of the Youth Assembly.

The arrests followed Thursday's police raid on the downtown Bluery Street offices of the Peace Council where police said, they confiscated thousands of circulars and pamphlets advertising the Toronto Congress.

Tax Rush Is On As Taxpayers Hurry To Beat Deadline

Deadline for annual pleasant spring chore of filling out income tax returns is fast approaching. John Q. Public better have his return in the mail by midnight Monday, May 1, or else! This young "taxpayer" has the right idea. She is busy adding up her exemptions by listing three dependents as she plays "income tax return." Three Killed As Truck Crashes Into Transport

Those injured include Mrs. Addison's husband, Rene, 52, another daughter, Lucille, 12, Joseph Pitt, 30, driver of the panel truck, and his wife, Marie, 57. Their injuries were not believed to be serious.

Three other persons, also passengers in the panel truck, escaped unharmed. No one in the parked truck was injured.

Hyderabad Nizam Takes Long Time To Count Money

Bombay, India, May 1—(AP) —The Nizam of Hyderabad may not be the richest man in the world but it still takes him a few days to count his money.

The Nizam does the counting himself. His money and fabulous jewels are stored in an air-conditioned vault that only he enters.

Gold, silver and currency notes, 350,000,000 rupees ($73,500,000).

Sales of his bullion through the Reserve Bank of India fetched 163,000,000 rupees ($34,650,000).

That comes to nearly $130,000,000.

But no one knows exactly the value of the Nizam's wealth.

Some of his household made a guess last fall that the Nizam must have about $1,500,000,000.

Royals Increase First Place Margin In Int. League

(By The Associated Press)

Montreal increased its 1st place margin and Springfield emerged from the cellar in Sunday games in the International League.

The Royals swept past Syracuse 4-0 and 4-3, before 3,838 shivering fans at Syracuse. Springfield snapped a four-game losing streak at Rochester's expense, 7-1 and 14-4.

A crowd of 4,974 saw Stan Hack's Springfield Cubs score 11 runs in the fifth and sixth innings at Springfield to sink Rochester in the second game. Bob Thurman's two-run homer in the fifth started the Cubs on their way.

Lefthander Al Porto subdued Rochester on six hits in the opener for this first victory. He was helped by Les Peden's two-run homer.

At Syracuse, righthander Clyde King hurled a four-hit shutout for Montreal in the opener. Two singles and George Schmees' outfield fly gave Montreal the winning run in the seventh inning of the second game. Al Rubeling hit a two-run homer for the cause.

Rain, a turnstile jinx since the season's start, washed out two of the scheduled four doubleheaders Sunday. The Toronto-Jersey City and Buffalo-Baltimore bargain bills were postponed.

GRECO MEETS GIOSA

Both recently pounded out easy —and convincing —victories over former lightweight champion Bob Montgomery.

The Montrealer decisioned Montgomery but Giosa knocked out the former champion, a feat that prompted the Philadelphian to change his style from a hit-and-run fighter to an aggressive puncher.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, May 1 — (CP) — The news of backfielder Royal Copeland's departure for the Calgary Stampeders was a bit ahead of the football season but it was big news to Montreal, home of the Grey Cup-winning Alouettes.

Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson calls the story of the all-star player's desertion of Toronto to Argonauts a "what goes on here?" item.

To Ferry, Copeland's departure seems to hold something more important than just the loss of a player. He makes much of the stories of dissension among the Argos, coming out of Toronto, and describes this as "a natural development in the transition of the club from the amateurism, or shall we say, semi-amateurism (whatever that is) for which Argos have resolutely stood, or, at least, stood as long as they could keep to the forefront."

Imported Talent

"Undoubtedly it will force the club, which had long tried to function with an all-Canadian team, to go out into the field and buy imported talent as other clubs have done.

"It will probably cause a complete revision of Argonaut practice and outlook, which won't be a bad thing, at that . . .

Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara ascribes Copeland's departure to the fact that somebody else was willing to pay him more money than the Argos.

"He goes west for nothing more glorious than more money," says Baz. "There is oil around Calgary and Copeland, who won't have too many good years left in his system, knows that where oil is gold naturally follows."

Trenton, Flyers Win Weekend Soccer Games

In their opening game of the 1950 soccer season Trenton Merchants edged 6 R.D. by two goals to one at Bain Memorial Park in Trenton on Saturday afternoon. Quite a strong wind was blowing down the pitch and Trenton winning elected to kick with the wind in their favor. Both teams played fairly evenly matched with Trenton having a slight edge on the exchanges. The muddy condition of the ground was not conducive to good soccer.

Both Trenton goals were scored in the first/half of play the first by "Scottie" Martin and the second by Bill Brown. Trenton were on the defensive in the second half but managed to keep the 6 R.D. forwards from scoring until about a quarter of an from time when the airmen were awarded a spot kick for an infringement in the penalty area by one of the Trenton defenders. Ken Eatherly made no mistake, from the spot and scored 6 R.D.'s only counter of the match.

Teams: Trenton: L. Heiyer, J. Rushnell, E. Helyer, E. Tait, E. Carswell, M. Mitts, W. Riddell, W. Salisbury, W. Brown, L. Colterjohn, R. Terrill. Subs: Campbell, Baker, Martin.

Referee: Bob Murphy.

The match Vets vs. Belleville was postponed owing to the Vets equipment not being received in time.

RCAF 5 NAVY 0

The South Station RCAF and Navy Belleville unit played their opening game of the Bay of Quinte Soccer League at Trenton Saturday which ended in a decision 5-0 victory for the Air Force. The Air Force won the toss and kicked against the wind the first half, the Navy was unable to take advantage due to the formidable defence of the Air Force backs Tom Kendall and Tom Hughes. Ted Miller, Jim Wall and Bob Angus were outstanding in their team play and hard passing. The Navy team upheld their tradition of fighting to the end. However, their attacks were mainly individual efforts and their defence also lacked team play. Navy goalie Art Hughes played an exceptional first game. The game was a good hard fought and clean tussle to the last with the Air Force the well deserved victors.

The Navy has the makings of a strong team and coach Fred Jones vows he will put his nose to the grindstone getting his boys into shape for our Saturdays official opening match of the Eastern Ontario Inter City League against Belleville United at the Belleville Fair Grounds.

Teams:

Air Force: Captain Ted Miller, Jim Wall, Bob Angus, Bill Grignon, Jimmy Esdale, Bob Kiernon, Bill Vaudrey, Len Silver, Bob Snowden, Tommy Hughes, Tommy Kendall, Les Jarvis, Ken Goodall.

Navy: Capt. Jack Jones, Alf. Hughes, Fred Jones, Chas. Murphy, Ken Carbiren, B. Carbiren, Don Culler, Jim O'Brien, R. Carter, Harold Leech, Don Longhurst, Jack Hatfield.

Farouk to Wed in a Year

The London Times in a Cairo dispatch said that King Farouk of Egypt has delayed his marriage to Narriman Sadek until next year. A dispatch, approved by the Egyptian censorship in Cairo, said the king definitely was planning to remarry, but probably there would be no official announcement until 1951. The king's reported romance with Miss Sadek started last year when she was 16 and the fiancee of Zaki Hachem, young Egyptian diplomat, who went to the U.S. when their engagement was broken. — Central Press Canadian.

KELLEHER MAKES IMPRESSION

In a double-column sports-page head, the Ottawa Journal plays up the Border League National baseball club, Coach Bill Metzig and his baseball school. Metzig took his youthful prodigies to see the Nationals work out in a driving rain, but as the Journal sports writer says "These workouts are worth seeing."

"Metzig was still bubbling over the showing of his rookies in yesterday's (Friday) workout before their practice today.

"I don't know whether I'm getting too enthusiastic." Metzig told the Journal reporter, "but the way Kaecher is hitting that ball and the looks (yet this) of our new rookie Al. Kelleher was a satisfying sight."

THE MANAGER SPEAKS

"Kelleher" said Metzig, "is really a big boy standing about six feet one and he can lay into a ball. He comes here with experience at first base and some on the mound, but I think I can fit him into the outfield — at least I'm going to have a try at it. If it works out he might prove a handy man in the role of relief hurler."

Maybe this is Kelleher's big chance. At least he seems to have created a favorable impression on the Ottawa Nationals manager.

Here's a nineteen-year old lad who eats, lives, dreams and consists on baseball twelve months of the year. In his native city he has been the butt of many baseball jokes. He has played on clubs that seems have no baseball in fandom, because of a natural gift of shoymanship, have more or less used him as the stooge for the alleged straight men of the game.

He that as it may. There is one thing about Kelleher that we admire, and that is, his persistency to keep in shape.

We and many others have thought him fit for a padded cell when we saw him working out with two or more kids on the snow-covered campus of the Collegiate Institute, clad in baseball paraphernalia, when the rest of the village was hockey crazy.

"That did not phase "Joe" one tota. Baseball was and still is his favorite game. He has parked his big carcass alongside this sports desk day after day, asking questions. He read sports reports of other papers, especially those of baseball. He has an insider knowledge of players and leagues of organized baseball that is more or less amazing.

This winter, (he still believed that Spring would come) he kept up his baseball routine. He went to the Armouries where baseball onlookers saw a big husky lad tossing baseballs with kids, swinging bats and otherwise (what they did not know) doing his best to keep in shape.

Perhaps Kelleher's "screwball routine" will pay off. We hope so. He at least, has the ambition to keep himself in physical shape, knowing that it is the first requisite of any athlete when training time comes about. Baseball is a hard game, and most of the hamlet's alleged athletes can say. With all his faults, and we have been one of the first to criticize, we believe that with the proper coaching and supervision, Allan Kelleher can make good.

He has the physical requisites. He may not have produced outstanding accomplishments that go to make up outstanding baseball player but we believe that these are more or less dormant, and as we said before, with expert coaching, Kelleher should make good.

After all, why the hell should a city of 24,000 population which, as we mentioned in another column has neither the guts, ambition nor civic and civilian support to sponsor a tiddley wink team with no affiliations, criticise one of its native sons who at least, has the ambition to make something out of himself along sports lines.

BASEBALL'S GRAND OLD MAN

Spent the weekend, or most of it with the reporterial proboscis buried deep in Connie Mack's fine baseball story "My 66 Years in the Big Leagues." And now we know why that famous American sports figure has been dubbed "Mr. Baseball".

Actually Connie Mack's story is baseball's story. It is the well-told tale of the joys and triumphs of a struggling youngster who started life as a sa-dditor of match millsand and conquered setbacks to build a business property worth millions.

Rugged and colorful, Connie Mack's life spans the sport's history from its brawling infancy to its streamlined present. No other than Connie Mack could tell the story.

It is the story of a life crammed with colorful experiences, heartaches and heartbreaks, failures and successes. It is a first-hand behind-the-scenes story of the great baseball drama from its toddling babyhood to its present gigantic proportions. The all-time greats of baseball live again in the pages. Early rules and the long hard years when the game was vying for popular favor are colorfully described.

Connie Mack names his successors, the all-time greats, the best players who ever tossed or hit a ball, in his opinion. And you'll be surprised at some of the selections.

His career in baseball falls just nine years short of covering the whole history of the organized game. Significant perhaps, is the fact that Connie Mack's life story is published in the same year that he celebrates a half century of managing the Philadelphia Athletics, a record approached by no other manager. This year will also see the 75th anniversary of the founding of the National League and the 50th anniversary of the American League.

Saturday's fiasco did not help the league's prestige any, in Belleville at least . . . Belleville and District Baseball League meets tonight in Malcolm Hall office, Campbell Street, opposite the YMCA . . . Picton, Napanee, Bizarden, Point Anne and possibly another team will likely form the loop roster this year . . . Howe and Hazerman under Coach Cy Barriage had a spirited workout over the weekend as did Herbie Henry's Sidemen . . . The Stewart-Warner grounds are not in the best of condition as yet and the less said about the baseball field in Exhibition Park, the better . . . Unless it's from a race track-Fair Board point of view . . . City baseball players are anxious to make contacts, please note, outside teams (That is one for the book) . . . Pitchers, catchers, in fact all "positioners" are available for district squads . . . Mebbe yuh hadn't better offer some of 'em jobs . . . Boston's 19-0 Shellacking Of A's No New Experience Accustomed to Bad Beating

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

When bigger and better horse collars are fashioned, it's a pretty safe bet Philadelphia Athletics will wear 'em.

When a team wins by a lopsided shut-out score, the A's are almost certain to be on the receiving end.

Until Sunday, 14-0 represented the largest shutout score in the American League in the last 10 years. One such game was played in 1943. Another in 1944. The Athletics were the victims both times.

The lusking Macmen made those two games seem like pitcher's battle Sunday. In the first game of the American League double-header the final score was Boston 19, Philadelphia 0. The Red Sox also won the nightcap, 6-5.

Boston missed by two runs in equalling the record league high of 21-0. Who do you think lost that one? Why, the A's of course. Aug. 13, 1939, Red Ruffling of New York white-washed Philadelphia 21-0.

A Boston crowd of 34,697 watched the Red Sox maul four Philly hurlers for 17 hits, good for 24 total bases in the opener. Ted Williams, back in action after missing seven of the last night games because of the grippe, blasted two home runs. He drove in seven runs. Vern Stephens and Bobby Doerr also homered.

Made First Start

Sore-armed Dick Fowler, the Toronto righthander, made his first start for the A's and was tagged for seven runs in the two innings he worked. The Sox slugged Harry Dorish, Joe Coleman and Bobby Doerr also homered.

Boston built up a 5-0 lead for southpaw Chuck Stobbs in the first three innings of the second contest. The young bonus pitcher weakened gradually, pulling relying run on base in the ninth. Al Papai took over and retired the next three batters to finish Wynn was the loser.

Get Victory and Tie

Chicago White Sox emerged a victory and a tie in their double-header with the league-leading Detroit Tigers. After lefty Bill Wight hurled a two-hit, 1-0 triumph in the opener, the White Sox overcame a 7-0 deficit to gain a 7-7 tie before darkness halted the contest at the end of nine innings.

Del Rice broke up a brilliant 13-inning hurling duel with a home run to give St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 victory over Chicago Cubs. The catcher's home run gave Harry Brecheen, his battery mate, a hard-fought triumph over Johnny Schmitz.

Cincinnati swept both ends of a doubleheader from Pittsburgh, 4-2 and 3-1, although held to two hits by Mel Queen in the second game.

Divide Twin Bill

Boston Braves and Philadelphia Phils divided a twin bill. The Braves won the opener, 4-1, and the Phils took the nightcap, 8-3. Rookie Norman Roy held the Phils to five hits in his debut as a starter.

Sam Jethroe played his best game as a Brave. He hammered a home run, triple and single, drove in two runs and scored twice. Russ Meyer, who started for the Phils, was ejected by umpire Al Barlick in the third for protesting a decision. Heading for the dugout, Meyer leaped into the back of him. It hit Barlick on the leg.

White Sox Calls Off Deal With N.Y. Yankees

By The Canadian Press

Frank C. Lane, general manager of the Chicago White Sox, Sunday informed the New York Yankees that he is calling off the trade of outfielder Johnny Ostrowski and cash in exchange for outfielder Dick Wakefield.

Lane said he based his decision upon the refusal of Wakefield to join the Chicago American League ball club without a salary increase.

The White Sox Friday sent Ostrowski and an unannounced sum of cash to New York to obtain the services of the one-time University of Michigan athlete.

Wakefield refused to join the White Sox unless the Chicago club restored the pay cut he took when signing his first Yankee contract several weeks ago. Wakefield, traded to New York by Detroit last winter for first-baseman Dick Kryhoski, is said to have suffered a $5,500 pay cut from the $22,500 the Tigers paid him a year ago.

In Ann Arbor, Mich., Wakefield said, "It's all up to Mr. Lane. It's strictly in his hands. He knows where I am."

Wakefield said he knew of reports that the Yankees might ship him to their Kansas City farm club in place of Ostrowski, and commented:

"That's a laugh. I wouldn't even consider that. I would quit baseball first.

"I'm fact I am close to it anyway."

King Ranch Will Send Two to Post In The Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 1 — (AP) — King Ranch has decided on a one-two punch for Saturday's Kentucky derby.

That was determined Sunday night when trainer Mgr Mirsch arrived from New York and said Middleground would go in the derby trial tomorrow and Jet The Mark would wait for the derby.

Middleground's appearance in the one-mile trial will give fans a chance to compare the west's brightest with the east's. For Ben Jones, Calumet Farm trainer, is almost sure to send Citation out to meet Middleground in the trial.

There should be at least four other derby eligibles in the trial —including the Brookmeade entry of Greek Ship and Sungiow, A. E. Reuben's Lot O'Luck and Wilburton Farm's Trumpet King. Other possibilities, all derby eligibles, are Calumet Farm's All Blue, Reverie Knoll farm's French Admiral, William Veeneman's Black George and J. Graham Brown's Rayloper.

The current Derby favorite — Your Host — breezed three-eighths of a mile Sunday in the rain in 37 seconds. His chances in the mud are unknown, for the thoroughbred, owned by Hollywood movieman Bill Goetz, has never raced on an off track.

The $100,000-added derby is expected to draw between 10 and 15 horses.

Neutral Ice For Third Game Of Junior Final

Toronto, May 1. (CP)—Memorial Cup hockey will be making a return to Toronto Tuesday night when Montreal Canadiens tackle Regina Pats in the third game of the best-of-seven junior classic. The first two games were at Montreal.

The two clubs arrived today. Toronto fans, always red-hot on the fast and furious junior brand of hockey, will watch them battle in the first final series game here since Port Arthur Bruins polished off Barrie Flyers in the 1943 championship set.

They'll probably see something too. Montreal, leading the series with a 2-0 edge, last squeezed by, 8-7, in the opening game and had to cash in four last-frame goals before taking Saturday's tilt, 5-2.

Plays Superbly

Bob Tyler, playing superbly in the nets for Regina, held off the Montreal marksmen for a single goal in the first two frames at Montreal Saturday while his mates up front smashed in a pair.

Ernie Roche opened the scoring for the Habs at 1:31 of the first but Gordie Cowan's marker at 10.13 and Capt. Morley MacNeill's goal early in the middle session made it 3-1 for the Pats.

Then the roof fell in. A shifty piece of centre machinery named Billy Gould personally wrapped up the contest for the Canadiens. He whistled in the tying counter midway through the last period and followed Art Rose's winner with his second. Jacques Hudon added a second insurance tally 45 seconds before the final bell.

There won't be any change in the officiating. Al Pickard, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced at Regina Sunday night that Vic Lindquist and Windy Lyndon, both of Winnipeg, will continue to call the series.

FRANKFORD Bowling League Ends Second Round

Frankford — The Frankford Bowling League wound up the second round of their playoffs Thursday night with the Merry Macs and Top Hatters being eliminated. The Top Hatters, league winners just couldn't get going against the Happy Gang, who finished fourth and bowed out in the semi-finals. Merry Macs managed to salvage one game against the Greenacres, going down four games to one as the Greenacres won the league second division. Greenacres and Happy Gang will meet Monday and Thursday night of next week for the league championship.

Frankford's major league play continued their jinx over the Belleville six as they eliminated their neighbors on total pins in a six game series Thursday night. Frankford defeated Trenton last year in their division finals.

Los Angeles Marksmen were Ed Milligan with two, Ike Hildebrand and Don Webster, New Westminster scorers were Dovorkey, Norm Kirk, with two, Bobby Love and Don Slater.

Marlies Slight Favorites Over Calgary Stamps

Calgary, May 1. (CP)—Before a fight a ham-and-eager can look as good as the boxing champion; it's in the battle that the better man shows his worth.

"I don't know anything about the Calgary Club," he said. "I saw them in a practice. They looked fast and look like they could be tricky . . . but I can't compare them until I see them play."

Tonight he'll see them play as the Eastern and Western champions tangle in the first game of the best-of-seven series for the Canadian Senior Hockey title.

Past history would indicate that Toronto has slightly the better chance of walking off with the Allan Cup, Since Sir H. Montague Allan donated the trophy in 1908, Eastern Canada Clubs have won the mug 33 times to 18 for the West. Teams from Toronto turned the trick seven times but a Calgary squad has only won once.

However, Calgary won the Allan Cup only four years ago while it was back in 1923 that a Toronto team, Toronto National was finar, last held the emblem of senior hockey superiority.

Betting circles are reported to have made the Dukes 2-5 favorites to win this series, the 50th competition in Allan Cup history. An Allan Cup victory for Toronto would be a new experience for each Marlie player—except the year-old flash Hollet to 18-year-old Danny Lewicki—but old stuff for six of the Stampeders.

Goalie Russ Derbeli, defenceman Julian Sawchuk and Archie Wilder and forwards Bunny Dame, Dune Fraser and D. Cairns all were with Calgary for its 1946 triumph. Dame furthermore was with Trail Smoke Eaters when the Smelter City licked them all in 1938.

New Sport Tax Bone of Dispute At OHA Meeting

Toronto, May 1 (CP)— The Ontario Hockey Association Saturday heard a hint of a possible "loophole" in Ontario's new sport tax.

The possibility arose out of an objection by Stafford Smythe of Toronto Marlboros to a suggested rule-change that would have meant an automatic $25 fine for any player given a match misconduct penalty.

That would be tantamount to admitting professionalism is, the OHA, he argued at the Association's 51st annual meeting. The fine proposal was dropped.

"We'd be leaving ourselves wide open. If money is involved, we are considering ourselves not to be amateurs."

The loophole offered his observation about the Ontario government's 15 per cent tax on professional sports for which admission of 50 cents or more is charged.

"Loopholes in the regulations might make it possible for us to get around this tax."

He didn't elaborate.

(The government has indicated it may consider many an "amateur" organization as professional for tax purposes.)

Fine Only One

George Panter, OHA business manager, said a fine is the only way to control some players.

"We have found nothing else works. If you bit the player in the pocketbook, it is the only thing that hurts. There is not a chance in 10,000,000 that the class A teams can escape the tax anyway."

Retiring President J. J. McFadyen of Galt recommended that the junior and senior "A" teams be put in a division separate from the other OHA clubs.

"They should operate under special regulations. It would eliminate much of the confusion which now exists in movement of the players."

Record revenue from playoffs —$37,000—was reported by Panter.

"Hockey is growing in Ontario," he said, "There now are 52 artificial ice arenas. Seven more are being built and a number of others planned. We need a bigger reserve fund. We have to be prepared for a number of contingencies such as possible difficulties with the professional teams, player injuries, court cases and the like."

Honorariums Voted

An annual honorarium of $1,000 to the president and $500 to each of the vice-presidents was voted.

J. M. Roxborough, Simcoe, was elected president; Stewart McTavish, Oshawa, first vice-president; Hy. L. (Cory) Gregg, Wingham, second vice-president.

The suspension penalty for falsifying birth certificates was reduced—the maximum from five years to three, the minimum from two years to one. Another rule change will remove a player from a game on receiving a second misconduct penalty.

A request for reinstatement of the waiver clause in the rules was defeated. Treasurer George Duffey of Niland and 15 of 16 clubs seeking to obtain players— not those seeking to release players who want the waiver rule. It led to many abuses.

Peterborough Places Third In Swim Meet

London, Ont., May 1.—(CP)—A large contingent from Toronto West End Y made a runaway of the Ontario Y.M.C.A. swimming and diving championships at the University of Western Ontario's Spencer Memorial Pool Saturday.

Coach McCarty's squad piled up 111 points to 21 for their nearest rival, the London Y team. Peterborough was third with 20 points.

Toronto scored 11 firsts including the four relay races in the 23-event program. The team's great depth, which enabled it to pile up points with seconds and third places, gave them the decided margin.

The meet, which drew a record 192 entries from all parts of the province, was also featured by an exhibition by five divers from the University of Michigan with their coach, Matt Mann, and with a performance by June Taylor, the world's synchronized swimming champion.

Two western Ontario boys came up with fine individual performances. Dave Thomson of Woodstock captured the 50 yards free style and the 50 yard back stroke in the under-14-year-old class while Bobby Easun of Stratford showed great form as he won the 100 yards back stroke and the 200 yards free style in the under 17 class.

Double Winner

Only other double winner in the meet was Dave Fraser of Toronto West End who won the senior 50 yards free title and the 200 yards breast stroke.

Easun, in particular, was outstanding. The Stratford youngster, flashed to a close victory over George Stulac of Toronto West End in the 200 free style and came back to take Bill Mathews of Hamilton in the 100 back stroke. He accounted for all his team's points. Thomson, a 12 boy, came up with two creditable performances in the 50 events.

Although the Toronto West End team clinched the team honors at an early point, London and Peterborough staged a terrific race for second place and it wasn't until the second to last event, the 200 yard relay in the under 17 class, that the host team sewed up the runnerup spot.

Final point standing: Toronto West End 111; London 31; Peterborough 20; Hamilton 17; Toronto Broadview 13; Hamilton 12; Stratford 12; Brantford 12; Toronto Central 3; Sault Ste. Marie 3; Windsor 0; and Galt 0.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York May 1 —(AP) — You'd think a ball club would be happy to have one Robin Roberts but the Phillies figure they'll have another before long—No. 2 is Buzz Bowers, who was shipped to Toronto Maple Leafs for further seasoning this spring . . . like Roberts, Bowers played for John Mize at Houston, in the Texas League and Northern League . . . unlike Robin, Buzz turned pro when he became ineligible, under Big Ten regulations, because of his summer activity. He didn't get a $25,000 bonus . . . the first time he faced professional opposition in Florida, Bowers shut out the Red Sox for three innings . . . and the Phils tell with amusement how manager Eddie Sawyer told him to slow down when he was cheerfully getting the mail across the field. . . In his first International League start for Toronto, Bowers again turned in a shutout. . . That's a better-than-fair start.

Trout Tricks

Signalling the opening of the New Hampshire trout fishing season today, plans at Belknap Mountain recreation area called for an early-morning fish fry beside a pool stocked with brookies. The idea is—or was—to land your fish, fry it and eat it all in one spot . . . says one observer: "It should be a boon to sandwich salesmen."

Port Colborne Still Hopeful Of Playing Series

Port Colborne, May 1 (CP)— The Port Colborne Merchants, intermediate champions of the Ontario Hockey Association, were still hopeful Sunday night of arranging an unofficial Eastern Intermediate title series at nearby Fort Erie.

An Eastern Intermediate title series has already been arranged between Bagotville Allies and Rouyn Flashes, in the belief Port Colborne was through for the season. Port Colborne has declined to travel east in search of further honors but Tommy Bates, secretary-treasurer of the club, said Sunday night he has been in touch with the Bagotville club and the latter would probably be willing to play another series at Fort Erie or Port Colborne. Rouyn-Bates said that Rouyn is not interested in another series if they beat Bagotville.

Fan Files Writ of Libel Against Ziegler

Toronto, May 1—(CP)—Edward F. Dennie, a hotel-owner, said Saturday he has filed a writ for libel against Joe Ziegler, manager of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League.

Dennie, asking unstated damages, claims that his season's ticket for games at Maple Leaf Stadium this year was cancelled for reasons so far inadequately explained.

He said he filed application for two 100 seats. He received a letter from Ziegler March 4, rejecting the application.

Dennie said he was accused in the letter of "unbecoming conduct both during the ball season and during the off-season."

He said he has been a Toronto fan for many years and that his conduct has never been "unbecoming."

"The only possible complaint anybody could have is the fact-I'm a real rooter. I like to let the players know I'm there. But I don't

When I arrived the boys were cackling a bullfest over this deal:

South had been declarer at three no-trump. West had led diamond seven. South king won his east queen cover, East accepting the south club king lead and next took enough diamonds to finish the bid.

Claim was that south made a 600 play by taking east diamond queen. An expert south, it was contended, should refuse to win east diamond queen and hold up king-jack for one round.

East return or diamond nine is then covered with the jack. West gets no more tricks if he ducks. If west cops the jack with the ace, south king has the diamonds locked up.

South defended his act by saying: "My eyeballs were not in my opponent's lap. So, I did not know he had club ace. Now you guys see my side of it if the club ace was in west."

"Give west club ace," he continued, "and my ducking of diamond queen would be silly. West would win the return diamond and force my last diamond. He would then get in the club ace and ruin me."

"By taking the first trick," he went on, "my luck is still a protector. West can take my club king with the ace if he has it. But my diamond jack still protects that suit if he leads it."

Both sides had good points. But what amazed me was that nobody said the contract was wrong. Experts are funny that way. They are all as brilliant in the play of the cards, they like no-trump contracts.

In reaching this contract of three no-trump, south opened the bidding with one no-trump. His partner never overcalled over suit. And neither made any effort to show their spade combination.

If a pair belongs in a no-trump contract they will get there by correct rule bidding. And correct rule bidding asks a player to first show his biddable suits, if any. No fooling.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Telerluff is a word I have just coloned up. It is available without charge to all accredited dictionaries. In a radio a fluff is a mistake or boner which is usually laughable. One of the most famous occurred when an announcer introduced the former president of the United States as "Mr. Hoobert Heever."

One of the most noted telefluffs occurred a few weeks ago. Art Baker, the benign character of the movies and radio, was about to introduce a movie. He was trying to think of the star's name and without warning said, "What the hell is his name?"

Misced Cue

At another station one day a program was switching from the studio to the ballpark for a baseball game. The picture got there, but the sound didn't. An unknowing announcer at the studio remarked "Where the hell is my cue sheet?" and his words came out of TV loudspeakers.

"Complaints lit up the telephone switchboard like a Christmas tree," recalls a studio official.

Props can provide laughs, too. On a cooking show, Mike Roy was demonstrating a strawberry shortcake. He tried to put on whipped cream with an automatic squirter, but the thing wouldn't work. He shook it up and whipped cream blew the strawberries off the cake and squirted all over Roy and the camera, too.

Frozen Ad

In another case, a beauty was hired to read a one-minute commercial for a canned product. The gal rehearsed for five hours, but when her big moment came she froze. She was too stunned even to read the label off the can she was holding and the audience was treated to one minute of silence.

In another commercial - television mishap an announcer was spieling about an unbreakable drinking glass. Suddenly the glass slipped from his hand and fell to the studio floor in a shattering crash. Needless to say, the sponsor cancelled the next day.

Frozen Ad

In another case, a beauty was hired to read a one-minute commercial for a canned product. The gal rehearsed for five hours, but when her big moment came she froze. She was too stunned even to read the label off the can she was holding and the audience was treated to one minute of silence.

In another commercial - television mishap an announcer was spieling about an unbreakable drinking glass. Suddenly the glass slipped from his hand and fell to the studio floor in a shattering crash. Needless to say, the sponsor cancelled the next day.

Dr. Endicott Says He May Have Been Misquoted

Toronto, May 1. (CP)— Dr. James Endicott suggested Sunday that perhaps the Soviet Press had misquoted him.

Recently returned from a one-month tour of Russia, Dr. Endicott took exception to statements made about him by External Affairs Minister Pearson in a speech Saturday in Montreal.

Mr. Pearson read an excerpt from a Moscow newspaper quoting Dr. Endicott as saying that while Moscow represented peace, in Canada airfields and military bases were being built instead of apartment houses.

Dr. Endicott said the statements to which Mr. Pearson referred were made at a press conference "at which there was lots of give and take" but "at no time did I ignore present conditions in Canada and Russia."

"If the reports say that, I was misquoted. Soviet workers are as human as any others about sometimes getting their facts wrong. What I did say was that I had seen enough of the enormous construction program in Russia to convince me the Soviet needed peace."

Book Exports Earn Dollars

London — (CP) Books—mere, second-hand and new—are earning dollars for Britain.

Increased business with Canada and the United States is reported by many booksellers since devaluation of sterling. It is mostly the documentary or non-fictional type of manuscript that is in demand.

One west end London book firm reported a 25-percent increase in business with Canada and the United States.

Thousands of former inmates from France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Britain, Austria and Germany joined in dedicating a statue to the camp's dead outside the former crematorium.

BBC Streamlines Religious Period

It's the idea of Rev. Francis House, who wants to widen the scope of radio in bringing the church into the home.

Rev. Joseph McCulloch of Warwick preached on a recent broadcast. Taking "treasure seekers" as a theme, he said "a treasure hunt lurks in every one of us."

With the aid of the BBC drama repertory company, he showed how, ever since Adam and Eve, mankind had dreamed of money, power and fame or some elusive treasure.

Answer to Saturday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was looking at the movie ads to see what picture she wanted pop to take her to, saying, Do you like the sound of Minerva Marshall in "I Wait Forever."

No I don't, that's a sad sound, pop said, and ma said, Now William, and pictures are better for you than funny ones.

How do you make that out? pop said, and ma said, Because people laugh at nothing, but if a picture really makes them sad, there must be something worth while in it, or else there wouldn't be anything to cry about.

Yes gods, that's a deep one, pop said. Anyway, I happen to know the story of "I'll Wait Forever" because I read a review of it. So I'll tell you what it's about, and you can decide whether you'll enjoy it, he said, and ma said, Well, all right, but I don't see how a ---- can enjoy anything.

She's good in this all right, pop said. She's a model of faith, hope and charity. Her boy friend goes of on a dangerous expedition to the head of some place or other, and promises to write her as soon as he reaches the ferst outpost of civilization. But the week lengthen into months and the months into years, but the letter fails to show up, and so does the boy friend. Minerva waits trustingly and loyally, but still the mailman greets her every day with a sad shake of his head. Minerva's hair shows streaks of grey, although her eyes and teeth retain their old sparkle, and still she waits, and still the mailman, now middle aged himself, passes by empty handed each morning.

And then one fateful day the letter arrives, pop said.

Oh, and the 2 are married in the end? ma said, and pop said, Well yes, but the 2 are Minerva and the mailman.

Oh hush and keep quiet, now I insist on seeing that picture, ma said.

THREAT OF PHONE

In calling off their strike against the Bell Telephone System's manufacturing and supply unit, the Western Electric Company, the C.W.A.'s Division 6 decided to return to contract talks along with 23 other union divisions. The negotiations are with the Bell System's parent corporation, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and subsidiaries.

Want Workers Re-Instated

One condition of the back-to-work agreement was reinstatement of 104 workers at South Bend, Ind., who had become an issue in the strike call. They had struck in support of six men in the "muddy field" incident. The six men had refused to walk across a muddy field to their jobs on a television tower and were threatened with dismissal. The 104 South Bend workers then left their jobs and two days later with the case tang an important place in negotiations, the strike was called.

The 250 teletype operators and 35 equipment maintenance men in 25 United States Bureaux of the United Press struck for a wage increase of $6.50 a week after first asking a boost of $15 a week. The company offered $2.20.

Continue Transmission

Officials of the news service told its newspaper and radio clients that transmission of news would be continued with employees from other departments taking over the work of the strikers.

Negotiations in the Chrysler strike had been hammering at a settlement formula, for more than 40 consecutive hours. Federal and state mediators indicated that by staying at the job, terms might be reached today.

The New York apartment house service dispute was tossed over to a fact-finding board but with the agreement that either side may reject the board's recommendations.

The Building Service Employees International Union (A. F. L.) had asked a pay rise of $2.75 a week, a pension - welfare plan and a reduction of the work week from 48 to 40 hours. Present wage is from $43.50 to $50.32 a week.

ONTARIO MAYORS

Oppose Increase

The Association approved resolutions opposing any increase in hydro and telephone rates; urging legislation to prevent railway crossing accidents; requesting the Ontario government to take advantage of Alberta and Nova Scotia fuel sources to assure a regular supply; asking the government to restore municipal authority to issue provisional birth and death certificates and to increase municipal grants.

It took no action on a resolution from the United Auto Workers Union (C.I.O.-C.C.L.) calling attention to what it said was discrimination against Negroes. It also tabled, without comment, an Oshawa resolution urging legislation to prohibit Sunday "cultural and educational performances" and one from the Ontario Municipal Electric Association warning of danger to lives and property in the erection of high television aerials.

BERLINERS JEER

Civilians Beaten

After the incident, West-Berlin demonstrators seized two East sector civilians and beat them severely, one of the victims was a photographer. West-Berlin police reserves, answering a riot alarm, dispersed the unruly elements.

British and American planes and helicopters over the central part of the city, with observers ready to radio the word to their quarters at the slightest sign of disturbance.

West-Berlin organizers charged that at least another 30,000 persons had been held back forcibly from the rally of Communist police at Soviet sector borders.

This huge demonstration climaxed thunderously at every mention of "freedom for Berlin from Communist tyranny," for calls for a united Germany and restoration of the eastern territories which have been given to Poland by Russia.

Thousands March

In East Berlin, massed thousands of communists marchers carried flags and portraits of Stalin and cheered attacks against the "Western war mongers."

In contrast to strolling crowds streaming into the western sector at the Tiergarten, the demonstration in the east was organized to the minute.

The east zone government put on a show by its "police" which the west claims is a Soviet-sponsored army. Four thousand east zone police marched by in military formation led by a band.

These were followed by thousands of communist youth, marching 24 abreast.

THEME OF

Everything Quiet

In Canada, everything was quiet as leftist organizations observed the occasion with parades and meetings in most of the larger cities.

At Montreal one man was arrested for carrying a banner—a paper-mache torch—in a May day "memorial" service in Dominion Square sponsored by the Youth Assembly for Peace.

At Toronto, 600 persons attended a May day rally sponsored by the Labor-Progressive party. Police watched as the party's two Ontario members of the Ontario legislature J. B. Salsberg and A. A. MacLeod addressed the outdoor meeting.

While thousands of demonstrators surged up to both sides of the line which divides Berlin between the western allies and the Russian occupation forces, there were minor incidents in scattered places where east Berlin communists and west Berlin anti-communists met.

In Potsdamer Platz where the western sectors meet the Soviet sector of the city five thousand west Berliners, massed about east zone police, the police retreated and reinforcements were called up from both sides to disperse the crowds.

Quickly Dispersed

In the border district between east and west Berlin 300 communist followers attempted to stage a demonstration on their way to their own rally, but were quickly dispersed by the western police.

Speaking in front of the burned-out Reichstag, rallying point of the western anti-communist Berliners, Ernst Reuter, European representative of the American Federation of Labor, and Berlin workers were fighting to preserve "an island where human decency and individual liberty can survive."

The Soviet troops were reviewed in Moscow by Gen. S.M. Shtemenko, chief of the general staff. He told cheering throngs the Soviet army and navy, together with the Russian people, are "convinced of their might and ready to defend their beautiful motherland from the encroachment of any aggressor."

Breaks Blockade

Yugoslavia's independent communist celebration—minus the pictures of Stalin featured in the Soviet satellites—was touched off by a triumphant declaration that Premier Tito's regime had broken through the soviet-conform's blockade of nearly two year.

The proclamation by Yugoslavia's communist party central committee charged a "hostile" Russia with organizing the blockade when the Tito regime was driven out of the cominform after failure to toe the Moscow line.

"Nationalist - Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, in May Day address, blasted Red China's leaders and urged wars now being under the new communist regime to fight with sabotage and strikes. He declared his beleaguered Nationalist forces on Formosa so fighting the Russians as well as the Chinese communists.

Riot in Tel Aviv

Bitterness between Communists and anti-communists in Israel caused a riot Saturday night in Tel Aviv. A crowd carrying the blue and white flags of Israel broke up a meeting of communists singing the International. Several persons were injured.

London had no parade because of a ban, passed last year, on all political demonstrations.

Several thousand workers in Rangoon, Burma, paraded with pictures of Stalin, Lenin, and Mao Tze-Tung and with banners calling for an end to British control of the big Burma oil company.

Austria's anti-communist socialist youth opened the May Day celebrations in Vienna Sunday night with a torchlight parade around the Ringstrasse which circles the old city. They charged "Austria will never become a people's democracy" as they passed the Soviet headquarters.

Denies Budenz Story At Loyalty Hearing

Ex-communist leader Earl Browder is pictured as he testified Thursday at the U. S. Senate loyalty investigation. The 58-year-old Browder told investigators that he has never met or even seen Owen J. Lattimore during his time in the communist party. He denied as "false" the testimony of Fordam University Professor Louis Budenz that Lattimore was commended at a red leading for promotion in the communist line. — Central Press Canadian.

Federal Aid May be Given To Flood Victims

Rescued at Emerson

Army Duck Churns Water

Waterlogged Southern Manitoba is bracing itself for what may be the highest level in 125 years. Already at Emerson, where the Red River enter Canada on its downstream course toward Lake Winnipeg, the reading has topped that record in the 1897 disaster. Not since the legendary flood of 1826 has there been so much water in the valley, fed by the melting of an unseasonable spring snowfall. The Red has risen to 46 feet above datum. As damage mounted in the valley's weekslong battle with the relentless Red, the federal government promised to investigate the possibility of federal aid. — Central Press Canadian.

Fanatical Douks Fire Buildings

Nelson, B. C., May 1 — (CP)— A Doukhobor winter community near the international border was reported by police Sunday, breaking a skein of peaceful days in fire raiding by radical elements of the religious sect.

Police said no arrests have been made. A small number of young persons were observed around the fire and questioning, police said, disclosed the building was fired to indicate agreement with similar instances further north.

Main incendiarism has occurred at Krestova, "capital" of the radical Sons of Freedom Movement, 23 miles from here.

By Alice Ross Colver

"Yes, I'm just out. But I'm still privileged to wear this outfit a while longer."

"You did an extra stretch after the war ended?"

"Yes." The sir of his army training rose to his lips but he held it back. He had seated himself with a deliberate nonchalance astride a straight chair, his arms along its back, and was now squarely facing his inquisitor.

"Where were you?"

"China. Burma. India. After that, wherever they sent me. But mostly in the States."

The Judge's glance touched the captain's bar. You did very well I see."

"Well, starting from nothing, perhaps."

There was a sudden gleam under the heavy brows, then Steven asked evenly, "and now?"

Gerry smiled and the bright mockery crept into his voice again. "That, of course, is the question, isn't it?"

The Judge has a way of demanding that we face it."

Gerry shrugged. Well, I've always had a way of facing the future. "And," he added, making a few demands of it."

"And this time?"

Gerry rose so abruptly, that his chair crashed to the floor. He did not stoop to pick it up.

"I didn't come here to curry favors if that's what you want to know!"

The Judge rose too. "I want to know only what you want to tell me."

Gerry stared at him and then laughed a short, bitter laugh. "Yes, I can imagine that! Let the past stay buried eh?"

Into the elder man's face flashed a curious expression that Gerry couldn't decipher, or, indeed, be sure he had actually seen, so quickly was it gone. It was like a crumbling of established defenses—astonishing to a true. But the next moment there was only the remembered austerity, softened perhaps, by the tiredness of years.

"I would rather not quarrel with you, Gerald. I . . . well, age is creeping up on me and I no longer have a taste for battle. I particularly dislike any disturbance beneath my own roof-tree. I wish to emphasize that." He paused. "Now if I can help you at all, I shall be glad to." He paused again. "I mean to say that that if you have no place to stay tonight . . ."

"There's no inn down in the village isn't there?"

"Of a sort. But it's not very good. If you care to, for a night or so, we have a guest room."

Gerry stood straight and tall and smiling his defiant, mocking smile. "It may be a surprise to you that the family pride runs even in my blood."

"As you like."

"Is that all, then?"

"That's all."

Gerry bowed. At the door, he turned. "You have a very charming granddaughter,' he said, and was gone.

And downstairs in the conservatory, Susan was saying to Frank, "I don't care what he was! You don't actually know, anyway! The whole point is he's different now. And it's now that himself. Why do you all have to be such fuddy-duddy's? Why can't you be decent?"

It was hours later. The party was long since over, the cars all gone from the parking area and the lower part of the great house dark. But in every bedroom upstairs lights burned behind drawn shades.

Elizabeth, fully dressed still saw that she had discarded her silver slippers, reclined in contented discomfort on her pink-cushioned chaise-longe with her aching swollen feet elevated on a soft pillow. The network of tiny lines that crisscrossed her square face had grown more marked with the evening's awful worry that she appeared now fully ten years older than she had earlier. She was saying to her husband. "You're so quiet Why don't you talk? Why don't you tell me if you found out anything about him? About his plans? So that you know what to do?"

Steven King shook his head. He was standing by the fireplace his tall, spare frame slightly bent his arm on the white enamel, his gaze on the flickering flames below. His lean, deeply grooved, scholarly face reflected her acute pity, but with a difference. For there was a kindness underlying his trouble, a concern for the ethics of his attitude which did not disturb her at all. Gerry had always affected him this way, his thought now in reluctant memory.

Elizabeth lifted one of her hands in a short, impatient gesture which she suddenly checked. She had been thinking how often men were stupid. Even Steven. And always just at the moment when she relied on his intelligence the most. And if he could not see ahead now, no one could. Frank was no help at all. If do it was best to give him a little more time.

She said, "I never felt so helpless in all my life as when he danced off with Susan like that! If I hadn't been afraid of making a scene . . . but the impudence of him!"

Steven looked at her without seeing her. He was seeing himself in Gerry's place and trying to be fair. He answered, "An impudent, perhaps. Just young."

He added after a second, "and human."

"Now, Steven, if you're going to be like that!"

He passed a hand across his forehead. "I have to be what I am, Elizabeth," he told her and paused a moment. Then he went on, more to himself than to her. "And sometimes! have to be what I'm not. That's the devil of it."

"Steven!" His wife's voice held a firm clarion note. "You must not dig up old regrets. Its weak. It's a waste of time. And it's useless. Besides I won't have it."

A faint rueful smile crept into his gray eyes. How like her to think she could control his private thoughts. But it was probably his fault that she did because once he had let her do just that.

The Judge's mind went back—

REFUSES TO BAPTIZE INFANTS

Rev. Wilbur M. Crandall of Bethany, Ont., refuses to baptize infants, and has started a theological controversy in the area. Many parents object, want their children baptized. The 36-year-old United Church minister is content with Paul's creed: "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel."

Satellites Will Break Away From Kremlin on Stalin's Death

--Hoffman

Washington, May 2. (CP)—Paul G. Hoffman, Marshall plan administrator, today predicted that Russia's satellite states will break away from the Kremlin upon the death of Prime Minister Stalin.

In that event, "we will see the crack-up of the most evil dictatorship the power of which is menacing the world," he said in an address before the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"The power of a dictator has never yet been passed on to a successor without a period of great turbulence," the Recovery Chief said.

"I predict that such a period of turbulence will come to Russia and that when it does, the satellite states will break away from the Kremlin just as Yugoslavia has already done."

Hoffman spoke after the president of the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) told the gathering of business leaders that, to win a stable peace, the United States must spend "not a million, arriving here without a nickel," he laughingly commented.

Later, in lighter vein, he told newspapermen that "cabinet ministers usually have nothing less than a dime while judges having nothing more than a nickel."

Hon. L.B. Pearson Hasn't 'Nickel' For Parking Meter

The Hon. Lester Pearson, Canadian External Affairs Minister arrived here yesterday without a "nickel" in his pocket.

Driving his own car from Ottawa to hear a Rotary Club address engagement, the minister found to his dismay that he had no change for a parking meter.

He hurriedly looked up a friend, Alfred C. Anderson, who came to his rescue with the required funds.

Mr. Anderson, belonging to a government that worries about doubling the price a million, arriving here without a nickel," he laughingly commented.

Later, in lighter vein, he told newspapermen that "cabinet ministers usually have nothing less than a dime while judges having nothing more than a nickel."

Believes Russia Has Set Date for Attack

Wichita, Kas., May 2 — (AP)—Gen. George C. Kenney, four-star United States Air Force General, said Monday he believes war with Russia is coming, with Russia as the attacker. Kenney, Canadian-born wartime head of allied air forces in the Pacific, declared Russian leaders "probably" have gone as far as to set a year for the attack.

Try to Help Child In His Own Home

Toronto, May 2 — (CP)—Alcoholics are not the only ones to fathers and Children's Aid Society officials here find it advisable, in some cases, to leave children in homes where a parent is a heavy drinker.

It is essential for a child, if he is to develop normally, to keep his strong family ties if he has them, Stewart Sutton, Children's Aid executive, said in Toronto today.

"This doesn't mean we leave all children in unsatisfactory homes," he said. "We don't. But when we do leave them there, we try to help the child right in his own home as much as we can before doing.

"You know, sometimes alcoholics are good fathers and, if they are, we leave their children with them. On the other hand, some sober people can be vicious and offer their children little love.

PASSENGER SHIP READY

Owen Sound, May 2 (CP) — Owen Sound's newest passenger vessel the Norgoma, arrived Monday from Collingwood where it was built. The 1,400-ton, 1,345 ton vessel will run between here and the north shore, replacing the Manitoulin retired last year.

MANITOBA FLOODS HOLD SPOTLIGHT IN PARLIAMENT

Western Oil Pipe Lines Again Debated

Ottawa, May 2.—(CP)—The disastrous Manitoba floods held the attention of the Commons through an afternoon and part of a night sitting Monday and then members got going again on the subject of western oil pipe lines.

The floods debate, initiated by Rene Jutras whose Liberal constituency of Provencher is mostly under water, was entered by almost every Manitoba member of the House as it drew from the government these statements:

1. Justice Minister Garson, as Manitoba's representative on the Cabinet, said the floods had not reached their peak and no one knew what the damage would total except that it would be in millions. The government would wait for the total picture before announcing possible federal assistance.

2. Acting Revenue Minister Winters said sympathetic considerations would be given to cases of late filing of income tax returns—the deadline was Monday—and to cases in flood areas where the taxpayer could prove particular loss or incompetence beyond his control.

Discussion on the bill to incorporate the Alberta Natural Gas Company, which seeks to build a pipe line from Alberta to the Pacific Coast, went to its usual stalemate. The bill now is in committee stage and the debate produced an open clash between Prime Minister St. Laurent and Howard Green (PC—Vancouver-Quadra).

Witnesses Say Gate Not Lowered

Welland, May 2 — (CP) —Two witnesses testified today that level-crossing gates had not been down when a car and a C.N.R. train hit April 23 and killed three women.

After the witnesses were heard, the hearing was adjourned until May 16 to enable Harry Hodgins, driver of the train and only survivor of the crash, to testify. Mr. Hodgins is still recovering from head injuries and a broken arm.

Fred Pawson said he could hear the crossing bell ringing as he approached. He said he saw the Koroway truck. "I stopped, looked both ways and saw the collision," he said. "The gates were up."

He added that he heard the bell for lowering of the gates as he neared the crossing.

Albert Bedard said he was 20 feet behind the truck. He said the gates were up as the truck went over the crossing and was struck by the train.

How Big is This Russian Family? 71 Beds Make Neighbors Guess

By JOHN RANDOLPH

Glen Cove, N. Y., May 2 (AP) — How many beds does a Russian family need to stay happy?

It's even got the United States State Department whistling the Glen Cove Welcome Blues. The fair could turn into a diplomatic nightmare and set the United Nations tossing and turning.

The question began in Glen Cove's strict residential zoning laws.

The town began to open its eyes the other day when Soviet U. N. Delegate Leonid A. Morozov rented the old 47-room J. P. Morgan mansion for the summer at $3,850 a season.

Glen Cove's slumbering suspicions were definitely aroused when it watched van after van of Morozov furniture arrive.

One Glen Cove expert, Lawyer John Finn, Jr., managed to mingle with the movers and do a little mental arithmetic.

He counted 71 folding beds, 67 canvas chairs and eight big cafeteria tables.

"To Glen Cove it all added up to one horrid thought — a bedding Russian summer resort in their suburban paradise. Yet all the house deeds are clear on this point: one house, one family.

It's true that the town has not found out exactly how big the Morozov family is. But still it's a lot of beds.

The State Department in reply to a letter from Finn's fellow Rotarian said it has suggested that Glen Cove invite the Soviet Ambassador to U. S. Ambassador to the U. N., and tell him their troubles.

Finn, who is a Democrat set down to draft the letter, another piece of news reached them.

They heard that Jakob Malik, Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister, has rented the $100,000 Reynolds estate about a mile from the Morozov mansion.

The Reynolds house has 24 rooms.

Now Glen Cove is wondering how many beds Malik is going to need to keep fresh and fit.

Russia Exploits Hunger Of Democracies for Peace Pearson Tells Rotary Club

Exploitation of the democracies' hunger for world peace is one of the worst features of Russian policy, the Hon. Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Minister for External Affairs, said in a Rotary Club address here Monday.

Part of this "devilishly astute feature" is seen in the "Peace Movement" in Canada, in which "gullible" Canadians and others and which he said was being manipulated and exploited by the dark forces of communistic imperialism, using local spearheads for the purpose.

"The Russians," Mr. Pearson said, "are using the same technique in the political war as they did in a military sense in the second world conflict. They are provoking crises the world over so the democracies must spread their forces thin and not be strong enough at important points of contact.

"In Berlin" he said, "they tried to make air-lighted one vision and when we took measures to meet their policy, they started a psychological war on 1,000 miles away."

"We need a steady nerve and total diplomacy so that we can be ready at all points of the front."

Fact Best Reply

The North Atlantic Pact is the best reply to Russian aggression the democracies have yet been able to give in the political field, he said. During the past year plans for military defences have been made.

"He suspected", he said, "that at the meeting of the Pact being held in London next week, "we must face the realities of difficulties to convert plans into performance."

"I hope at this meeting we shall do more than create a military alliance. I hope we shall begin a social and economic process that will produce a North Atlantic Democratic union that will be above and beyond our sovereign states.

"Through the North Atlantic Pact, Mr. Pearson said, "we have convinced the men behind the Kremlin walls that if they attack one they attack all."

No Destroying Piecemeal

"And this time" he added, "the aggressor will know that he will not be able to destroy victims piecemeal."

The minister did not agree with the suggestion of a distinguished American, Herbert Hoover, that the countries of the world form a United Nations without Russian and its satellites.

"It would be a mistake," he said, "to drive the Soviets out of the organization. Perhaps in time they will drive themselves out but for us to do it would be a final and complete confession of bankruptcy of the U.N. organization. And I am not ready to admit that yet."

Mock 'Red Invasion' Staged As Object Lesson in Mosinee But Mayor Has Heart Attack

Mosinee, Wis., May 2. (AP)— Mosinee "communists" became loyal Americans again today, after a one-day mock revolution at an end.

But while they went back to preparing for belated trout fishing trips and other everyday activity, their mayor lay critically ill in hospital after suffering a heart attack.

Just as the town was about to be delivered from "communist" domination, at 8 p.m. last night, Mayor Ralph Kronenwetter, 49, was stricken.

Mayor Kronenwetter had participated actively in the "Red invasion," staged as an object lesson by the Wisconsin department of the American Legion.

He was the first to be arrested by the "counterrevolutionary" State Police troops.

They hustled him out of bed early Monday and rustled him from the house clad only in pyjamas and a bathrobe.

The day of oppression ended after 24 hours. Then the party. All traces of Monday's May-day demonstration went up in the flames of a huge fire. The blaze had flown above municipal buildings.

All who took part said the mock coup was a "success".

Mel Woodcock Retires After 47 Yrs. Service

Toronto, May 2. (CP)—Fifty-one years of railroading ended Monday night for Francis Melvin Woodcock as he stepped down as the Canadian National Railways train No. 15 from Montreal. He spent 47 years with the Canadian National Railways as brakeman and conductor. He is 65 today.

160 Game Birds Seized in Raid On Frozen Lockers

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) —More than 160 game birds were seized in a raid Monday on frozen food lockers by Metro Constables Mitchell Police. The birds were taken from 25 lockers in a suburban locker plant.

Toronto persons are said to be involved, but no charges have been laid yet.

Under the Migratory Birds Act and Ontario game laws, all game birds and game shot during the hunting season must be eaten or disposed of before March 31.

It is reported the raid followed a tip to the Toronto Humane Society.

29 INJURED IN RIOTING

Bombay, May 2 (Reuters) Fourteen communist and 15 of the jail staff were injured Monday in a "May Day" incident in the Thana District jail, 20 miles from here. Communist prisoners hurled brickbats at police after hoisting the red flag over the jail courtyard. Police baton-charged the demonstrators and removed the flag.

LABOR WINS SNAP TEST BY SINGLE VOTE IN HOUSE

Defeat Would Not Have Forced Resignation

London, May 2. (AP)—The Labor government Monday night won a House of Commons ballot on a minor issue by a single vote, beating back a surprise Conservative attack designed mainly to shake Labor prestige.

Parliamentary observers said an adverse vote on such a minor issue—a Conservative proposal for a £1,000 (S4,000) appropriation cut—probably would not have forced the government to resign.

The Conservatives, in committee of the whole, cast a tie vote of 269 to 269 after the conservative proposal to reduce the salaries of Transport Minister Alfred Barnes and his parliamentary assistants. The Labor Committee chairman, James Milner, broke the tie with a vote in the government's favor.

Prime Minister Attlee's government is known to be set on every vote on a minor motion since the February general election gave it a majority of fewer than ten votes over the combined conservative and Liberal opposition. Labor has won nine test votes, most of them on major "issues of confidence," since the new parliament met March 6.

Will Wife Follow Her Schedule?

Riverside, Calif., May 2 — (AP) — Don't follow her schedule, Mrs. George W. Ettinger warns wives divorce for the fourth time a husband who has spent 18 of his last 22 years in the penitentiary.

Ettinger, 37, is headed for San Quentin today after being convicted on bad cheque charges.

Prosecution officers told the court Monday that each time he married a new wife, she had divorced him and married someone else. But upon Ettinger's release, he always has shed her interim husband for a unsuspecting wife.

This has happened thrice since 1932.

Explained Ettinger to Judge O. K. Morton, "My wife loves me."

The probation report shows Mrs. Ettinger's initial marriage, nine marriages, eight divorces and six husbands. By trade she is an accounting clerk.

Steel Company And Union Reach An Agreement

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) — Agreement in principle has been reached on all major matters in dispute between the United Steel Workers of America, C.I.O., and the Steel Company of Canada (Stelco) at Hamilton.

Announcement of settlement proposals providing for a 13-cent hourly wage increase and other major items as pensions, hours of work, holidays and benefits, was made Monday by Louis Fine, conciliator for the Ontario Labor Department.

The proposed agreement runs two years.

Terms, still to be endorsed by a vote of the membership, include:

1. A 13-cents-an-hour increase, eight cents retroactive to April 1, 1950) and additional five cents, effective April, 1951. If accepted, this will boost the basic rate from $1.04 to a maximum $1.17.

2. A reduction in the work week from 44 to 40 hours, with time-and-a-half for the first three-and-a-half after an eight-hour day or 40-hour week.

3. A joint committee will be set up to study the present pension plan, now administered solely by the company. The plan now provides an all-male pay of $1,000 a year, but paying an average of $50 a month.

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE

An all-male jury ruled that Ross did not attempt to murder his eight-year-old daughter Sharon, Feb. 25.

Evidence showed Ross, after an argument with his wife, went into the kitchen with Sharon and attempted to cut the throat of the girl. Mrs. Ross called police and turned off the jets.

Atlantic Pact Countries to Spend More on Defence

Europeans Must Bear Greater Share of Proposed Increase

Washington, May 2. (AP)—Informed United States officials predicted today that the North Atlantic countries will agree to spend more money and effort on their defences.

They said a close-up look at the price tags on the master defence plan drafted earlier shows higher spending is needed.

State Secretary Dean Acheson is reported ready to urge quick action on an intensified defence program at the 12-power Atlantic Council meeting in London May 15—even if it means Europeans must increase their defence budgets.

Acheson believes, these officials said, that a stepped-up effort in the military field is absolutely necessary to put into effect the integrated defence plan worked out April 1 by the 12 defence ministers at The Hague.

The 12 nations have spent a total of $20,147,000,000 last year in their collective defence effort. The United States spent about 72 per cent of this financial load. Must Have Greater Share

Americans officials are convinced that the Europeans must bear a greater share of the cost of any proposed increase in effort next year.

President Truman already has announced he will ask Congress for a total of $13,500,000,000 for second year of military aid. Officials said it is unlikely, the president will request this amount during the next fiscal year.

A solution to the problem now being discussed informally in advance of the London meeting is for member countries to:

1. Increase their defence budgets where it will not interfere with recovery.

2. Revise planned military expenditures to eliminate "low priority projects" and make better use of available funds.

More Precise Picture

The reason for boosting western defence expenditures is not that the west fears Russian aggression more than it did a year ago, they said.

Rather they attributed it to the more precise picture of needs which western defence chiefs drafted earlier in a more generalized way.

Officials gave this breakdown of the percentage of their budgets that key western Europe countries now are devoting to military defence:

Britain, 20 per cent; France, 17; Belgium, 12; Luxembourg, 3; The Netherlands, 23; Italy, 25; Portugal, 21 Norway, 17, and Denmark, 14.

Scientists to Debate Authenticity Of Relic, the Holy Shroud of Turin

Rome, May 2 — (Reuters) — Eighteen scientists meet here today to debate the authenticity of the relic of the mysterious Shroud in the Christian world—The Holy Shroud of Turin, which is said to bear the imprint of the crucified body of Christ.

The ancient relic, the authenticity of which Roman Catholics are not required to accept, has been subjected to scientific research since the first photographs of it, taken in 1893, revealed impressed on the age-old cloth the faint figure of a man.

Each new meeting of scientists has opened up a controversy that revealed some new piece of evidence for establishing the relic's age.

The shroud is kept in an urn in the chapel of the Holy Shroud in Turin Cathedral.

Most doubtful element in the study of the relic is its early history. It appears to have remained in Palestine from the first to the fourth century, when it was taken to Constantinople (now Istanbul) and held there until 1204.

In that year Constantinople was pillaged and sacked during the fourth crusade. The shroud was taken to Cyprus and then, before Constantinople fell to the Turks in the 15th century, it was removed to Chambery in France. From there it was severely damaged by fire.

The history of the shroud during that time is obscure and contradictory. It passed from one family to another.

In 1578 the shroud was given to the Royal House of Savoy and taken to Turin where it has been treasured ever since in the cathedral.

In 1898 a Turpin photographer, whose name was Secondo Pia, photographed the shroud. He was amazed to find that his negative revealed a though primitive "positive," a human form.

The inquirist, it is said, has remained for centuries chemically fixed on the cloth, possibly through the combination of the oils and spices with which the body was covered for burial.

Researchers on the shroud have had few establishments:

1. It is a linen cloth, 15 feet long and 3½ feet wide, blackened by fire and scorched.

2. It bears the double imprint of a human form seen from the back and from the front, as though the body had been wrapped lengthwise over the body.

3. There are imprints of drops of blood on the forehead and on the nape of the neck.

4. Wounds, as of nailmarks, appear in the wrists and feet.

5. The back shows apparent signs of scourging.

6. A large blood stain is imprinted in the region of the heart, consistent with a lance-wound.

Possibility of an ingenious forgery cannot be ruled out.

FUCHS ON WAY HOME TO BRITAIN WHEN UNCOVERED

Ottawa, May 2—(CP)—Canada tipped Britain in 1946 about Dr. Klaus Fuchs, a top, German-born atomic scientist since convicted in Britain and sentenced to 14 years on charges of atomic spying for Russia.

The tip was given about the time Dr. Fuchs was returning to Britain four years ago from the United States where he had been in touch with the closest atomic secrets. British intelligence was told his was one of five British names found in an amazing notebook owned by one of 13 Canadians rounded up as suspects Feb. 15, 1946. The Canadian was one of six of those original detainees later acquitted.

The tip, disclosed in a statement Monday night by External Affairs Minister Pearson, the minister insisted it was Britain's duty not that of Canada — to follow full responsibility for investigation of those five names. The entire fraction of some 40 found in a small alphabetically-indexed address book. The other four, he said were "just names."

Mr. Pearson's testimony before the Commons committee on External Affairs narrowed to a people they possible leads in the theft of Diamond Harbor, South of Calcutta, it was announced today by Canadian and British police.

Inspector Ernest Higgins, Belgaile, Dr. David Shugar, Soviet Bernice, Fred Rosenberg, Eric Adams and Israel Halperin. Four others among those arrested have also were acquitted.

Citizens Obtain Many Bargains At Auction Sale

Bargains, bargains galore, are in store for residents of the city and district who this evening attend the auction sale being conducted by the local Kinsmen Club at the Belleville Memorial Arena.

First night of the mammoth auction was Monday evening when dozens of valuable articles ranging all the way from household furnishings to sporting and motoring accessories went under the hammer to the highest bidder.

Tonight will see larger items such as electric ranges, console radios, refrigerator, chesterfield, bedroom furniture and other valuable items which will be offered for sale to the highest bidder.

And there are bound to be bargains, for instance last night a $39.50 mantel radio went to the highest bidder for only $21.50.

Proceeds of hundreds of articles sold for as little as a two dollar bill.

Manufacturers and concerns all across Ontario as well as business firms in the city and surrounding area have contributed the hundreds of articles being offered for sale. Funds from the sale of these articles will go to assist the Kinsmen Club in the service work. And local auctioneers have offered their services as their own contribution to the effort.

So if it is bargains that are wanted, residents are advised to call around at the arena from tonight o'clock this evening. A dust purpose will be served, bargains galore will be effected, while at the same time the work of the local Kinsmen Club will be furthered.

"I hope that as you continue your studies you will realize you are part of a world society and that your opinions are based not on prejudice, not on facts and appreciation of the facts", the Hon. Lester Pearson, Canadian Minister for External Affairs, told the Belleville Collegiate students yesterday.

Mr. External Affairs minister briefly addressed the students in the school auditorium following his appearance before the Rotary Club and guests at the weekly luncheon.

May Day, he told the students, was a great day for the Communist international," but to us it means a day when workers display a solidarity that is born of freedom."

He said "taking off" this weekend, he said, to London where he will represent Canada at a meeting of the North Atlantic Council which has been called to carry out decisions made at Paris to align the free countries a little further.

Answering his own question as to why Canada should take part in the North Atlantic Treaty, the minister said that Canada learned in two wars that there was no safety in isolation; no security in remoteness. Mr. Pearson pointed out, added, "that the aggressor gobbled up its victims one by one, and because of that Canada, Australia, New Zealand, the United States and Great Britain decided to pledge in a pact, and that is the best defence against the forces of aggression."

"If we can maintain that pact and stand together, it will give the aggressor time to pause and think before he takes action," Mr. Pearson said.

Democracy Should Strengthen

"Preparedness," he said, "never brought about permanent peace. Armaments in the past have never assured a lasting peace. "We must give ourselves a breathing space to hold off the aggressor and in the meantime lay a more solid foundation for defence."

The progress we should strengthen themselves to the point where they will never be a temptation to communist aggression. By doing this they will have done something to prevent another war. History, establish a lasting peace for the world.

The Canadian government, he concluded, only does what its people want. It is up to its aligns its policies on public opinion, "and it's up to you, the people, to realize you are part of a free society and your opinions are based not on prejudice, not on facts and appreciation of the facts."

The minister was introduced by Frank Follwell, M.P. Hastings South with the appreciation of the students assembly and staff expressed by Mr. Wesley Reid.

Principal Reid presided.

Present on the auditorium platform were Mr. Pearson, Mayor Jack Allin, Miss Josephine Tickell, Chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. Follwell, M.P., Judge J. C. Anderson, W. J. Morrison, C.B.E., magistrate-resident, and Lieut. Col. E. A. Geen.

Confirmation and Dedication Rites Mark Important Day in History Of Wellington, Hillier Parish

Wellington—Special dedication and confirmation rites marked a special page in the history of the Anglican parish of Wellington and Hillier on Sunday.

In the absence of the Most Reverend John Vance, Archbishop of Ontario, confirmations of the churches of the village and Hillier filled the edifices to capacity for the two services.

During the morning service at St. Andrew's Church, Wellington, the Rev. Canon L. E. Davis, Kingston, following his address dedicated the new "St. Andrew's Chapel" and its furnishing. Also dedicated was a solid oak credence table, the gift of Mrs. George Noble, Stirling, to the memory of her parents, the late John and Zoa Shurie.

An augmented choir under the direction of Mrs. Dayton Murphy offered special music during the service. The large congregation was welcomed by the rector the Rev. C. P. Heaven.

First Confirmation

Its white spire rising into the afternoon sunshine, the new Hillier St. Church observed its first confirmation and dedication since its construction a few years ago. The handsome edifice is the successor to the church which was struck by lightning and burned on the eve of its 100th anniversary.

In traditional white apparel, a large class of candidates including several adults received confirmation at the hands of Archbishop Vance. The service was assisted by Rev. C. P. Heaven and Canon Davis. The altar was florally decorated with vases of snapdragons and ferns. A basket of Spring flowers, the gift of Mrs. Joseph Harvey, was placed to the chancel rail for the services.

Archbishop Lyons delivered an inspiring address to the candidates and congregation including on the importance of spiritual life and the tremendous significance of the church and her vital contribution to the world of today.

Dedication Ceremonies

Archbishop Lyons in an impressive ceremony dedicated the new Wilson Memorial stained glass windows, an oak credence table, the gift of Mrs. E. Mathews to the memory of her parents, and a Holy Communion cover and prayer and hymn books.

Following the service a reception was held in the basement of the church where tea was served by the Christ Church ladies. Among the guests were the Rev. A. S. McCourt and Mrs. McConnell, of Trenton.

Attending the bishop during the services and acting as ushers were the wardens of the church, Messrs. Warner McPaul and Walter Nind.

South Hastings Grain Club Organized

Last Wednesday evening, a South Hastings Grain Club was organized in the Department of Agriculture Boardroom, Stirling. It is also interesting to note that all members of the club are active members in Junior Farmer Associations of Hastings County, and possibly being slightly older than the average club age than for the other clubs in the county. Glenn Watson, Harold, was elected president; Bob Pulp, Stirling, vice president; John McComb, Belleville, secretary-treasurer; and Harold Detlor, Stirling, Club leader.

Mr. Stuart Bowman, Seed Inspector for the Production Service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, was guest speaker, and in his remarks pointed out the place of registered seed in modern farming, as well as showing why seed should be graded before being offered for sale. Mr. A. Thompson, Agricultural Representative, also showed a set of slides on the Brooklin Conservation Day. The boys, sixteen in all, have Beaver oats, and have set as their objective—100% completion for 1950.

Local Company Awarded Contract

The Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. of this city have been awarded the contract for the extensive coal handling system required at the new steam generating plant which the Ontario Hydro Commission is erecting in Toronto.

This equipment is in accordance with the designs of Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation, it was announced this Stephens-Adamson, both in Canada and in the States, have participated largely in Stone and Webster engineered projects.

While the local company were low bidders on this contract, the competition with Toronto companies was keen, and the company states that the good offices of Mayor H. J. Allin and Elmer Sandercock, M.P., were of substantial assistance in assuring that this business was placed with the local company.

A substantial portion of Stephens-Adamson business has consisted of export trade, but due to the dollar shortage this business has been almost entirely eliminated. Accordingly, operations at the plant have been curtailed and it was especially gratifying that this business could be placed locally.

GARRISON — In loving memory of our dear son, James Garrison, who passed away one year ago, May 2, 1949.
Sadly missed and suddenly

GENESAUK — In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Reginald Genesauk, who passed away one year ago today, May 2, 1949.
We had him for a little while,
But life with him was worth while,
His deep blue eyes, his patal skin,
His radiance that glowed within.
For he an angel from above
Was lent to us to give his love;
To show him smile and hear him laugh
And then to lose him was the saddest
Sadly missed and deeply mourned by Mum, Daddy, brothers and sisters.

HOGS

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) — Hog prices were not established at Stratford this morning.

At Hull, Que., hogs dressed Grade A delivered were up $1 at $28 and sales were made.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 2 (CP)— Selected industrial stocks were in strong demand as the season progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Mining issues continued heavy traders and western oils attracted considerable early attention.

Volume for the first three hours was 1,694,000 shares.

Powell River added a full point at a new high at 53 1-2 and Canadian Celanese was ahead a like amount at 36 1-2. Utilities, steels and papers were strong in the groupings while liquors eased.

Senior and junior gold producers dipped while small prospects traded heavily for some good gains. Jacuiet, Newlund, New Dickenson and Dulama were feature performers. Base metals brightened with Consolidated Smelters leading on a gain of a full point at 101 3-4.

Western oils tangled heavily with gains at their best early in the day. National Petroleum and Coastal Oil held the limelight as advances ranged up to 20 cents.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 2 (CP)— Cattle trade was a little slower with prices about steady at the Ontario stockyards this morning. Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing service were: Cattle 950; calves, 530; hogs 600; sheep and lambs 20. Left from Monday were 1,500 cattle.

Butter Prices Drop in City

Retail stores cut butter prices today as a result of the drop in wholesale floor prices.

Prices of grade A butter ranged from 56 to 59 cents a pound in the city inquiries from independent grocers and meat sellers revealed.

This constitutes a five to six cent drop from last week's prices when butter retailed at 62 to 65 cents a pound. Increased sales were reported in some cases.

Belleville Has Plenty of Good Accommodation for Tourists

For quite a number of years, more particularly since the war, Americans have found Canada an attractive place in which to spend their vacations.

Many come north to view the scenery; other to visit relatives and friends.

During their tour, two of the things that all of them desire are good accommodations and good meals courteously served. This goes for Canadian tourists as well.

Belleville has had its share of tourists, and will continue to do so as long as they continue to find conditions favorable. There are a number of excellent tourist homes in the city, foremost among them being the hotels.

As in the past, Belleville will put its best foot forward this year in impressing on the tourists the high standards of service which this district offers visitors from below the border and other parts of Canada according to J. F. Vanover, executive director of the Hotel Association of Ontario and chairman of the Chamber of Commerce tourist Committee.

Advance bookings and inquiries indicate that this tourist and vacation region will again cater to a large volume of visitors.

Belleville offers a total of 510 guest rooms accommodating approximately 1,000 guests daily at the height of the tourist season. The hotel, restaurant and roadside eating places have a maximum seating capacity of 1,350. There are 62 service clubs in this region, and a wide variety of shops, souvenir stands and other retailing services to cater to the visitors' daily needs.

The township and provincial department of highways advise that new road surfaces and road maintenance will commence as soon as weather permits, to assure our visitors of good highway and secondary roads transportation while in the Quinte district.

The season is officially opened this week with the observance of Tourist Service Week.

WON'T SEND DELEGATES

Oshawa, May 2 (CP)— Council Monday night said it did not favor spending $700 on transportation for two welfare board delegates to attend a social work conference in Toronto. Ald. Finlay Dafoe said there are 1,00 better ways to spend taxpayers' money.

Milton Gregg V.C. Guest Speaker For Hasty Pees

Department of Veterans Affairs Milton Gregg, V.C., will be the guest speaker at the reunion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment scheduled for Belleville over the Thanksgiving weekend.

This was announced at a meeting of the regimental association members of the city and district held in the Church Street Armories sergeants' mess last night.

Foundation of plans for the reunion will be held at a meeting called for May 15th in the Church Street Armories Sergeants' Mess. At the last reunion held here, upwards of 500 veterans of the regiment turned out. With a more complete organization and a revision of former arrangements, it is expected this number will be greatly increased.

An important feature of the forthcoming meeting will be the selection of tourist guides at the Belleville headquarters branch of the association. Other branches have been named after regimental officials or battles such as the Duffy Club of Peterborough, the Asoro Club of Toronto.

Major Cam Wallbridge was named chairman of a temporary committee to look into the matter. With him are associated Geo. Swaffer and Bob Scott. A report will be tabled at the May meeting.

FUCHS ON WAY

Mr. Pearson said that of the 436 names, 150 were those of people then living in Canada, 163 in the United States, five in Britain and 118 "entries were of a miscellaneous character." Canada made a "very thorough" investigation of the 150 names and had thoroughly investigated the owner and interviewed him about all the names.

When Gordon Graydon (PC—Peel) continued to press for facts about Canada's followup and duty, Mr. Pearson replied with heat: "Surely it was Britain's responsibility to investigate those five names when we gave them all available information and when we had to accept responsibility for 150."

Mr. Pearson said there is a growing feeling that there should be a new general admission of the United Nations of States wanting to join. This would go both for Russian satellites and such olher countries. He presumed, as Spain, Ireland and Portugal. Communist and anti-communist countries would be about even, lending hope to the chances of making a bargain with Russia over admission.

Canada obtained from her Embassy in Moscow "very interesting information indeed" but it all came from "above board" sources such as magazines, newspapers and travelling." The small Embassy staff travelled as much as the Russians would allow, but there were "vast areas" they could not enter. There was no "espionage or counter-espionage" in any of Canada's Missions abroad.

Mr. Pearson defended the $226,000 spent on the department's information division as a wise investment and said it was used to acquaint Canadians with international developments and to tell the world about Canada. If more money were available he would name press officers to some consulates in the United States and in Australia.

FLOODING

Other sections of Canada feel sympathy with the people who dwell along the banks of the Red River. The size of the stream is thought by a century and a half and one can understand the devastation which such a disaster can bring. In earlier days while it was able to heal heavy blows, it could not cause the havoc that it has been causing this year since in the past century and a half the countryside has expanded and developed. Cities have been almost deserted until the river will have to up all the fury which has been in its turbulent waters. Something of the disaster may be indicated by the fact that in one place the river was 46.18 feet above normal.

Many municipalities and sections of country in Canada have in the past been the victims of floods. Fractically every spring some parts of this wide open country under flood waters.

Last year it was British Columbia, whoelh felt the disastrous blows of flooding.

FISH AND GAME IN DISTRICT

Moist conditions in the woods due to continuous cool ther and scattered showers have had a good effect upon forests and the fire hazard remains very low. Settlers construction crews are urged by the officials of the partment of Lands and Forests in the Quinte district as where to complete as much of the brush burning as ible while conditions are safe.

A general meeting of members of Eastern Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence as far as Cornwall was carried recently and secured some data on the wild duck population. An estimated 7,000 birds were seen during the ey. At that time the weather made check on illegal ing operations difficult. However further flights will rried out in the near future.

An important meeting was recently held at Dorset at Forest Inspectors and departmental officials and superintendents of Indian Affairs. Progress was made in clarifying the situation respecting fishing in or near the Tyendinaga Reserve and it is reported that indications are very favorable for a clear-cut understanding and working basis this time next year.

39,000 young whitefish fry were placed in the Bay of Quinte near Big Island, Lake Ontario, and several other bays east and west of the hatchery. Fifty million eggs were collected during the pickerel spawning season. As the rest of Quinte was free of ice, pickerel in spite of the unstable weather conditions moved into the spawning beds. The peak run was on a somewhat smaller scale than last year.

Conservation officers met the usual problems but were glad that protection of spawning fish and reduction of spearing activities showed improvement over previous years. Additional enforcement staff was placed on ruty several rivers leading into the Quinte and Lake Ontario and added materially according to the report for the ing district, which credit for the improvement must be given, the report states, to the Belleville Fish and Game Association and Belleville newspaper publicity and full co-operation by the public.

Trappers have been generally disappointed with the muskrat situation, the scarcity being considered due to the South of No. 7 Highway where the season ended 21 instead of 31 and as much as 75 per cent reduction in the number of rats taken over any previous season in the last 30 years.

DIDN'T MAKE EARTH

For what it is worth, the Russians are now claiming they invented the art of printing.

All that now remains for the Russians to do is to claim they made the earth. In their amazing ignorance of Bible and its teachings, this is not beyond the realm of possibility.

The Soviets have already claimed the distinction of inventing the submarine, airplane, electric cable and the phone, as well as a host of other modern conveniences. Unfortunately for the Communists, substantiation for their claims other than vague references to prehistoric documents have the habit of turning up with the regularity of a forfeit $10 bill.

The document that is supposed to authenticate Russian claim to the invention of printing, has already been declared a forgery by Russian historians, who also say the supposed inventor, Smera, was an invented name.

The Soviet Literary Weekly, which made the revelation says it is untrue that the document is a forgery and Smera was an invented person.

It must have been a bitter pill for the Soviet periodical to swallow, however, that Smera was a physician to Grand Duke Ivan I, thereby recognizing a regime which the reds fully despised. — Sudbury Star.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Action Wanted On Construction Of New School

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

For some weeks now we have been watching, within our city's administration, a battle of wits between two duly elected bodies, viz the City Council, and the other the Board of Education.

Some months ago the Board of Education decided that the building of a new school on the East Hill was imperative, we children were to receive the education which was their due. We were told that the matter must proceed because our present facilities were hopelessly handling the increased demand for accommodation.

Plans were prepared by the appointed Architect, and tenders for the construction, were called for. When the tenders were opened, the contract was awarded to the second lowest bidder, at a figure in the neighborhood of $23,000 higher than that of the lowest bidder. Approval of the Ratepayers for the contract figure of $223,000 was requested of the City Council by the Board of Education, but the request was refused, by a majority vote, refused, giving as the reason that the contract should have been awarded to the lowest bidder, thus saving $23,000 and thereby the necessity of further increased taxes. As that was the only measure on basis upon which the members of Council, who were elected last fall, were pledged to run, for they were quite within their rights, and having the right to refuse to refuse approval, everything else being equal.

We contend that there is on the records of the City, an approval given by a majority of the same members of which are still on the Council, of a debenture issue of $300,000, for the erection of the construction of a new school, if this amount is required, and in the present instance the Council feels that this amount is not necessary. That is a matter, rightly or wrongly, and public opinion will of course be divided.

Various Arguments

In listening to the various arguments of both these bodies, it would seem that each is sure that it is right, correspondingly neither side will give; and in the meantime, the construction of the school which was so urgently needed, will remain in abeyance for the balance of the year, and further, money is going to be spent, whether we like it or not, for the purpose of renting space that coming fall to accommodate children for whom no room is available in our present school buildings. Further considerations over which the council has little control, and where the Board of Education alone has the power to spend.

Now, what are the Board's arguments against submitting the Council's contention that the lowest bidder should receive the contract?

In trying to sort out, from the higgledy - piggledy of the disputatious some sound arguments for standing by their guns, I find that the chief argument is that the contract not only calls for plans, and was to act as the Board's agent in the construction of the school, committee of the Board to the award as made. As to whether or not in what they did was an arbitrary one, or whether in fact the Board's final approval, is still a moot point, and some real clarification is due here. If the committee in his actions, has legally committed his sitting of the Board, then the Council is equally committed and we, the taxpayers, will be the losers.

Right as Individual

Further it appears that the architect advised the Board, in the event that the City Council could not supervise the construction of the school if the contract were awarded to the lowest bidder, the MacFarland Construction Co. Ltd. of Toronto, and individual is his right; but as agent for the Board it is questionable that his advice was right, for it is more likely that his expressed opinion is the lowest bidder was one to be swayed by very large measure the decision of the Board of Education, and thus create a situation, embarrassing as it is to all parties concerned, for two contractors in question, the Board, the City Council, and the citizens as a whole.

Perhaps it would have been better to refrain from comment on all further responsibilities, when his opinion was sought, and act as an engineer to supervise the construction. For certain it is, the MacFarland Construction Company is a financially reliable corporation, and would be competent to build according to the specifications submitted, even if competition were necessary, which I very much question.

On the other hand, the City Council emphasizes the usual competency and ability of contractor awarded as being to give the contract to the lowest bidder. I believe that to be an unsafe premise, for it leaves many loopholes for manipulation and so forth. However, where the bidders are equally responsible parties, and can guarantee fulfillment of the contract as awarded, then, without fear or favor, the contract should go to the lowest bidder. I believe I interpret that to be the feeling of the majority of the Council in its attitude.

No Progress Made

In the meantime no progress is being made on the construction of the school which is so urgently needed; we are being faced with added taxation to cover space which is not being used or receiving, and will receive a bill from the Board to cover the depreciation of the plans. We are now in a great state of flux, with presentiment that all is not right on the part of either Board or Council.

Supposing new tenders are called for? Does that mean a new set of plans to be tendered, involving still' additional expense? And supposing the successful Company is once again the lowest bidder? What happens then?

Perhaps the solution would be for the Board of Education to be no longer dependent on the part of the Board, but work down to business. Even if by and large all sessions until the matter is settled.

Dulles Declares Formosa Must Be Retained

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

John Foster Dulles, Republican foreign policy adviser to Governor Dewey says the capture of Hainan Island by the Chinese Communists calls for immediate action to retain the strategic island of Formosa out of their hands.

Why? Dulles doesn't amplify that but leaves us to figure it out. One obvious reason is that Formosa not only is Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's last headquarters but is the seat of what is left of the Nationalist government which Chiang set up after he lost the last bit of Chinese soil Chiang has for refuge.

If not supported the United States maintains the Nationalists on the island, Formosa probably would fall to the Communists. Then Chiang would have a chance of retrieving his position and reestablishing his power.

The Generalissimo maintains that he still controls the troops if he gets support. Here is the crux of his reasoning.

While the Communists ostensibly have "conquered" the vast mainland, the Nationalists claim they actually have many pockets of resistance which still are in hands of guerrillas who have no use for the Reds.

One estimate places the old Nationalist strength at 300,000 Yangtze Valley at 200,000,

Then there is another important aspect of the situation. It is essential that the Chinese Communists do not get control of the ist Government and military headquarters on Formosa for economic reasons.

A Chinese Nationalist official tells me that Formosa is rich and has 30 peasants to keep one soldier going. He estimates that the communists have more than 7,000,000 troops under arms. If Formosa can be knocked out, and the Generalissimo can be rendered helpless, the Reds can demobilize and thereby cut the tax burden which is so irksome to the Chinese.

In this connection the terrible famine which has developed during the Yangtze Valley is harsa by the Red regime. Reports have it that millions are facing death by starvation.

Montreal — (CP) — Dr. Adelard Groulx, ex1 health director, has asked restaurant patrons to act as policemen in seeing that city sanitary laws are enforced. "The public should point out any case of unsanitariness to the manager and the department of health," he said.

DANCING MOST POPULAR

Truro, N.S. — (CP) — When a youth centre was opened here recently teen-agers were polled as to the type of activities they would like carried on there. Dancing, including instruction, and softball topped the list. Least popular was boxing, and baggage instruction was low on the list.

DEFICIENCIES OF THE EVERYDAY DIET

Recently I said the reason why a great many persons don't feel as good as they would like to feel, even though they may have no present ailment, is that they do have malnutrition, nutritional deficiency. This common malnutrition, I believe, makes darkness out of millions and nostrum nibblers and freak "treatment" customers out of the rest. The nutritional deficiency to which I refer is due to inadequate daily intake of three vitamins (Thiamine, riboflavin, and D) and three minerals (iodine, calcium and phosphorus).

The shortage of thiamine (vitamin B1) in the everyday diet is due chiefly to the use of white flour, which contains very little of the vitamin that we get in wheat.

The shortage of riboflavin (vitamin G or B2) is due chiefly to the inadequate daily intake of milk. Milk products are the richest natural food source of the vitamin.

The shortage of vitamin D is due to the limited amount of D in common foods, even when rich cream, butter and egg yolk, the richest food sources of D, are not supply enough for optional nutrition unless exceptionally large quantities of these foods are taken daily.

The iodine shortage is almost universal throughout North America, except in a few localities where the water and food happen to contain a trace of it.

The calcium and phosphorus shortages are also due to the inadequate consumption of milk and allay wheat—milk and cheese being the richest natural food sources of calcium, and milk being one of the richest food sources of phosphorus. The phosphorus left in refined white flour, wheat, sugar, potatoes and other rich food source of phosphorus.

Mostly the best way to collect or prevent these nutritional deficiencies is by correcting the everyday diet after the correction, protective or dietary foods described in the booklet The 7 Keys to Vita. Unfortunately you have only a limited supply and one stamped self-addressed envelope for each request, send a stamped self-addressed envelope and ask for the pamphlet The Iodine Shortage in Your Diet. So is the pamphlet Young Folks and Old Folks but I hope that both pamphets inclose ten cents.

Practically it is difficult to persuade the modern housewife or cook to use plain wheat in place of even a part of the white flour so good as they would like to feel, even though they may have no present ailment, that they do have malnutrition, nutritional deficiency. This common malnutrition, I believe, makes darkness out of millions and nostrum nibblers and freak "treatment" customers out of the rest. The shortage of vitamin D is due to the limited amount of D in common foods, even when rich cream, butter and egg yolk, the richest food sources of D, are not supply enough for optional nutrition unless exceptionally large quantities of these foods are taken daily.

The iodine shortage is almost universal throughout North America, except in a few localities where the water and food happen to contain a trace of it.

The calcium and phosphorus shortages are also due to the inadequate consumption of milk and allay wheat—milk and cheese being the richest natural food sources of calcium, and milk being one of the richest food sources of phosphorus. The phosphorus left in refined white flour, wheat, sugar, potatoes and other rich food source of phosphorus.

Mostly the best way to collect or prevent these nutritional deficiencies is by correcting the everyday diet after the correction, protective or dietary foods described in the booklet The 7 Keys to Vita. Unfortunately you have only a limited supply and one stamped self-addressed envelope for each request, send a stamped self-addressed envelope and ask for the pamphlet The Iodine Shortage in Your Diet. So is the pamphlet Young Folks and Old Folks but I hope that both pamphets inclose ten cents.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Germicidal Lamp

P. T. A. is thinking about installing germicidal lamp in class room. What do you think of it? (M. R. B.)

Answer — Germicidal lamps have a limited field of usefulness. They are harmless and "safe" but they are known to work. Valuable in nurseries, they seem less effective in schools. Perhaps they cannot compensate for lack of observance of the established rules of hygiene.

Young Folks and Old Folks

Came here to care for my 85 year old father, a follower of your pamphlets for many years. Instead, he's taking care of me. Never looked so fine. Thanks a lot. Wish I had known about all this earlier. (Mr. J. W.)

Answer — Thanks for your self-addressed, stamped envelope. Glad you found the booklet "Young Folks and Old Folks".

Pain in Heart

Will a person who has gall bladder trouble have pains in the heart? (Mrs. H.)

Answer — Not unless some painful condition of the heart is also present. Pain emanating from the gall bladder may be mistaken for pain in the heart.

JACK MINER

For longer than I can remember, I've been interested in Jack Miner has been an inspiration. Recently Canada, and a goodly part of the world, has been celebrating and honoring the memory of this man who devoted his life to the conservation of wild life, and especially of the birds we all so much love, for without them a light of happiness would no longer shine.

Nearly fifty years ago was founded the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary, at Kingsville, Ontario, and now regularly Jack Miner's birthday, April 10th, is observed in Canada as a tribute to his unselfish, tireless efforts to save for mankind its friends, the birds. Some day a fitting memorial will be as extensive in the United States as in Canada.

I never met Jack Miner, but his life has long inspired me, and I have visited his beautiful Sanctuary and met his mother and sons. This one establishment has inspired scores of others of like nature in many part of America and the world. It has been the seeds upon thousands of birds, geese and ducks have fed, and the birds returned to him by hunters careful date have been established of great value in preserving life. The twiddling of the beaks and a series of Scripture texts and the address of the Sanctuary.

Jack Miner was a very religious man, and his religion was the religion of love, and all my undertakings, is God! Children loved him, and thousands visited him during his lifetime; and ever since have they loved to bring to him some of the birds by their visits.

When I visited this unique Sanctuary I was especially interested in the Hospital where the birds are treated. So well do birds, who have learned of their safety in this wonderful place, know it that many an injured bird flies there to be its hospital, where it is given a new lease of life. Jack Miner's life and work's life he devoted a large part of his time to lecturing and travelling all over the United States, seeking to arouse interest in the conservation of wild life.

Jack Miner left his all to this cherished enterprise, and contributions to the foundation come and go. But the name and the name of one of the most beloved men of the Canada and of birds would send their contribution—were they but human!

HANDICAP CAN BE A SPUR

There was a great English mathematician a generation or two ago by the name of Taylor. Before he reached middle life he became totally blind. He lived to a good old age and was greatly venerated among the students of the university in which he taught. Their admiration grew above everything else from their knowledge that the blind mathematician had evolved a system for teaching blind children mathematics. This system was taught in today still used all over the world.

What a consecration of affliction! This distinguished scholar might well have sat down in middle life when darkness descended upon him and spent the rest of his life twiddling his beacons and whining. Instead he lived a most active life. His influence extended to the ends of the earth. Furthermore, in the whole thing he himself was the one very happy. In his latter years he was a venerable looking man with a great mathematician, but still better, here was a great man, and best of all he was a great servant of humanity.

Every handicapped person people sometimes for compulsory service and less than ultimately idle immeasurable good.

CPR Will Lay Off 500 Shopmen

Montreal, May 2 — (CP) — Immediate layoffs affecting about 500 shop workers in Western and Central Canada were announced by the Canadian Pacific Railway today.

Vice-president N. R. Crump said in a statement:

"Lower rail traffic and consequent slackening in demands for equipment maintenance will cause minor reductions in the staff of C.P.R. repair shops, particularly back shops, throughout the system.

"Back Shops" are the shops where general overhaul and large scale repairs are carried out. Temporary repairs and general maintenance are carried out in "line shops."

Layoffs would be instituted immediately and would mainly affect temporary employees or those with less than six months' service.

Principal units affected will be main shops in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Some shop work will be conducted on a temporary basis, particularly in main shops where current maintenance requirements can be adequately provided for and service fully maintained on that basis. Present work week is 48 hours.

By the authoress of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

To salt or not to salt—that is the question.

Whether 'tis right to salt a chop before or after broiling has always been a debatable point and usually it doesn't make much difference, although the latest studies show that if you do not salt a chop before broiling, it have less shrinkage.

When you roast a large piece of meat, it makes little difference whether you salt it before or after cooking. Salt only penetrates the surface of the meat for a fraction of an inch. Salt added to the meat before roasting is often washed away away by flowing meat juices. If you salt the meat after it has been cooked, it will usually have a better chance of remaining on the meat.

Water to be used for boiling potatoes, spaghetti, noodles, etc., should be salted before food is added, since the food, in this case, absorbs the liquid.

The usual rule for salting liquids is 1 teaspoon of salt to a pint. However, this rule may be changed to suit individual tastes. Add salt to the boiling water before adding the spaghetti in the following dish.

Serves 4-6.

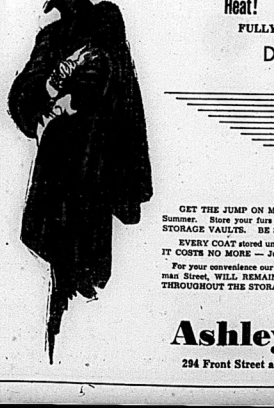
Melt 3 tablespoons chicken fat if desired, or vegetable fat in a saucepan. Add 1-4 cup finely chopped onion and 1-4 cup finely chopped green pepper. Simmer until onions turn yellow. Remove from flame.

Add 3 tablespoons flour, mixing well. Gradually add 3 cups of hot chicken broth or hot water in which 2 chicken bouillon cubes have been added. Add 1-2 spoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Return to a slow flame and simmer 5 minutes. Add 2 cups of diced cooked ham and simmer 3 minutes more. Set aside.

Drop the contents of an eight ounce package of spaghettini or thin spaghetti into 3 quarts of rapidly boiling water to which 2 teaspoons salt have been added. Stir well, and cook 8-11 minutes or until tender but not mushy. Drain. Rinse well in hot water. Drain.

Place a layer of spaghettini around edges of 4 individual baking dishes. Place ham mixture in centre of dishes and over spaghettini.



Sprinkle ham with grated parmesan cheese, about 1 teaspoon on each baking dish. Sprinkle lightly with salad oil and paprika. Bake under a moderate flame until cheese browns. Serve once. Cooked chicken, lamb or veal may be used in place of ham if desired.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Should a wronged wife tell the other woman's husband?

When a man is running around with a married woman, will it help any good for his wife to report the illicit affair to the other woman's husband?

The impulse to run and tell seems to be a very common one with wives who find themselves in this predicament.

One such wife, 43 years old, writes me that her husband has been having an affair with a young married woman of 30 for the past year. What seems to attract the husband is that the young woman accompanies him to bar rooms, that she "is cute and smokes", and that he has a good time when he takes her out.

"The more I think about it," writes the wife, "the more I think my husband should know what kind of woman he's living with. I know where they live. Do you think I should go and tell him? But she also want to know if I think it would help any if she were to take up smoking and drinking herself and accompany her husband to bars.

"We never did this before," she says.

The third question in her mind is whether or not she should leave her husband.

"I don't want to leave," she mourns, "but how can one go on living with a man so unfaithful? In the ten years we have been married, he has had affairs with women twice."

To her first question about whether or not she should go to this woman's husband, the answer, I should give her a definite no. All that could possibly happen if she were to do this, would be to make the situation worse. The fewer people involved in a mess of this kind the better.

I doubt very much if any woman who has this sort of idea really believes in her heart it could do any good. What she is really after, is to have the satisfaction of exposing the double-crossing wife to the man who supposedly loves and trusts her. It is revenge she has in mind, I think, far more than any hope of bringing about a change for the better.

I would say no again to her suggestion about starting to smoke and drink with the thought that this might re-arouse her husband's interest. If she did so, it would be completely out of character, and she certainly would not be able to turn herself all of a sudden into a gay and jovial drinking companion after years as a teetotaller. She would only be more unhappy than she is now, if she were to try any such thing.

As for whether or not she should leave her husband, that all depends on how much she still happens to think of him. She says she doesn't want to leave. What she obviously does want is to stay on, hoping that her husband will mend his ways and once again be the attentive and affectionate person he no doubt was when she married him.

Since this is what she obviously wants, then I think she should go on that way for awhile anyhow. But she should not wail in tears and gloom. I am sure her doctor would advise her to take part in some activities outside her home and occupy her mind with something besides her problems.

The whole matter boils down to the fact that she has not got anywhere in solving these by the attitude she has held up to the present time. Her best hope of achieving her objective is to make herself a more interesting person by going ahead on her own to enlarge her circle of friends and activities. If her husband sees that other people enjoy her company, he may come to believe she is more of a person than he had been giving her credit for.

DARKNESS GONE

Born blind, young Helen Heagle, of Cornwall, Ont., was able to see for the first time with the aid of thick-lensed glasses when she was 19 months old. At that age, she underwent an operation to remove cataracts from her eyes. Now 23 months old, Helen is just learning to walk. — (CP Photo.)

Fashion Flashes

STILL ANOTHER revival is that of white fox for evening wear. A very fashion-conscious trend-setter appeared at Palm Beach wearing a brief bolero done on curved lines with voluminous three-quarter sleeves. Both the design and the white fox made it look very new and different and a good choice for the all-white evening costume.

FLOWERS BLOOM in gay profusion in the hat world. White lilies-of-the-valley completely cover a poufle cap of moss netting. Two large white feather wings, one soaring up at the side, the other outward, at the opposite side point up the porfile line.

CLEVER HANDING of drapery is the keynote of a group of beautiful afternoon and evening clothes. Gray silk chiffon makes a beautiful evening dress on which a scarf drapery is carried up from a floating panel on the skirt, crosses the bodice, and then, reversing itself, frames the base of the neckline.

Deft Suit

BLUE gabardine is used for a smooth, svelte town suit. It has a rolled collar above the two buttons of the jacket, a line that tapers down to single button closing at waist. Curved seaming minimizes the waist and emphasizes the patched peplum. The skirt is slim with a slit in front and a small kick pleat in back. This is an outfit that lends itself to a variety of smart accessories of the more urbane type.

WELCOME for warm weather wear is a handsome line of fabric shoes. Red and white checked gingham makes a pretty ankle tied shoe, high of heel, the front vamp formed by two broad straps of the fabric. Nice in white and blue and red and blue checked gingham, too.

IT'S WONDERFUL how much styling and diverse detail can go into a brief topper. Beige and white checked wool makes a brief topper, cut on double-breasted lines, with high-closing and dropped shoulders. Coat is marked by a welt seam, deeply cuffed sleeves, and a flared back.

IT'S A WONDERFUL year for suits. Navy wool makes a suit that has a brief, curved bolero jacket, the classic collar and notched, pointed revers bound with black soutache braid, as is the big turnback flap of the slit skirt pocket. Blouse of white handkerchief linen.

GOOD MANNERS

Wedding Expenses

The wedding is given by the bride's parents . . . and the wedding is paid for by the bride's parents. They must decide what the wedding budget can be, and then, with the list of expenses in mind, they must decide upon what kind of wedding they can afford . . . what features they consider most important. . . . what they consider the wisest apportioning of the sum they can afford to spend.

Happily for most budgets, it is not so much the amount of money spent as how it is spent that determines the charm of a wedding. The secret of success is in using good, sure taste, in careful planning of time, in intelligent attention to every detail of the arrangements so that the estimated budget can be allocated with wisdom and grace.

The bride's parents pay for:

1. Bride's wedding costume.
2. Bride's going-away costume.
3. Trousseau (clothes, household linens).
4. Invitations and announcements
5. Presents to bridal attendants
6. Bouquets for bridal attendants
7. All expenses (except contribution to minister) connected with the church or wherever the ceremony is performed; flowers; music (fee to organist, soloist, choir); canopy and aisle carpet for the church (if necessary); fee to church sexton and his assistants.
8. All expenses of the reception or wedding breakfast, wherever it takes place, food, flowers, music, wedding cake, champagne or whatever is served to drink, service, fees, and so forth.
9. Transportation for bridal party to and from the place-of-the ceremony
10. Wedding ring for the groom (if required)
11. Wedding photographs.

The groom pays for:

1. Wedding ring
2. Marriage license
3. Wedding present to bride
4. These flowers:
   Bride's bouquet
   Bride's going-away corsage
   Corsages for both mothers
   Boutonnieres for best man, ushers, and for both fathers
5. Presents to best man and ushers. And usually (particularly for a formal wedding) their wedding ties and gloves.
6. Bachelor dinner (if he gives one)
7. Transportation for his best man and himself, from his home to the place-of-the-ceremony
8. Contribution to the minister
9. Wedding fee, if any.

Bride's mother to wear suit or dress?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to be married at a church ceremony at 2 on a Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with a reception following the ceremony, at an inn. Would it be proper for me to wear a suit? My daughter thinks I should wear a dress. Please decide this for me.

M. J. C.

It is the bride-to-be, your daughter, who has the privilege of deciding what she wishes you to wear, (1) so that you will be appropriately dressed for the type of wedding she is planning to have, and (2) so that you will wear what she considers the most becoming style for you and the most becoming color.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Good looks at thirty

One suddenly discovers that the size fourteen won't zip.

It is never too early to adopt "warding off" measures, as far as appearance is concerned. The teen-ager who is overweight isn't likely to sport a slender shape when she is older. The girl in her teens who doesn't wash her face thoroughly every night before she goes to bed may find herself beset with acne that can stay with her for years. If she doesn't brush her teeth there will be trouble ahead. This business of keeping well and attractive is a life-time job with no days off.

Thirty is an ominous milestone in the life of every woman. What she will be at forty, at forty-five —whether she will look young, middle-aged or even older than her birthdays—depends not on what she is doing at the present moment, but what she did in the way of insuring against ills during the years. Of course no twenty girl can visualize herself as looking any different, yet a weather eye on the future is a pulchritude must.

It is true that age-arresting work can be done on the bulky figure, on the face that has taken on lines, on posture that is not correct. But why let these calamities come upon one? It is easy to prevent them, difficult to cure them.

Around thirty is the time when the mid-section starts to thicken. One suddenly discovers that the cute size-fourteen won't zip, that one must graduate to sixteen, maybe eighteen. The reason? Not enough muscle activity. Fifteen minutes of bone-bending every day would have kept the muscu-lature strong and flexible. The little shelf abaft the feminine equator would never have formed. Take time by the cowlick, if you are in your late twenties.

It often happens that eyesight weakens along in the thirties. The idea of wearing glasses does not make an appeal. So the vain woman holds her reading matter at arm's length, has trouble threading a needle and what happens? Tired eyes, protecting themselves from strain, take no squinting, with the result that turkey tracks appear—the first signs of on-coming wrinkles.

Career girls in sedentary occupations must have a certain amount of exercise, preferably in the form of outdoor sports, if they are to retain the youthful complexion and the svelte shape. Teachers of physical education speak of chair defects, meaning hip spread, rounded shoulders, larger waistline.

It is not alone for the brisker step and the smarter carriage that exercise is essential, but for health itself. Activity is a law of life. We weren't meant to be loafers, and when we are we pay the penalty. The evidence of youth depart.

Up and at 'em, thirty girls! Fight Time and fight him hard.

Construction of Oil Tankers Helping to Ward Off Fear Of Recession in Industry

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 2 (CP)—British shipyards are feeling the magic touch of oil. More than half the merchant ships under construction are oil tankers.

World-wide demand for the black gold is indirectly filling the pay envelopes of thousands of British shipyard workers. It is helping ward off the feared recession in the shipbuilding industry.

On a recent visit to the Tyneside, Princess Margaret launched the first of 10 giants of 28,000 tons, the largest tankers ever built in European shipyards.

Experts see the day not far off when oil tankers of up to 50,000 tons will be hauling petroleum from pipeline terminal to refinery in industrially developed areas.

Keeping pace with tanker construction, big new refinery developments are going forward in Britain. At a cost of £125,000,000 ($377,000,000) refining capacity is being expanded eightfold from 2,500,000 to 20,000,000 tons a year. Shake Hands Symbol

Each of the new 28,000 ton tankers will make eight round trips a year to the Persian Gulf and bring back annually some 200,000 tons of oil apiece.

Six of the monster tankers, which cost about £1,250,000 each to be built, are for the British Tanker Company, shipping organization of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company. Four are for the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company of the shell group.

The contracts are being divided among the United Kingdom's four main shipbuilding areas, Tyne, Clyde, Mersey and Belfast.

"Play for the wonderful oil industry the state of employment in British shipbuilding will present a very different picture," said J. W. Elliott of the Wallsend shipyard where Princess Margaret christened the Valentine.

She installed the vessel was the first built by his firm for Anglo-Saxon, which since 1945 had placed contracts with that yard alone totalling £4,000,000.

QUEEN'S NEPHEW FINED

Perth, Scotland, May 2 (AP)—The Earl of Strathmore, 32-year-old nephew of Queen Elizabeth, today was fined £10 ($31) on a drunken driving charge. His driver's license was suspended for one year.

The Earl, who had pleaded innocent, was arrested last December after a collision between his jeep and another car.

JAPAN'S FAIREST

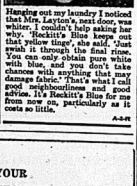
Last of Ill-Fated Jets Crashes, Pilot Killed

Sandhurst, Berkshire, England, May 2 (AP)— The last of the ill-fated de Havilland jets known as the DH-108—first British plane to fly faster than sound—crashed yesterday. The pilot bailed out too late and was killed.



Much of the research which resulted in the building of the world's first jet airliner, the De Havilland Comet, was done on the 108s.

The first of the three experimental craft, tailless and with swept-back wings, flew up over the Thames Estuary four years ago, killing Capt. Geoffrey de Havilland, son of the firm's founder.

A second came apart in the air near Farnborough in February, killing a test pilot.

A witness said he saw the one today dive to the ground on the outskirts of Blackbushe Airport, six miles south of here.

GOOD NEIGHBOUR POLICY

Hanging out my laundry I noticed that Mrs. Layton's, next door, was whiter. I couldn't help asking her why. "Reckitt's Blue keeps out that yellow tinge," she said. "Just swish it through the final rinse. You can only obtain pure white with blue, and you don't take chances with anything that may damage fabric." That's what I call good neighbourliness and good advice. It's Reckitt's Blue for me from now on, particularly as it costs so little.

MADOC
Young Couple Honored With Many Gifts

Madoc — An enjoyable event took place on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hill, Madoc, when they entertained about 50 relatives and friends in honor of their recent marriage of their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Fleming, who were celebrating their 15th (crystal) wedding anniversary.

The early part of the evening was spent in playing progressive euchre.

Miss Grace Warren, on behalf of their friends, extended to Mr. and Mrs. Fleming good wishes and asked them to accept the gifts as a token of friendship and esteem.

After opening the gifts, Mr. and Mrs. Fleming spoke briefly thanking one and all.

The hostess served refreshments and an anniversary cake in the form of an open book, which was cut by Mrs. Fleming.

Guests were present from Peterborough, Marmora, Ivanhoe and Belleville.

17 Families Forced to Move Out of Camp

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) — Seventeen families living in the Ryding Avenue trailer camp had their leases terminated officially off Monday and their communal toilet and bath house boarded up up on orders from city hall.

The families have been under 30-day notice to get off its property in northwest Toronto, where they have been living since late in 1947.

Walter Tipper, president of the Trailer Association, said Monday night he has more than 300 names on a petition endorsed by couples for permission to remain, signed by workers, merchants and residents in the area. A delegation from the camp will appear before Board of Control today.

Cancer Fund Drive Extended Two Weeks

Toronto, May 2 — The April campaign of the Canadian Cancer Society has reached nearly one half of its objective today" announced campaign chairman, F. W. Eaton.

In order that busy canvassers may have the opportunity of finishing their calls, and sending in returns from all over the province it has been decided to extend the campaign dates until May 15th, Mr. Evans explained.

The $500,000 objective of the Province of Ontario has not yet been reached, and the difficulties which have been encountered in rural areas due to bad weather and road conditions have delayed canvassing and collecting. This is another reason for extending the campaign a further two weeks.

WANTS COMMUNISM BANNED

Ottawa, May 2—(CP)—George Drew Monday night called on Canada to stamp out the communist fifth column in this country by making communism a crime.

The Progressive Conservative leader, in a speech prepared for delivery before the Ottawa Junior Board of Trade, urged that all Canadians use the right of free speech to press for passing of laws by which Canadians who knowingly serve the Kremlin can be dealt with as traitors.

Dr. Brewing said he would not enter the controversy either as an individual or as moderator.

LABOR WINS SNAP

Would Damage Prestige

Though defeat of the motion Monday night would not have forced Labor out of office, it would have damaged the government's prestige seriously, observers said.

As a result, Labor party leaders were expected to require even more regular attendance from Labor M.P.'s at future House sessions.

London's leading Liberal newspaper, The News Chronicle, said Attlee might call for another vote today on the budget proposal to show that his government still is in effective control.

Though the Conservative motion was a sudden opposition action, it had been rumored earlier in the day. One Labor member of Commons, Seymour Cocks, flew back from Paris after getting a hint early in the evening that something was up.

Several Conservative deputies arrived half an hour before the balloting, in evening dress. Wives and friends of the members thronged the galleries.

As it became apparent that the Conservative might ask for a vote government whips were busy rounding up missing Labor members.

MANITOBA

Mr. Green charged Ralph Maybank (L—Winnipeg South Centre) of "high-handed and arbitrary" methods as chairman of the Private Bills Committee which considered the legislation.

Mr. Maybank rose to say he didn't care what Mr. Green said and walked from the chamber.

The Vancouver members said if Mr. Maybank was not asking for the government as committee chairman, then Mr. St. Laurent should ask for his resignation. This remark brought the Prime Minister to his feet.

Mr. St. Laurent said he would do no such thing. Mr. Green should know the whole pipelines lance was "farical". Mr. Green replied that Mr. Maybank's actions had illustrated the government's illogic that none ada now was a "one-party state.

Mr. Green charged that Mr. Maybank, as private sponsor of the bill, had sought to shut off debate in the House Private Bills Committee last week by moving that no further witnesses be heard.

Mr. Maybank rose and said it did not mean "very much" to him what Mr. Green had to say and that he wanted to make clear to the chamber his "utter indifference to Mr. Green's charge.

He turned and walked towards the lobby behind the chamber.

Can't Take It Charge

"I see he is walking out," Mr. Green went on, "He can't take it."

Mr. Maybank swung around and began to make protest on a point of order. Then, with an obvious change of mind, he said:

"Oh, I really don't want to speak. I'd better let him talk."

Committee chairman Rene Beaudoin rose and asked Mr. Green to preserve order in the Chamber. He knew the Vancouver member did not want to use words which were unparliamentary.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, asked what words could conceivably be considered unparliamentary.

Mr. Green said the words "high-handed" and "arbitrary".

Mr. Green then described Mr. Maybank's actions before the committee and said they could be described only in those terms. And, he went on, if Mr. Maybank was not acting for the government then the Prime Minister should ask for his resignation.

Mr. St. Laurent rose quickly. "The Prime Minister," he told Mr. Green sharply, "will do no such thing."

Mr. Green, who clashed recently with Mr. St. Laurent over his charge that the Prime Minister had been guilty of evasion, mentioned that Mr. St. Laurent had lost his temper.

Claims Gov't. Should Act

"The honorable member," snapped the prime minister, "does things about which almost anyone would lose his temper if he took his seriously."

He added that Mr. Green was acting as he usually did: "He knows this issue (the pipe - line issue) is farical."

Mr. Green retorted that the prime minister should accept his responsibilities.

He would not, Mr. St. Laurent returned, seek to "evade" anything that Mr. Green would suggest.

In the flood debate many of the members who spoke agreed that the Manitoba flood situation now constituted a national emergency and the government should act.

M. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, said the people had a right to expect national assistance to rehabilitate themselves and his party would support the government in every step. Solon Low, Social Credit chief, took the same line and said he was confident the government was taking a "level-headed view" and would take the same "recent action" in Manitoba that had been taken in British Columbia in 1948 when a grant of $5,000,000 and other assistance had been extended.

John Diefenbaker (PC - Lake Centre) said the floods were just a repetition of conditions that had been recurring for more than 100 years. The International Joint Commission on Flood Control should have taken action before this. He was critical of the government for giving little more than an expression of commendation to the relief agencies and the Red Cross.

All Treated Alike

Most speakers followed Mr. Green in recalling that Prime Minister St. Laurent had already given assurances that all parts of the country would be treated alike. If any part of the country

Wildcats are risky

To an oil man a "wildcat" is a well drilled in an area where oil has never been found. Drilling a wildcat is a risky undertaking and a costly one. Some wells have cost more than a million dollars—and have not been successful.

For that reason oil men make as certain as they can, before drilling, that there is a good chance of striking oil. They use the most modern instruments and skills to locate each drilling site; but still the odds are 20 to one against them. Only about one wildcat in 20 becomes a producer.

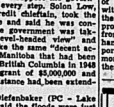
Over the past 20 years oil men have worked continuously against these odds. In western Canada Imperial alone drilled 134 wells—all dry—before the Leduc field was discovered in 1947.

But the end result has been new oil for Canada and benefits for Canadians. There are thousands of new jobs. Millions of U.S. dollars are being saved as the need for imported oil lessens. And, as another natural resource moves toward full development, the Canadian standard of living climbs higher.

These are real benefits to Canadians and they will increase as more oil is found. But to find more oil and to spread the advantages it brings, oil men must continue to work against long odds.

Sometimes a job that must be done can't be done without great risks.

Bringing you oil is a big job . . . and a costly one



About Canada's Oil—Canada's proven oil reserves now amount to about one billion barrels, as compared with only 72 million barrels in 1946.

It is estimated the oil industry will spend $150 millions for exploration and development in western Canada this year.

U.S. Improves Stock Position Of Manganese

Washington, May 2 — (AP) — The United States increases its imports of manganese ore—a vital material for steel manufacture—by 23 per cent in 1949 despite an 18-per-cent cut-back by Russian shipments to the United States, the Commerce Department reported Monday.

"In the early part of 1949 operations were divided as to whether Russian manganese was indispensable to this country's economy," the department said.

Russia Displaced

"However, the large increases in United States manganese imports in 1949 from non-Russian sources have been sufficient to compensate for the loss of Russia as a source of that commodity.

"India has replaced Russia as the leading supplier of manganese ore to the U.S., the department said in an analysis set out in its foreign commerce weekly.

The Union of South Africa and the African Gold Coast were close behind India in 1949 and Brazil, which ranked next, was likely to become "the most important source of supply" in the future.

Although Russia cut shipments to the United States from 385,000 tons in 1948 to only 75,000 tons last year, total United States imports rose from 1,194,000 to 1,475,000 tons in that period, the department said.

Used In Steel

Russia's curtailment of shipments followed adoption of a United States policy in early 1948 of banning shipments of American goods to the Soviet bloc that might add to its "war potential".

Manganese is used in manufacture of steel as a purifying agent and also as an alloying constituent to improve strength and toughness of steel, the commerce department called it "indispensable" in steel production.

Another Douk House Burned

Nelson, B.C., May 3 — (CP) — While a peace offensive began amongst one segment of Doukhobors Sunday night, a second group burned another house "to indicate their support of their friends' burning tactics."

At Perry's Siding, 15 miles northwest of here, Stevan Zarekin, a displaced person from Yugoslavia, urged a meeting of 200 members of the Radical Sons of Freedom group to "pray by the hearth—not by fire."

Almost at the same time at Gilpin near the international border, a group of Doukhobors fired a winter community dwelling. Police said they had made no arrests.

Questioning of a number of persons standing around the burning building late said, indicated building was fired to indicate agreement with similar disturbances in Perry.

The latest burning ended a week-long fall following burnings and nude parades at Krestova, 23 miles west of here.

Attorney-general Gordon Wismer, recently returned from conferring with authorities in Ottawa, has promised mass arrests of radical Doukhobors who break the law. He said they will be housed in a former army camp at Vernon, B.C.

FIREMEN RESCUE WOMAN

Tyrrell, May 2 (CP) — Mrs. Ivens Heaney, 44, overcome by smoke from a fire in the apartment building in which she was living, was rescued just in time by firemen Sunday morning.

Two more minutes and the woman would surely have burned to death," Fire Chief William Cummings said. Other tenants of the building said they did not believe anyone was in the apartment where Mrs. Heaney was found. Firemen said they discovered the unconscious woman when they broke into her apartment to fight fire. She is in serious condition in the hospital; serious condition in the hospital.

MARMORA

Local Cast Stages 'Dark Town Minstrel Show'

Marmora — The "Dark Town Minstrel Show" staged by a local cast of 40 under auspices of St. Paul's Ladies Guild, scored a great success, it was presented in Marmora Town Hall on Friday and Friday evenings to large audiences.

Stan Hawthorne, of Madoc, was the musical director and Percy Gray, of Deloro, the interlocutor with Fred Woodhouse and Alex Cunningham having the parts of end men. Included in the cast were 14 ladies, who in their black faces, were as hard to recognize as the men.

In the first half of the program, dialogues were furnished by W. M. Regan, R. Frost, M. J. Corrigan and G. Brooks; with the interlocutor as well, as between R. Frost and P. Webster.

Songs were rendered by M. J. Corrigan and G. Mantle, and an action skit was put on by the end men. An opening song "Yours and Mine", was rendered by Arthur Fordham, and Mrs. R. Frost. The boys' octet sang, "Here Comes the Showboat" and Roy Frost and Doug Jones indulged in step dancing. The end men, Doug Jones and Don Donaldson, comprised a band whose selections were enlivening to the audience.

Negro Choruses

Intermingled between the various acts were lively choruses by the ladies chorus and the full chorus.

Opening the second half, was the enactment of the Dark Town Ladies Guild Sewing Circle. The ladies chorus opened with "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny", following which, Miss Percy Gray sang "Shortnin Bread".

A skit by Percy Eamer, and Mrs. Eugene Brady, terminated with the former singing "Life Gets Tejus" — William Regan then sang "Old Black Joe" in response to which the ladies chorus sang "If I Knew You Were Coming". Mrs. E. Rundle sang "Mighty Like a Rose", succeeded by two choruses by the ladies. The boys' octet gave another number.

An end skit by the end men, next proved diverting. Dialogues followed between P. Webster and W. Regan, and the interlocutor. The end men put on another skit. Dialogues in which M. Corrigan, G. Brooks, R. Frost, F. Woodhouse, and A. Cunningham figured, were succeeded by a song by F. Woodhouse. Three choruses made up the grand finale.

During the intermission, candy and soft drinks were sold. At the close of each night's program thanks to the cast and the audiences were suitably expressed by Rural Dean J. M. Brownlie and on Friday evening, members of the cast and their families were served refreshments by the Ladies Guild.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

If you want to be a cabinet minister, perhaps the Prime Minister or at least one that sits in the seats of the government supper, a working knowledge of athletics won't hurt you in the least.

That is the opinion of the Hon. Lester Pearson, Canadian Minister of External Affairs who addressed the Rotary Club and the student body of the Collegiate Institute yesterday.

Mr. Pearson, known more familiarly to his associates as "Mike" received that nickname when as air force medico who was giving the returned laddybucks of the First World war their last examination prior to discharge, looked up and said to the tall handsome youth near him, "Okay, Mike, you're next".

The minister, a brilliant student in his day, took plenty of time out for athletics. He played with the Peterborough C. I. and Hamilton CI teams and after his return from study at Oxford University (He won a Massey Scholarship), he was given the position of professor of history at the University of Toronto. There he coached the Victoria College Soc' n't t—m and also a strict hockey team.

Later he was appointed ambassador to the United States and his duties took him to the San Francisco conference of the United Nations as senior adviser to the Canadian Delegation. There a wide-eyed feminine reporter said to him:—"What have you got that others haven't got that gives you such a high rank among world diplomats?"

Mr. Pearson is said to have replied:—"That's simple. I'm the only diplomat who ever received a salary for playing professional baseball".

During his address to the Rotary Club yesterday, Mr. Pearson told the clubmen, "I have always been and always will be interested in outdoor athletics. I want to see the diplomatic and international fields that a knowledge of and experience in outdoor sports stands me in good stead."

Mr. Pearson is helps believe in the old adage that with a Vishinsky than the knowledge of a good clean' bodycheck. And he politics I find that an adroitness in broken-field running is a great aid," smiled the minister.

TRYING HARD

The meeting of the Belleville District Baseball League held in President Malcolm Rebb's office last night produced zero, nothing plus. In time words the boys were as far away from organizing the 1950 edition of the loop as they were four months ago with the exception of a hope that some three or more teams would enter.

Sixardee and Napanee were there and said they were definite starters, Hamilton, a newcomer also signified the intention of joining the group. Point Anne, hotter than the south side of a firefly all the last meeting have apparently cooled off a bit and its baseball fate will be decided at a club meeting to be held on Thursday night. Bloomfield felt pleased that there is a strong possibility the pork and beans boys will enter a team.

Belleville? . . . Don't be silly boys.

Allin's Alley, baseballically speaking, did not even produce an "Ajax Cassidy" to mournfully chant, "Wurra, wurra. Sure I'm not long for this world." How could he? He's been dead for four months.

In any event the life or death of the league will be settled at a meeting to be held Friday in President Kelly's office er, another rendezvous. You'll be notified later, if you're interested. It's do or die at this writing, we are informed. Either the league will go ahead and organize or reorganize with, the entries at hand or it will, like the Arabs, fold its tents and silently steal away.

It was suggested that Belleville players or those interested in baseball get the members of the incoming executive. Not a bad idea at that. Anyhoo, Friday night's the night. Take it or leave it.

LET 'EM IN!

Several complaints from baseball and softball players who operated in 1949 with various teams have been received at this desk, protesting the edict of the Commercial Softball Association that players who were active with other than commercial league teams. It seems the mushball powers-that-be decided that players who performed on OASA and baseball teams in 1949 were "out" for this season. And some of the boys are not too happy about it.

We can see the executive's point of view, if the city had OASA teams and baseball squads in operation. But as the Irishman said when he saw his first giraffe, "It's a dom ile. There ain't no such animal".

But we cannot see any advantage in barring these players from playing under the present circumstances. They are merely sitting on the south sides of their hands or twiddling thumbs, and we fail to observe why this should be the case.

The executive with the authority could allow certain 1949 baseball and OASA players to certain teams in order to distribute strength and thus eliminate the danger of "packed teams".

The Commercial League, we are informed, cut its roster to six teams this year in an effort "to improve the calibre of softball here". Later it accepted a "B" section composed of players not good enough to make the "A" teams. But if the executive is so anxious to improve the calibre of its game, why bar these fellows who played baseball and OASA softball last year.

Let them all in. Allot two or three players to each of the six teams, and, the calibre of the game will be improved that much.

Dauthuille Slams Belloise All Over Ring to Chalk Up T.K.O. in Seventh Round

Montreal, May 2—(CP)—Flashy Laurent Dauthuille of France entered the fight to take a crack at Jake LaMotta's middleweight crown Monday night as he swept aside New York's Steve Belloise with a seventh-round technical knockout in a scheduled 10-round main bout.

Once the pride of New York's flistic lanes Belloise gave a disappointing show before 11,583 fans who contributed a gross gate of $44,353.

Referee Tommy Sullivan halted the one-sided affair just after the seventh round ended when Belloise, a 31-year-old ring veteran, was incapable of offering any more resistance to his 26-year-old ringwise opponent.

Through most of the fight, the crowd voiced its disapproval and shouted for the American-Italian to "fight". But there was nothing "black out" after the Frenchman tagged him with a wallloping right hand midway through the first round that sent the New Yorker down for the automatic eight-count.

Later in the dressing room, Belloise said that he couldn't remember anything after he was knocked down the first time.

"I think I hit my head on the floor," he said. "I felt a bump or swelling on the back of his head.

The New Yorker, who at 161 held a three-pound margin over Dauthuille, hit the canvas twice in the opening round. The second time he stayed down for a count of four when the bell ended the round.

One-Handed Defence

From here on, Belloise staged a one-handed defence, using his other hand to steady himself against the ropes. Most of the Frenchman's fiercest attacks took place along the ropes and Belloise was only able to carry on by continually clinching.

Dauthuille nailed him again in the second round and Belloise took another eight count while dragging himself to the ropes.

By defeating Belloise, the third-ranking contender for LaMotta's crown, Dauthuille has moved into the top division in the middleweight bracket. He will likely take on Rocky Graziano, the No. 2 contender, before a fight with the champion takes place.

Promoter Raoul Godbout announced after the fight that he was attempting to arrange a match between Graziano and Dauthuille at Montreal. Last year, the Frenchman decisioned La-Motta here in a 10-round bout before LaMotta had captured the title.

Dauthuille was sharp and has complete control in Monday night's fight. At times his attack was so furious that he slowed down for a rest and nonchalantly moved about the ring without receiving a blow in return.

It was the Frenchman's ninth fight in Montreal, eight of which he won.

In a fast moving semi-final, Armand Savoie, 135, Montreal, scored his 13th straight victory by the knockout route when he kayo'd Young Junior, 136½, Springfield, Mass., in the fourth round of a scheduled eight-rounder.

Despite Bad Weather Some Good Trout Caught

(By The Canadian Press)

Reports from Ontario Lakes and streams indicate that, despite bad weather, a good number of trout were caught during the weekend. The season opened Saturday, two days earlier than in previous years.

"Fred Lindsay was so excited," said Morris, "he jumped into the water and grabbed the struggling fish with his hands because we didn't have a landing net."

Another Toronto fisherman, Roy Allison, caught a five-pound Rainbow near Allison.

At Rouyn, Que., Bagotville Allies took a one-game lead in the Eastern Canada senior hockey finals Monday night, blasting Rouyn Flashes 6-3 in the opening game of the best-of-five series.

Bagotville displayed a smartly drilled team that outclassed the hard-fighting Rouyn club. The visitors were the speedy ones, the visitors for the first period but then dropped out of the running as Bagotville turned on the pressure and ran away with the verdict.

Archibald, R. Leger, Gilbert, Baudoin, Hyryluk and Frederonson were the Bagotville marksmen while Lajoie, Guy Baril and Bendo clicked for the losers.

Ottawa has pitched its hat into the ring in the contest to see who gets the 1954 British Empire games.

Ernest Lee, chairman of the National Council on physical fitness, said Monday a move had been made to bring the meet to Ottawa and that Jacques Greber, town planning consultant for the capital, is in favor of the scheme. A proposed site would be at Brewer Park, on the banks of the Rideau River at the south edge of the edge.

E. P. Taylor's colt Bon Vivant, a Joint favorite for the King's Plate until he went wrong in training in Toronto recently, will arrive in Toronto today from New York and a definite decision is expected Wednesday on whether he will run in the classic.

The recently-appointed Ontario Racing Commission ruled Monday at Toronto that stable accommodation will be refused horses five-years-old or over that have not raced at least eight times in the last two years and application strongly.

Flying Dutchmen Want More Teams In Senior Series

Kitchener, May 2 (CP)—Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen will likely drop out of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League unless the loop is enlarged, club president Walter Webber said Monday.

"The report brought back by our representation from the OHA annual meeting was anything but encouraging," he added. "It looks like the OHA doesn't care whether they have a senior club or not."

Club officials said the annual meeting at Toronto brought out some vague talk of trying to induce Oshawa, Niagara Falls and possibly Buffalo, N.Y., to enlarge the present four-team loop, but "nothing was done about it."

Mr. Weber said a 30-day limit would be set by his club for action by the OHA, feeling the need for action is made imperative by the possibility that Toronto Marlboros may operate in a new loop next season.

Jack Gelineau Third Goalie To Win Award

Montreal, May 2 (CP)— Jack Gelineau, goalkeeper for Boston Bruins is the 1949-50 winner of the Calder trophy as outstanding rookie of the year, the National Hockey League announced Monday night.

He is the third netminder to win the award. The others were Frankie Brimsek, whom Gelineau succeeded in the Boston ists and now is with Chicago Black Hawks and Frank McCool, formerly with Toronto Maple Leafs. Brimsek won the trophy in the 1938-39 season and McCool in 1944-45. Goalie Mike Karakas of Chicago was the outstanding rookie in 1935-36, before the Calder trophy was put up for competition.

Gelineau, who went to the NHL from a starring net role with the McGill University hockey team, receives $1,000 from the league in addition to the trophy.

The selection was made by 18 sports writers and broadcasters, three from each of the six NHL cities. On a 3-2-1 point basis for first second and third choices, the 25-year-old netminder received 39 points.

Phil Maloney, Boston centre, and Bert Olmstead Chicago winger, each has 24 points. Only others to receive votes were Gus Kyle, New York defenceman, 14 points; Johnny McCormack, Toronto centre four and Steve Black Detroit forward, three. Gelineau had nine first choices.

SOMEBODY STOLE CAKES

Cobourg, May 1 — (CP)—High school students stopped dancing long enough for refreshments Saturday night — but the refreshments were gone. Someone had stolen the cakes, strewn the sandwiches around the floor and outside the window.

Cards, Figured to Have Weak Reserves, Win Five of Last Six Games With Substitutes

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals are up to their old tricks again. Next to beating the Dodgers, the Redbirds get the greatest delight out of making the experts look foolish.

Remember those pre-season reports on the Cards? Too old. No reserves. A one-man ball club.

With a line-up shot full of holes, the scrappy St. Louis gang has managed to win five of its last six games. They capped it off Monday night with a thrilling 3-2 victory over their hated rivals, Brooklyn's Dodgers.

Until the last half of the ninth inning, Brooklyn was in front 2-0. Starter Joe Hatten had held the Redbirds to three hits up to that point.

Hatten began the last winning by walking Chuck Diering. Enos Slaughter singled Diering to second. Marty Marion, making his first appearance of the season, batted for Steve Bilko and fanned.

Eddie Kazak, another pinch-hitter, lined out. One more out to go and the Dodger lefthander would own two straight shutouts. But it never came.

Red Schoendienst singled, scoring Diering. That was all for Hatten. Another pinch-hitter, Bill Howerton, faced Willard Schmidt. Howerton singled, scoring with the tying run as Schoendienst raced to third.

A wild pitch by Ramadell allowed Schoendienst to cross the plate with the winning run. Hatten was charged with the loss.

Lloyd Boyer, who has taken over the ailing Ted Wilks's relief chores, was the winning pitcher. He relieved starter Max Lanier in the ninth and kept the Dodgers away from the plate in the one inning he worked.

The victory moved the Cards into a virtual tie for second place with Pittsburgh, 1½ games behind the front-running Dodgers.

It was the only game played in the major leagues.

Jake LaMotta Most Defend Rusting Crown

New York, May 2 (AP)—Boxing circles buzzed with new activity today, most of it centering around middleweight champion Jake LaMotta's rusting crown.

Al Weill, matchmaker of the International Boxing Club, said he planned a series of conferences that may set up a 160-pound title fight for late May or early June.

He said the talks would deal mainly with matching LaMotta against either Laurent Dauthuille the new pride of France, or Sugar Ray Robinson, the welterweight king who wants to move up a notch.

Both Dauthuille and Robinson made menacing gestures Monday night in the direction of the Bronx belter, who hasn't defended his title since he won it from the late Marcel Cerdan last June.

Robinson announced through a spokesman that he would appear before the New York State Athletic commission Friday to post a $2,000 forfeit bond as a formal challenge to LaMotta.

If LaMotta accepts a fight, Robinson will then relinquish his 147-pound crown. Robinson has whipped LaMotta four out of five times.

Unbeaten as a middleweight on the continent, although he dropped a decision to Kid Gavilan last fall after getting down to 154 1-2, Dauthuille outpointed LaMotta in a non-title scrap last February in Montreal.

Marlboros Win First of Series With Calgary

Calgary May 2 (CP)— A couple of classy juniors are rated the pick of the Eastern Senior champion Toronto Marlboros but it was two of the older boys who clicked for the payoff markers in the Duke's victory Monday night in the Allan Cup final's first game.

Twenty-nine-year-old Scotty Mair banged in the winning counter for the Duke's 5-3 victory over Calgary Stampeders, Western Canada champions. The game-winning effort gave the 6,000 fans a climatic thrill, coming with only 14 seconds of the third period left.

A last minute penalty to defenceman Hugh Coflin for tripping starry Danny Lewicki started the win-producing play. Mair picked in from eight feet out a rebound from the shot of linemate Bill (Red) Johnson.

Johnson Ties Count

Johnson seven minutes earlier tied the contest at 3-3 after the Stampeders took the lead by the first time in the game early in the third period.

The Toronto victory in the first game of the best-of-seven series for the Canadian Senior Amateur title upheld the favored rating given the Marlies, the first Toronto aggregation to make the Allan Cup final in 18 years.

Marlboros' win was marred, however, by the bereavement of their coach, Joe Primeau. The popular mentor left by plane immediately after the game for Toronto where his father was killed in an automobile accident. Primeau had kept word of his father's death from his team until after the game.

Ballard to Handle Team

Club manager Harold Ballard will handle the Dukes for the second game of the series here Wednesday night.

Penalties proved costly also to the Toronto club. Two Stampeder goals came while Marlboros were playing two men short and a third while the eastern team had one man in the penalty box. In all Montreal referees Red Storey and Ernie Mowbray handed out 18 penalties—10 to Marlies, including a 10-minute misconduct to Lewicki.

The 18-year-old Fort William star was right in there in the goal-scoring department in the early going, counting Dukes' third and fourth goals.

His brilliant solo rushes and the work of linemate George Armstrong, 19-year-old right-winger also brought up from the Junior Marlboros for the Allan Cup drive, indicated plenty of trouble for Stamps in future contests.

Mair Scores Two

Mair also scored two goals, to match Lewicki's performance, with one each going to Johnson and Don Rope.

It was a tough game for the older Stampeders who were playing an uphill battle for most of the route. The smooth-passing Marlies moved into 3-0, 3-1 and 4-2 leads at various stages but Stamps came back for a 4-4 even break at the end of the second period. They started the third period with their only lead of the game but didn't even have enough in reserve to stem the powerful closing attack of the eastern titlists.

Wakefield Must Report to Chicago Or Quit Baseball

New York, May 2 (AP)— Chicago White Sox appear to be stuck with or without Dick Wakefield.

Well-informed baseball men insisted that Wakefield, traded by New York Yankees to Chicago last Friday, is the property of Chicago White Sox. He must either report to the Sox or quit baseball.

The decision on Wakefield's status is expected to be made by Commissioner A. B. Chandler within the next few days.

On Chandler's decision may hang the fate of all future player trades and sales between big league clubs. The ruling not only will affect Wakefield and the two teams involved, but it will have a distinct bearing on all future transactions involving assignment of a player or players from one club to another.

"Do you know what it would mean, should Chandler order the Yankees to take Wakefield back" a veteran baseball man asked. "It would mean that all a player had to do to stop any deal was simply refuse to report."

Frank Lane, general manager of the White Sox, said Sunday he was cancelling the deal because Wakefield refused to report unless he got a $5,000 raise in salary.

The 29-year-old one-time bonus baby of the Detroit Tigers was traded to the White Sox last weekend for infielder-outfielder Johnny Ostroski and cash.

Wakefield, in Ann Arbor, Mich. said he would quit baseball before he'd report to the Chicago club for less than $22,500— the pay he drew at Detroit last year —or return to the Yankees.

Pats Will Get Lots of Support In Toronto Game

Toronto, May 2—(CP)—Regina Pats will be more or less "at home" tonight when they tackle Montreal Canadiens in the third game of the Memorial Cup final. Down two games to the Junior Habitants, the westerners will probably get lots of support from Toronto fans.

The first two games at Montreal were victories for the Canadiens by 9-7 and 5-2. The third game tonight is the only one here; the series then returns to Montreal.

Frank Selke, general manager of the Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, is making the trip here with the junior club and keeping a watchful eye on the team. He's been keeping such a watchful eye that no doubt could locate the Canadiens Monday, they're in strict seclusion.

The Pats, however arrived in style and enjoyed a sight-seeing tour into the Niagara peninsula. Afterwards they had a 50-minute practice at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The westerners aren't downhearted over losing the first two games of the best-of-seven series.

"Tonight's game," said Regina coach Murray Armstrong, "is the key match of the series. We just have to win it and the boys are capable of taking it. If the kids will give just 10 per cent more effort than they did Saturday we'll take this all-important third game and go on from there."

Canadiens are going with the same line-up that whipped Guelph Biltmores in the eastern finals.

Toronto fans, always partial to western teams no matter what game is played, will be seeing their first memorial cup final game since Port Arthur Bruins walloped Barrie Flyers in 1945. Two years before that Toronto's favorite St. Michael's College played a seven-game series against Winnipeg Monarchs, all games on

Buffalo Bisons Need Pitchers In Worst Way

(By The Associated Press)

Francis Michael Skaff inherited a pennant winner when he took over as manager of Buffalo Bisons this season. So, what happens? His "champions" are last today in the International League, five full games off the pace.

And what's more, Buffalo's immediate future is none too bright. Skaff's pitching staff, the best in the league last year, is coming apart at the seams. He had to use 24 hurlers in the first month's test nine games, with Al Burch being able to go the full distance.

Monday night was no exception. Skaff used three pitchers against Baltimore, but his club lost 9-6. It was Buffalo's seventh setback in nine starts.

The only consolation was that it was Buffalo's final game of disappointing road trip. The Bisons now return to Offerman Stadium, and its friendly 397 - foot left field foul line.

Ed Pellegrini, Buns Kerns and Clyde Kluttz hit home runs for Baltimore as the Orioles staged an 11 - hit attack. Karl Drews, Baltimore starter, received credit for his first victory of the season.

A crowd of 4,343 saw Jack Hennessy and pinch - hitter Walt Hawick honor for Buffalo. Pat Marchildon of Penetanguishene, Ont., making his second start since coming from the Philadelphia A's, was belted out in the sixth inning and charged with the loss.

The Toronto - Jersey City, Montreal - Syracuse and Rochester - Springfield games were postponed. There will be no games played tonight.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Many experts of today should be told the facts of bridge. They take most of their bad bids look good by brilliant play. But much more often are they found in the wrong contract.

South became the declarer at a three no-trump in this deal:

NORTH
♦5 3 2
♣Q J 10 9 8

WEST
♥Q 5 4
♦A 10 8 7 6 3

EAST
♠6 5 3
♥K J 9 8 7 2
♣A 6 4

SOUTH
♠K 9 4
♥A K 3
♣K 7 4

West led diamond seven. East covered with the queen. South won with the king. The south club king lead was taken by the ace. Then the contract was set when east returned the diamond nine.

It was pointed out that south could have ducked the diamond queen to lose the first trick. East could return a diamond nine. But then west wins this trick south still has diamond stopped.

When east gets in with club he has no diamond to return. So south is able to make his contract. But this plan operates only only if the club ace happens to be in west instead of east.

Correct bidding, however, could not have brought the contract to three no-trump. Instead would have landed in four spades with bidding that goes like this:

South	North
1 S	2 C
3 C	4 S

With a biddable suit a player could not open with no-trump. In response, a takeout to a new suit should be preferred to any raise. An assist should be given before trumps.

South has six tricks. He has many high cards and no short cards aside to three aces. This reveals his sixth trick. Therefore, with four tricks north has ten tricks in their pair.

The first reply by north announced 4 used three tricks here. With spade support north can make ten that suit to show his fourth trick. Right is thus that cannot hurt you.

Hollywood, May 2 — (AP) — Virginia Kellog is a comely, greying, soft-spoken screen writer of 42 years. You'd never suspect that she has been a prison inmate or that she packs a rod.

But it's true. And what's more the whole business has paid off extremely well for her.

Virginia considers herself a reporter. I cover a story that same way as you do," she told me. "The difference is that you write for the newspapers and I write for the screen."

She is the only screen writer who "lives" her stories. "I will never take an assignment unless I can go right to the source of the story," she said. She does this for two reasons: to catch the lingo and the "feel" of her subjects; so people can't say, "That doesn't sound like real-life." She says her show doubters that her plots and dialogues are authentic.

Hospital Story

The whole thing started back in 1934 before she wrote "Mary Stevens, M.D.," a story of a woman doctor. Virginia spent three weeks as a nurse observer at a Los Angeles hospital to get the material. Then she wrote "Stolen Holiday," about the Parisian fashion world. She attended the Sorbonne and was an apprentice in fashion houses in Paris.

She retired up to a housewife for a decade and then returned to write "I-Man." She worked closely with Treasury agents on that one and brought them uncovered Elaine Townsend, the former school teacher who now is a gambling operator in Havana. The Townsend yarn is expected to reach the cameras soon.

Napanee Ladies Tie Belleville In Bowls Battle

City Bowlers Defeat Trenton by 7-0 Score

The city keglers rolled up the imposing score of 3639 with block scores of 1319–1115–1195. Trenton aggregated 3196 with scores of 1128–967–1101.

High individual scorers were: Belleville, high triple, O. Noel, 795; high single, L. Hyatt, 305. Trenton, high triple, Moore, 749 with the same player getting the high single of 307.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling us about Nature and colors, and how Nature is the greatest artist of all on account of the sweet way she paints butterflys and sunsets, and I happened to think of something to wisper to Puds Simkins in the middle of what she was saying, and she cant me and made me stay after school and write a composition about colors. Which I did, being:

Colors

Some things need a lot of colors, such as rainbows and paint boxes, while other things seem better plain, such as vanilla ice cream and spilkot water.

Natural colors are usually the best, like 2 eyes both the same color in the same person generlly being more admired than one blue one and one black one as the result of a fite or an accident.

On the other hand sometimes people are the proudest of a unnatural color, such as a brite red face when you come back from a vacation so everybody will know you were away some place lying out in the hot sun while all your frends were home in the shade trying to keep cool, but if you happened to be born with a face that color, the best thing you would do would be to go to a skin specialist to have it bleeched.

This proves people dont care how they look as long as it makes somebody elts jellies.

Bulls are supposed to get mad if red rags are waved in the? faces, but who wouldn't?

HOLIDAY FLAGS

Truro, N. S. — (CP) — The Scotia chapter of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire is appealing to the citizens of Truro to revive the custom of recorating their homes with flags on Victoria Day and Dominion Day.

RUSSIA

"The situation at present," he said, "was not one to cause panic. We must keep our heads and avoid on one extreme, rash reactionary and provocative action and falling victims to unrealistic promises of peace. On the other hand we must pursue a determined course down the middle if we want to win the peace and security that have eluded us for the past 40 years".

Two Sources of Policy

He suspected the Russian policy springs from two sources. One, the belief the democratic system of free enterprise and capitalism bound by its inherent contradictions, would collapse and if this is the case all Russia has to do is wait.

Secondly the old traditional Russian Imperialism. The menace is not so much communism as panslavistic as an economic doctrine, but the former Russian Imperialism in using communism as a tool outside of the USSR. The Soviets are determined to push their influence as far away from Moscow as they can.

"The Russians," Mr. Pearson said, "in carrying out the policy have deliberately and cold-bloodedly rejected all our efforts for co-operation since the last war and it is the consequences of this policy that we face today".

He charged the practices of Russia, springing from their policies are, first, to stir up disunity in the Democratic countries by fostering economic strife. "We have this in Canada but other countries have it to a more marked degree".

Some Weaknesses Admitted

Secondly, the skill and determination to exploit "our weaknesses and widen our divisions, and unfortunately we have weaknesses and division but not to the extent of the fundamentals of our foreign policy".

Quoting Malaya and China, Mr. Pearson said Russian communists are to be found in outlying parts of the world posing as crusaders they have been able to achieve more than they should have.

Russia, he charged, is doing its best to intensify fear of nerves. It is prodding all the time, stirring up rumors in the hope the democracies will break, and in breaking adopt policies based on panic, "which we will not adopt if we keep our heads."

"Against these tactics" the External Affairs minister said, "we must preserve our domestic and international unity and convince our people by our work that we can do far more for the average man through our system than the communists can ever hope to do."

Maintain Co-Operation

"We must maintain co-operation with the powers that feel the same as we do about communistic imperialism. And we must hold through economic help and moral support, those undeveloped countries which are fertile fields for communistic seeds. Effectiveness of this help has already been shown in Europe."

"During the last year," Mr. Pearson said, "there has been no deterioration in the situation, in fact in some respects it has shown improvement. In Asia it has not been so good, but overall the situation, while nothing to cheer about is producing no need to be panicky.

"We are not so much concerned as to what we will do. We know the Western Democracies are not war-mongerers and are not preparing for war. We are not imperialistic nor aggressive because our fundamental motives are to preserve peace. Our concern is what the other fellow will do and the other fellow in this case is Soviet Russia."

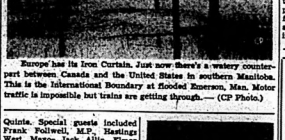
Introduced by Judge Anderson

Mr. Pearson was introduced by Judge J. C. Anderson who outlined the speaker's brilliant academic, sports, political and diplomatic past. Appreciation of the address was eloquently expressed by Rotarian Mac Haig.

MD-Preston spoke to over 140 Rotarians and their guests in the main dining room of the Hotel Quinte. Special guests included Frank Follwell, M.P., Hastings West, Maurice Gilbert, Elmer Sandercock, M.L.A., Roscoe Robson, M.L.A. Warden Clarke Rolling, Hastings County, Mrs. Fred Deacon, Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, Mrs. Geo. H. Noble, Dr. L. Mathieson, Mrs. J. A. Thornbury, Mrs Arthur Locke, Mrs. William Dodge, Mrs. Gilbert Reid and Mrs. Hickey.

The audience proper constituted a cross section of the business, professional, service club, industrial and agricultural life of the city and district with civic and county officials. Guests were seated from Wellington, Trenton, Picton and Cobourg as well as many outlying parts of the county.

Residents Welcomes Guests



President Fred Deacon formally welcomed guests of the club, and at the conclusion of the address presented the guest speaker with a Rotary symbol as a memento of the occasion.

Mayor Jack Allin formally presented the External Affairs Minister with a key to the city prior to the address. He extended the official welcome to Mr. Pearson who smilingly accepted the gift.

Manitoba's Red River cut loose with new flood blows Monday in the southern part of the province. The Canadian army moved into the flood zone as the waters poured toward Winnipeg, where weary evacuees have been arriving. Water, swirling across highway 75 bridge at St. Jean Baptiste, has reached highest level since 1852, will reach Winnipeg on either Wednesday or Thursday. — Central Press Canadian.

The new National Party government plans to bring in a bill to restore hanging, but will allow its members a free non-party vote on the subject. It has not yet announced what cases will constitute a hanging offence. It also plans to restore corporal punishment, which was abolished in sex and other cases by the Labor government.

There has been an increase in murders in New Zealand since the death penalty was abolished but the rise has not been large and there is controversy as to whether it exceeds the upward trend due to increasing population and the war.

PICTON

Welfare Department Second Largest Spending Body Says Acting Minister of Health

Picton—During the 20 years since the Department of Public Welfare was established, it has become the second largest spending department in our provincial government, said Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, M.P.P., the Department Minister and Acting Minister of Health. He was guest speaker at the annual meeting of Prince Edward Children's Aid Society.

Hon. Mr. Goodfellow referred to the danger inherent in the increasing public demand for governments to assume increasing social service costs. He deplored the fact that today there is a greater tendency to lean on the government for all kinds of financial help and services, and a lesser inclination to depend on oneself. He suggested that there is great danger in this tendency of drifting towards socialized government and a totalitarian state.

"I see the best form of social service of any in action in the Children's Aid Society," said Hon. Mr. Goodfellow, "for it is handled by a Board of public-spirited men and women in your own community who are making it their business to mend distressing family situations and to take care of unfortunate children and give them a chance in life."

Carried Out at Lower Levels

"It is much more effective and less expensive to have social service responsibilities carried out by the government at local levels, such as county councils, rather than by government at higher levels, such as provincial governments," said the speaker.

Last year in Ontario, the Children's Aid Society, through its local boards, assumed responsibility for 67,000 children. It is the purpose of the department to keep homes together if at all possible," the Minister said. The Society is greatly interested in having as many of its wards as possible legally adopted into good homes.

The minister said that some societies are reducing the cost to taxpayers by sponsoring campaigns for public support in the form of donations, and this amount is matched by the province with a percentage grant related to the sum raised in that way. Introduced by J. D. Baxter, M.L.A., the speaker was thanked by R. B. Calnan, James dec. Ingburn ex-M.L.A. spoke briefly in support of the local organization. President Harold A. Cleave was in the chair and welcomed the large number in attendance.

Reports Given

Reports included those of secretary Mrs. Harold Kingman, treasurer Mrs. C. G. Rutter and the superintendent, Miss Violet Angelin, Ernest Mahony, district supervisor, and M. Asbury, in charge of Old Age Pensions, spoke briefly. Charles Hyde, president and William Lockyer, superintendent of Belleville Society were present. A vocal quintet of Kathleen Walmsley, Faith Swayne, Patricia Calnan, Carol Wood and Elinor S. Storms, gave a number.

Bear Might Elee But Take it Easy

Vancouver — (CP) — "Ninety-nine out of 100 bears will run away" says yodelling Hardy Trefzger, "the 100th will get you."

It did, and the veteran, 58-year-old Alaskan guide told about it while here for a speaking engagement.

The bear in this case was a rifled mother Alaska brown. So rifled, in fact, that she was still in hospital with half his scalp in strands, a partially-severed right wrist, and a piece bitten out of his thigh.

But, for $750 for three weeks, Trefzger will still guide through his haunts north of Anchorage in search of brown bears, grizzlies or mountain goats.

Wellington, N.Z. — (CP) — After nine years with no death penalty, legislation is to be introduced in parliament for the restoration of capital punishment in certain cases.

Kingsridge

By Alice Ross Colver

Almost sixteen years ago, they had been giving another party. It had been a celebration for him at that time, in honor of his recent appointment as Judge of the Supreme Court of his state. To it, as tonight, nearly all of Kingsridge had been invited. All those of importance and some of no importance, since, in this new public prominence, social lines would not well be drawn.

But they deliberately had not invited Mattie Barton, the wife of Steven's second cousin, deceased, and Gerry's mother. For George Barton, of Audrey's generation, had married beneath him. Mattie had been a girl of little education and no breeding, a pretty girl, who more than once had got herself talked about a girl who developed into a slatternly woman with a vicious tongue and a fondness for the bottle.

Steven had felt sorry for George who had been betrayed by his own weakness. But at least he had tried to evade his responsibilities. He had stuck to Mattie even when he knew she was dragging him down to her level. Finally, at Steven's suggestion, when George could no longer secure or hold a job anywhere he had gone west to try his luck in oil. Steven had felt certain in the rather forlorn hope that George would strike it rich and satisfy the nagging of his wife, who, marrying into the King family had expected more than she had received, or at the very least, that he would pull himself together and become a man again. Unfortunately, neither of those things happened. George had been accidentally killed in a barroom brawl where he had been a mere spectator, and Mattie had been saddled with the responsibility of looking after his wife and child.

They lived in a small five-room frame house in the valley, and Steven had left them there. He bought the house, kept it in good repair, and charged Mattie a nominal rental for the payment of which he never pressed her. She supported herself and Gerry in a smouldering discontent by leasing the two upper rooms, and possibly by other means. Steven never inquired. He could not bear to see or talk with her. He was ashamed to be in any way connected with her. And since reformation was impossible avoidance was his only possible choice.

He did not mind avoiding Mattie, but Gerry was another matter. For as Gerry ran some of the King blood, Moreover, Gerry was a young American, and Steven was a man who had a sincere and deep interest in all young Americans. He regarded them as custodians of the future. He considered that in their hands lay the hope and the welfare of the country. Therefore everything possible should be done to shape the characters of these youths for their inevitable responsibilities. It was he who organized a Boy Scout group in Kingsridge, sponsored a 4-H Club, helped establish a YMCA. He was tireless in his efforts to make friends with the lads of the town and to help develop their best potentialities. He was eminently successful, too. They responded to his trust in them, to his expectations of them, to his sympathy and understanding and quiet generosity. And it was a proud day for Steven King when two or three or in full groups of six or more, they were persuaded, once a year at Easter to join a church. To each one who did he always gave a gold watch.

But not all boys could be so reached and Gerry was one of these. If he came to Sunday School it was in fear of the teacher and to create such a disturbance as he had to be expelled. The 4-H club did not interest him. He was a bully in the Boy Scouts. Steven could then reiterate that his less influence over this boy who was his own kin than over any other. But perhaps in the relationship lay the difficulty. For Mattie, resentful of his attitude toward her, jealous of his success and embittered by the fate which after all her greedy hopes, had worsened her life instead of bettering it, was unsparing in her denunciation of him. Inevitably the poison of her animosity infected her son.

On the evening of the party that April night it had stormed. But none of the guests had stayed away because of that. The afternoon had been swing when, as tonight, the front doorbell rang, and, as tonight, Elizabeth happened to be near and opened to its summons. There outside stood Mattie, her buxom figure under a cheap rain coat, her complexion, into a bright floral print dress, a bright floral print dress, a bright red hair, and rivulets running down from the hat over her cheeks and accentuating face. At sight of Elizabeth she slipped her cloak the rest of the way off her shoulders, tossed it across her arm and made an uncertain attempt to enter the house.

"Guess you forgot about me when you shout out your invitations," she said, in her usual whine. "But I come, anyway. I got right hungry."

Quickly Elizabeth stepped outside onto the sheltered porch and shut the door tight behind her.

"You have no right!" she exclaimed in sharp anger. "You're not invited. You're a disgrace. I don't have to let you in or do a thing for you! But if you're hungry, go around to the back door and Nellie will feed you. Then get yourself home, and mind now! Don't you dare ring my front door bell again or try any funny stunts around here or I'll call the police!"

Mattie had not gone to the back door nor had she departed. Unconcealed, she had thought up a way of revenge that she believed would be highly gratifying. Wrapping the black cloak over her finery, she had stepped forth into the downpour again and made her way across the valley to the hill side on the opposite side where newcomers, the Brandts, lived. At their kitchen door she had wheedlingly begged for food until she was admitted by the servants. Uncertain of her identity and not wanting as strangers to make any errors, they had, upon orders from their mistress, given her a good meal. At the end of it Mattie had announced her identity with deliberate planned malice.

"Reckon you'll be s'prised when I tell you who I am. Guess you'd better watch your step, relation of Judge King's. Yep! But he would not let me into his house tonight. No, sirree! Turned me out into the rain from his grand party, he did. Him and Elizabeth, together. And me with a starving little boy." She reached out a grimy hand for the chicken bone left on her plate and tucked them into her handbag. Then with a wink at her audience, she extracted a flat bottle, tipped it up and drank deeply.

"G'l's me heart," she mumbled. "G'l's me heart. Well, shanks to ye and Gaw bless ye."

They had all been there — the butler, the cook, the upstairs maid and a curious and interested dish-girl who was, at that time, unknown to the Kings although she had heard about them. Well, it had been a fine introduction for her. Mattie had thought, and the triumph had made her wavering way out once more into the wet night.

She could go home now, she had told herself. She had shaken and humbled a mighty enemy—her cousin, he was whether he liked it or not—on his pedestal. She had fixed his snooty wife, too. Maybe next time they'd be a little more careful how they treated her.

But she never reached... her home. In the blinding rain her black cloak had been indistinguishable from the surrounding blackness and a truck had run her down. In less time than it takes to tell it, Gerry had been orphaned.

This was the killing of which he had accused Elizabeth tonight.

Steven's mind went on. . . .

He had felt that the 12-year-old Gerry should be brought into his own home. But Elizabeth had divined and forestalled this thought. She had said immediately that the sharp-eyed, tousle-headed youngster with his bold wild ways and his knowledge of the world would be a bad influence on young Donald and little Susan. Let him be sent to a good school full of rules of his old associates here for a few years. Then, later, perhaps...

Steven, both conscience-stricken and relieved had acceded to the wisdom of this proposal without argument. Yes, Elizabeth had controlled his thinking that once. And Gerry had been packed off to a good school in New England with all of his old associates here on a farm nearby. But, undisciplined and defiant of restraint, he had been a problem from the first. Neither the school nor the farm family had been grieved when, the next year, he had disappeared. Elizabeth too, had been relieved. "Well," she had said, "we've done everything we could. Now we can wash our hands of him." Steven had not agreed. In his heart he knew they had not done everything. For they had passed their responsibility on to strangers. They had withheld the warmth of human affection.

He had instigated a search, of course, but Gerry had not been found.

He said now to his wife, "I agree with you that regrets are useless. But if he wants anything I shall have to help him get it."

"Steven!"

He looked at her in surprise. "What's the matter with that?"

"Because what he wants is Susan."

He drew his gray brows together, surprised, as always by her feminine and utterly irrational way of jumping to conclusions and reading into words a remembrance that often she was right. But until he had arrived at the same end by a more logical approach he could never accept her findings.

He said "I think you're anticipating my dear. There's no reason..."

"I don't need reason." She snapped. "I know."

In the same room that Audrey had had as a girl here in this house, she and Frank were making ready for bed. He had undressed quickly and now sat in his pajamas smoking, his elbows on his knees, a little dish into which he flicked his ashes, on the floor between his slippered feet.

He sat solidly his big shoulders hunched, his head thrust forward as he watched his wife who had discarded only her dress, going through her slightly ritual with creams and curlers before her dressing table. He liked looking at the smooth roundness of her bare arms, the quick and certain modulation of her fingers, the neat way the ribbons of her white satin slip stayed on her square slim shoulders, and however down, the slight movement of her narrow flanks. Watching, his bright eyes lost their troubled look and took on an anticipatory shining. He was glad to be here after six years in the army, the whole of the last three in Germany without any returns to the States. It has been a long stretch.

She said, spreading a mask of white over her face, "What are you thinking about?"

"You." His voice held a familiar hungry note. "You're nice to come home to."

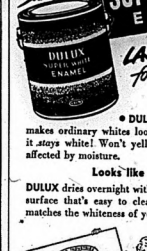
"You've come home to a lot more than just me." She was care fully brisk. She didn't permit sentimental tonight, there were other things on her mind. Things that seemed more important. Susan. What was she going to do about Susan? The child had put her in a quandary and until something was settled about her, Audrey could hardly think of anything else. But she didn't want Frank to know yet just how distressed she was. It put her in a ridiculous position. She went on, taking up a secondary matter. "I don't mean to rush you. After all you've only just got back. But have you any idea what you're going to do? What'll you'll get into?"

He shook his head. He hadn't forgotten this about Audrey, either—the way she could nail him along. But in the end she was always all right. He never had bothered in her indifference. It was an act, a pronouncement of her independence of him, like her decisions, taken alone, as to where Susan and Donald should go to school. She didn't yield easily. She never had. Not on anything. But he had learned to manage her for the most part by a massive patience and an undemanding generosity, with just often enough of flat-footed authoritativeness.

He said not worried," he told her.

"No of course there's no need to worry. You can probably find an opening with an import firm even though the one you were with folded. Or," she turned on the stool to face him as she picked up tissue and began wiping off the heavy cream, "had you thought at all of something political? Dad could help you there, you know."

He nodded, What she didn't realize was that he resented more time. The civilian life he had come back to was not the civilian life he had left. Business was restricted in strange ways. Labor was in the saddle. There were funny goings-on down in Washington. But there was nothing for him actually to worry about. America was prosperous. A boom was riding high. He had plenty of contacts and if these failed, there were, as Audrey had pointed out, always political appointments. Something would turn up.



He said, "I'm not going to be in any hurry."

Need is Far More Power, Truman Asks Prompt Action

Washington, May 2. (CP)—President Truman Tuesday asked Senate to give prompt consideration to a treaty between the United States and Canada designed to step up power production on the Niagara River.

The treaty, signed in Washington in February, awaits ratification by the Canadian parliament and by the United States Senate.

In a message to Congress, Truman asked that the agreement be ratified so that more hydro-electric power, "badly needed in the United States and Canada, can be made available at the earliest possible time."

Recommending its approval as "a fair and wise treaty", the president said it should be considered in relation to other power sources in the northeastern United States, particularly the proposed St. Lawrence seaway-power project. Hearings on this undertaking, which would be a joint project of the two countries, are underway before a congressional committee here.

Two Developments Needed

A 'de.PC LP.NU ARME

"Considered from the power point of view alone . . . both the Niagara and St. Lawrence sources are badly needed," the Truman message said. "The National security and economic growth of this part of the country require the fullest utilization of low-cost power should be rapidly developed."

The president once again made it clear that he favors public construction of the additional facilities which could be developed by ratification of the Niagara treaty.

"This is a question, however, which is not determined by the treaty itself," he said. "It is a question which is in the United States must settle under our own procedures and laws."

"It would not be appropriate either for this country or for Canada to regard such an international agreement between them contain the solution of what is entirely a domestic problem.

"All this treaty does is to make additional water legally available for power purposes in each of the two countries."

The treaty would authorize permanent allocations of Niagara river power for domestic, scenic, navigation and power purposes.

L. B. Pearson, Canada's External Affairs Minister, said in Ottawa at the time the treaty was signed that it would result in greater diversion of water from the river for power-producing purposes.

The Truman message said it prescribed how much water may be diverted for power purposes in two countries while preserving and enhancing the scenic beauty of Niagara Falls.

Series of Mishaps Ends in Destruction Of Car and Injuries

Toronto, May 3 — (CP) — Michael Dubey, 50, was taking one of his first driving lessons Tuesday in a new automobile he'd saved more than 25 years to buy.

Unexplained flames burst from the car's hood. Dubey became excited and stepped on the accelerator, the car jumped forward and struck another vehicle. Then it pulled left a light standard. N.Y. Area, Eager to See Sun Again, Pleads With Rainmaker Take it Easy

Take it easy, will you Doc?

In one form or another, this plea went up today from New York baseball fans, golfers, thermatism-sufferers and a number of other citizens who would like to see the sun again.

It may be just coincidence but: Last March 14, when the city hired Harvard's Howell to try his hand at artificial rain-making everybody was moaning about the water shortage. New York was being called "Sahara on the Subway".

Six weeks later the shortage is not over; but hardly a day has gone by that New York hasn't had rain, snow, sleet, fog or all of them in combination.

Whatever the cause, New York's reservoirs were barely half full when Howell took over. Now they are at 83 per cent of capacity compared with 99 per cent a year ago.

"If this stinking weather we've been having is due to artificial means, may those responsible rot for pains and aches as bad as mine!" said a worker to the Daily News.

Howell has tried eight times to make rain usually by "seeding" the clouds with sodium iodine. Rain has fallen each time but Howell declines to take credit—or blame. He says it's much too early to tell whether his efforts helped nature along.

Meanwhile the reservoirs, New York's reservoirs were barely half full when Howell took over. Now they are at 83 per cent of capacity compared with 99 per cent a year ago.

WANTED SUSPECT IN BANK ROBBERY GIVES SELF UP

Surrenders to Editor Of Montreal Paper

Montreal, May 3. (CP)—Young Nick Cooper, wanted for questioning, in connection with a bank hold-up and gun-battle a week ago here, Tuesday night surrendered to the city editor of the Montreal Herald all for the love of a lady.

Red-faced Montreal police admitted after he had been turned over to them that they had been rushing heavily-armed officers at that very time to a summer cottage north of the city where Cooper was suspected of hiding out.

Elaine Marion Winsome, 19-year-old brunette, called the Herald Tuesday night and said: "Nick wants to turn himself in."

Shortly afterwards, city editor Harold Gardiner met the couple on a dark street corner. They accompanied him to the newspaper office. Gardiner says he left each other's arms when Gardner met them.

"I'm willing to face the music —but we want to get married," said the 22-year-old Cooper before he was turned over to city police. He surrendered more than $2,000 in cash, which he told Gardner was part of the proceeds of Royal Bank holdup. The bandit's bride has confessed to taking part in the robbery and subsequently running gun battle with police and a third is in hospital suffering from a wound in the abdomen.

Cooper told Gardner that he had escaped by himself with the proceeds of the robbery but that he had returned because he loved Elaine, pretty brunette.

DREW INITIATES LENGTHY DEBATE ON COMMUNISM

Anti-Christ Doctrine Opinion Expressed

Ottawa, May 2. (CP)—A debate on communism, its Canadian ramifications and possible threat to the peace of the world, has started in Canada's parliament.

It was initiated Tuesday by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader who termed communism an anti-Christ doctrine, the "most terrifying and brutal the world has ever known." He proposed that communism and other "similar activities" be outlawed under the criminal code.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, External Affairs Minister Pearson and many other front-line speakers entered the discussion. It likely will continue today.

Most speakers said communism was a menace, but cautioned against narrowing civil liberties by a criminal-code revision. The government-sponsored ban was summed up by Mr. St. Laurent. He said:

"I would be sorry to see it become a crime to hold opinions, unless one did something in consequence of those opinions threaten the security of the state."

Mr. Pearson said communism in Canada was in decline though Russian imperialism abroad was on the increase. Canada, he said, should not be led into "hasty or ill-considered action" either at home or abroad.

Many Leaders In Church Oppose Mercy Killings

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—Bishop A. E. Cowderoy, Roman Catholic of the Church of England said Tuesday he disagrees completely with Dr. Walter Robert Matthews, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, who spoke Tuesday in favor of euthanasia, [illegible] mercy killings.

"I am definitely not in favor of mercy killings," he said.

James Cardinal McQuigan, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto, said in a statement the Church's stand against mercy killings is clear. "It is a crime that no one has hardly need to be enumerated again."

Dr. E. Crossley Hunter, pastor of Trinity United Church here, expressed "modified sympathy" with the Dean's view. Dr. Hunter said he had known cases of extreme and incurable suffering where it seemed "the humane and kindly thing was to end its agony."

Other United Church pastors disagreed with the Dean.

Lie Will Visit Moscow, Possibly May See Stalin

Hopes to Persuade Russia To Agree to U.N. Conference

Paris, May 3 — (CP)—Trygve Lie, United Nations Secretary-General, said today he will fly to Moscow May 10 in an attempt to persuade Russia to agree to a conference of the U. N. Security Council and all world leaders.

Lie told a press conference that he had proposed previously that the Security Council hold meetings with "heads of states and with cabinet members of all member nations."

He put off his final decision until he had consulted British and French Foreign Office officials on the Chinese question.

In London, Lie saw Prime Minister Clement Attlee. In Paris he has already seen French President Vincent Auriol and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

Lie said he expected to be in Moscow for several days and to see Soviet leaders.

Hopes to See Stalin

"If Premier Stalin is in Moscow and if he wants to see me, I want to see him," he said.

Lie's toughest problem is the crisis faced by the United Nations over the Soviet boycott of U. N. organizations. Since last Jan. 10 the Russians have been staking out Communist Chinese meetings in protest against continued representation of the Chinese Nationalists.

Lie told reporters today that meetings of the Security Council with world leaders are necessary because, "the most critical situation since 1945 has developed this year, not only for the United Nations but for the future of the world itself."

Effort Must Be Made

Lie declared that a great and new effort must be made this year to bring the cold war to an end. He added:

"The first step clearly must be to refer the United Nations as a meeting place for negotiations and conciliation of differences and conflicts among the great powers.

"We are at the crossroads. When the United Nations was established in San Francisco, it was created as an organization for the entire world. Today, by reason of the split the world permanently into two camps.

"That road will harden existing divisions in the world, create new ones, perpetuate and accelerate the armaments race, make economic progress and social condition, condemn all the poor and backward parts of the world to remaining poor and hungry, intensify the prospects of war and accompanying hysteria to new depths of intellectual and moral degradation, and destroy any chance for agreement on coptrol of atomic energy.

"There is only one possible end to that road—sooner or later, a third world war," Lie told reporters Tuesday night. Murray Scott, 25, was seized after he was chased and held for police by Albert Walker, who lives near the store.

US HEARS MOSCOW PLANS NEW PURGE POLAND'S ARMY

Washington, May 3 — (AP) — Rumors that the Russians are planning a new purge of Poland's army and the Polish communist party have reached United States government officials here.

If the shake-up comes, it will be the latest in a long series aimed at tightening Kremlin control over the iron-curtain countries.

State department officials are convinced that the Russians have so entrenched their political agents and secret police in those countries that there is no possibility of an overthrow of Soviet power there in the predictable future.

Little support is to be found among congressmen and state department experts on eastern Europe for Paul Hoffman's view that the Soviet system of satellites will "crack and crack quite soon" and that the western world now building up behind the iron curtain.

Hoffman told a United States Chamber of Commerce meeting here Tuesday that he expects the crack-up would occur "within a year or two." But they added that little prospect of their hopes being realized.

Representatives Carl Vinson (Dem. Ga.) and W. Sterling Cole Rep. N.Y.) called Hoffman's assertion "wishful thinking."

Vinson, Cole, Bradley, the country's No. 1 military leader, yesterday said there was no sign of let-up in Soviet pressure.

The largest purge known occurred in the Soviet army in March when Verdimir Clementis lost his post as foreign minister and the Czech government apparently became more subjected to hard western connections.

Tighten Up Control

Before that Wladislaw Gomulka vice-minister of defence in Poland was removed as chairman of the central committee of the communist party. He was driven down to the rank position devoid of power.

Reports in Poland, where the Russians late last year put one of their own army officers, Marshal Rokossovsky, at the head of the Polish military establishment.

Rumors of shakeups in Hungarian party and army purge in Poland have been heard in Washington and said to reflect a desire on his part to tighten up Soviet-communist control of these two satellites.

No Cheese Factory Meetings This Spring

Due to the lateness of the season no cheese factory meetings will be held in factories in the Belleville district this spring, according to Jack M. Bain chief inspector for Western and Eastern Ontario.

Mr. Bain said that due to the fact that the majority of factories in the district will not be operating later than usual in opening it had been thought advisable not to hold the customary spring factory meetings. Crash into Abutment Bruises Driver

Nothing more than a bit of dust was knocked off the corner abutment of the Upper Bridge when shortly before one today a car turning off Front Street missed the entrance to the bridge and crashed into the concrete standard. But the same can not be said for the car.

Howard Alford of Campbellford was driving north on Front Street intending to turn across the Upper bridge. He delayed his turning too long and his car bopped the sidewalk and crashed into the abutment.

Alford, age 58, bruised his cheek when his head bumped into the windshield, while the front end of his car was damaged to the extent of approximately $250.

WARM WEATHER COMING

Toronto, May 3 (CP)— Warmer weather spreading across southern Ontario is expected to have farmers a chance to complete seeding operations.

Field representatives said Tuesday in the weekly crop report from the Ontario government department of Agriculture that wintery conditions had damaged hay and alfalfa fields.

There was little growth on pasture land and supplemental feed stocks. Many farmers were forced to buy hay for stock.

Members Observe Citizenship Day At Kiwanis Club

The world today is divided into "two camps" — not by conflicting ideologies — our western world with our way of life as we have shaped it through centuries of struggle for freedom and on the other Communism within the headquarters in the Kremlin, said John Reeve, member of parliament for Vegreville in Alberta, in speaking to the Kiwanis Club on "Citizenship Day."

The essence of good citizenship is one's love and loyalty to his country or what we term patriotism because it welds all diversified elements as we have in Canada into a hard core of resistance should outside forces not only challenge but threaten our existence" continued the speaker. "Communism in the British and American people lies in the fact that they were successful in building up their material stocks of diversified views into one complete whole. That is why Canada as a result of two wars has emerged with greater strength and prestige, yet we admit that our record of good Canadian citizenship is not all it should be.

Victims of Prejudices

Continuing Mr. Decore stated that we take pride in championing the cause of the rights of the individual yet too often do we find ourselves victims of prejudices, fears and misunderstanding. Because of a man's color or because his name does not sound Anglo-Saxon. Too often there have been refusal of membership in certain clubs because a man's accent is considered a "foreigner." The speaker at the recent prayer breakfast in Canada's Citizenship Act. Speaking of the recent immigration to Canada, Mr. Decore asked what do these people expect and what can we as Canadians expect from them? The newcomer should learn to speak our language, secondly he wants to qualify economic security and thirdly, he wants to be accepted socially in the community in which he lives.

Want New Skills

"We on the other hand, want people with new skills and new devices for the development of our potential natural resources, who will increase our national income and who will help to defend our country if the occasion should arise," the speaker, who claimed that newcomers were more conscious of the basic values of democracy than we are because that is why they left their native countries to live in a new land. We must also sell Canadianism to Canadians because every fifteen or sixteen years a quarter of a million people who become of age in this country. The speaker believed that language differences are the cause of segregation in Canada but he believed we were no longer a problem between southern Ontario groups. It is a matter of that because of the great number of ethnic groups our cultural background would be greatly varied.

"The various ethnic groups with their diversified backgrounds have each a contribution to make to our Canadian way of life and our strength lies in our diversity" he said the speaker. He explained that his constituency in Western Canada was made up of a number of diversified groups yet all had been moulded into one great whole for the common good. "I think that Canadians of whatever origin are better Canadians if they realize that the stock from which they came has a fine past immortalized in literature, music, handicrafts and religious faiths," said Mr. Decore in conclusion. The speaker was introduced by Harry Brown and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Frank Harback.

Many Members Present

Accompanying Mr. Decore from Ottawa to the meeting were George Prudham, assistant secretary to the Minister of Resources, Isador Shimbaugh and Frank Follwell member for South Hastings. Ray Grant introduced Stanley Levinick to the gathering, who gave a couple of solos on his accordian. Mr. Levinick is a new arrival in Canada and fast assimilating the ways of Canadian life. The singing commercial was for Jack Walton of the Dominion Bank. Taylor Kinsella presided as the luncheon. Frank Creegan and Stuart Robb won the attendance prize donated by George Forhan.

School Contract Awarded to Belleville Firm

St. Lawrence Contracting Company of Belleville has been awarded the contract for tenders for the construction of the new Central Hastings high school to be built at Madoc, it has been announced.

The new school, the cost of which was estimated at $235,000, will be built in two sections, one section comprising classrooms, laboratory and home economics quarters and the second section about 56 by 73 feet to provide gymnasium and auditorium quarters.

Architects for the school are Craig and Madill, St. Clair Ave., West, Toronto, who also drafted plans for the new Hastings county home under construction west of the city.

Employment Situation Shows Some Improvement

The employment situation in Belleville and district has improved considerably during the past two months with approximately 500 fewer persons out of work now than during the month of February.

Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local employment office stated today there were 973 persons on claim" at the end of last week, while this number had again been reduced slightly this week. The peak unemployment in Belleville and district was during February when there were 1472 persons on claim.

The above figure did not include workers on "short claim", or those who were working in factories three or four days per week. At one time during the winter there were 143 such workers, but these now have all returned to five day per week production. Factories returning to five day week production are

196 in Deloro Idle

"Right now our postal claimants, or those outside the 12-mile limit from the city are our biggest headache," stated Mr. Reed. At the present time there are about 100 workers in the Deloro district idle.

Fifteen farm workers have been placed within the past week and additional workers of this class could be placed if the weather turned more favorable. There are about 10 additional applications of this nature to be filled pending on the weather.

The largest construction project at Belleville at the moment is that of the new old people's home being erected by the county immediately west of the city. Some 40 workers are presently employed, mostly day labor. Seven carpenters are employed on the project with the same number of block layers. Additional block layers are required, it was stated.

Heart-Touching Roadside Drama Follows Accidental Death of Puppy

"Gosh, maybe he ain't dead after all," said the small eight-year-old youngster biting his lips to keep back the tears.

His six-year-old chum stood nearby. Whitefaced, with trembling lips, he looked down at the body of his year-old puppy which had been struck down a few minutes previous by an automobile.

It had been an accident. The pup, full of life, had broken away from his master, a boy and friend, and raced directly in front of the oncoming car.

The driver of the car stood nearby, taking in the heartrending roadside drama.

"I'm sorry, boys," he said. "It could not be helped. Can I take you home or at least to where your daddy works so I can explain the accident?"

The six-year-old owner of the puppy shook his head. He could not speak.

His chum turned to the driver and said, "No, I guess not, mister. You see we have to take Tory home."

Sad-faced the boys turned away.

Never in history has a smaller funeral cortege slowly wended its way down Higbie No. 2. It travelled a distance of some fifty yards, then turned in the driveway of the home of the six-year-old boy.

It stopped near the house. Heads bowed, clenched teeth keeping back the tears, the boys looked down at the body of the pup. Its head lolled over the side of the wagon.

The boys waited, silent in their sorrow.

One spoke. "He don't seem to be coming to, does he?"

The other shook his head.

The father of the puppy's owner walked quietly to his son. He placed an arm about his shoulders. "Come along, son," he said quietly, "I guess there's nothing we can do for Tory now."

And two heart - broken youngsters, the tears now rolling down their faces, bade a final farewell to their puppy friend.

Blossom Sunday Ten Days Away

St. Catharines, May 3—(CP)— This year's blossom Sunday in the Niagara district shows signs of being the latest on record.

Although the weather has been "terrifically hot and we have more rain," the blossoms may not make their debut even by May 13, one district fruit farmer said today.

In 1945, an all-time record was established when blossoms were out 100 per cent by April 14. Normal blossom time is between May 7 and 12.

Mail Ban Relaxed

Ottawa, May 3 — (CP) — Post office officials said today that regulations denying use of the mails to a group of Toronto brokers "have been relaxed in some instances."

The mail ban was imposed on about 12 Toronto companies last April. It was made under a section of the post office act which gives authority for such action where there is reason to suspect the mails are being used to extract money by misrepresentation.

Beverage Room Hours Unchanged Says Board

Toronto, May 3 — (CP)—The Ontario Liquor Control Board has no intention of changing present regulations which require beverage rooms to close between the hours of 6 P. M. and 8 P. M. Liquor Commissioner Arthur Welsh said today that the commissioner had found that the early evening closing "had worked out satisfactorily."

"We have no intention of changing the regulation," he said in reply to a resolution passed by the Ontario Provincial Council of Bartenders and Hotel Service Employees.

The Hotel Service organization had urged that the closing be dispensed with in order to facilitate a straight eight hour day rather than the present "split shift" now worked by waiters in beverage rooms.

Price of New Cheese Rises

Toronto, May 3 — (CP) — The price of new Ontario cheese rose about four cents a pound in carload lots today, a dealer reported.

Recent federal government measures requisitioning cheese supplies for the British cheese contract caused the price boost, he said. Demand is so strong, dealers said the prices have risen to 32 1-2 and 33 cents a pound by the carload.

New Traffic Robot Simplifies Signals

Capetown, South Africa —(CP) — A new traffic robot, which is expected to be the forerunner of production of ordinary traffic light signals, has been produced in prototype form and patented throughout the world by a young Capetown manufacturer.

According to the inventor, a single source of light serves to display two or more colored lights in a timed relation, the change being effected by the mechanical control of a perforated light masking frame which is movable between the source of light and different colored lenses.

The masking frame can be adapted to produce any regularly-varied or co-ordinated signal effect desired without the intervention of electrical equipment incorporated in the normal traffic light signal.

The invention is said to be applicable not only to full scale signal operation but to simple mechanical operation by simple mechanism like a toy robot for the instruction of children and others in traffic regulation.

The inventor says the robot will eventually be produced as a cheap substitute for the normal traffic light signal.

Philadelphia, May 3 — (AP)— A United States Air Force officer says a new camera in a jet airplane flying at 500 miles an hour at 50 feet took a picture of a man playing cards on the ground so clear "you could read the ace of spades."

Col. George W. Goddard, director of photography and research development at the Air Force centre, Wright Field, O., told the Philadelphia Chapter of the Armed Forces Communication Association Tuesday night the new camera was capable of taking clear pictures from a low-flying plane travelling 3,000 miles an hour — if such a speed were attainable.

He said the camera uses moving film, doing away with the conventional type of shutter.

Pneumonia Handicaps South African Mines

Johannesburg — (CP) — The South African gold mining industry is losing about 50,000 working days every year due to high and rising incidence of pneumonia among mine laborers — from tropical areas from their native land in South Africa.

Tropical diseases number approximately 40,000 among nearly 314,000 native laborers employed by the gold mining industry. Statistics compiled at the South African Institute for Medical Research by Dr. David Ordman, indicate that in the last 10 years there has been a definite rise in the incidence of pneumonia from 50 to 125 per 1,000 a year, or from 2,000 to 5,000 actual cases.

To combat this adverse human and economic factor in the mining industry, Dr. Ordman has been conducting research into control of pneumonia and the preparation of more effective prophylactic.

He has recommended that all native arriving from tropical regions have two injections of the vaccine at the time of their recruitment at an interval of a week and a third one on arrival at Johannesburg.

Dr. Ordman attributes the high rate of pneumonia among tropical natives to new skin diseases, the germs of the local natives to which they are not immune, and the general lowering of resistance to their own germs under the new conditions of life, of acclimate and the rigors of mining work.

The pneumonia incidence rate of the African native mining laborers has remained unchanged for several years at under 25 per 1,000.

TRUCK OUT OF CONTROL KILLS PEDESTRIAN

Port Hope, May 3 — (CP) — Sam Gyatt, 74, of nearby Bewdley, was killed Tuesday by a truck as he walked along the highway.

Police said the truck, driven by Stephen Lawrence of Port Hope, first struck an automobile veered out of control and ran into Gyatt. No charges were laid.

TV Wrestling Fan Loses His Wife Via Divorce Court

Pasadena, Calif., May 3—(AP) Mrs. Ardith Englehardt said Tuesday life with her television wrestling fan husband was just too exhausting.

She testified in her divorce suit that while she and her husband, Richard, 32, were watching the video grunt and groaners last Dec. 23, an argument ensued.

"He pulled me off the couch and grabbed my toe in what he called a step-over toe hold," she testified.

"Then he grabbed my arm. He called that his short armbar hold."

She got the divorce.

Brantford, Ont., May 3 (CP)— Ross Hill of nearby Middleport, injured Tuesday night in the collision of a motorcycle he was driving and an automobile, was left by a middle-aged motorist at the gate of the hospital here.

An ambulance driver found Hill outside the hospital and took him in. Margaret Collier, passenger on the motorcycle was also injured and admitted to hospital.

Army Retains Hold On Chobham Common

Chobham, England — (CP) — Chobham, home of 2nd Canadian Corps during the war, is still having trouble shaking itself loose of the army after five years of "peace."

Indeed, it seems fated to get more of it, and the inhabitants are up in arms.

The War Office wants to increase its present 150-acre tankteering establishment to 650 acres, using a further 500 acres of Chobham Common.

Between Woking and Sunningdale, this pleasant piece of Surrey countryside is within cycling distance of London and for years its heather slopes have been among the favorite haunts of day holidayers.

Much has been made of the government's plan for a "green belt" around London, and residents of the neighboring communities of Virginia Water, Wentworth and Sunningdale have united in asking the government to practise here what it has been preaching.

The tank-testing ground now in use have been transformed from parkland into a dustbowl in summer and a quagmire in winter with the noises of the tank engines as an added nuisance.

One of the royal lodges often used by the King and Queen is in the vicinity. Another of Chobham's distinctions is the old home of the 18th century poet and essayist, Mathew Arnold.

Prisoner Escapes Police Custody On Way to Jail

A cordon of police was thrown around the city today at noon as officers searched for James Kennedy, aged 21, of this city, who escaped from police as he was being taken from the police station to be lodged in the county jail.

Kennedy was on parole from the Ontario Reformatory, was arrested Tuesday night at the private quarters in Victoria Ave. resident, and had been charged with vagrancy. Police stated that Kennedy would also face theft charges.

Some weeks ago the Victoria Ave. resident learned that a supposed transient had been using the loft above his garage as sleeping quarters. Yesterday a mattress was kept in the loft was moved and under it was discovered a shotgun. Police were notified and an officer laid in wait and arrested Kennedy as he returned to the loft after midnight. The shotgun was found to have been stolen.

Today police were taking Kennedy to the county jail and had stopped at the Victoria Ave. address to pick up the shotgun. While walking out through the driveway with police Kennedy suddenly broke into a run and managed to elude officers by ducking through backyards.

He disappeared down George Street and although the officer was in hot pursuit, made good his escape by scrambling down the hillside on to Great St. James St. where he disappeared.

NATIONAL TOURIST SERVICE WEEK

Responsibilities of Canadians in entertaining their visitors during the coming travel season are stressed this time which is known as National Tourist Service Week. It is the purpose of the observance to stress the importance of hospitality so that the visitors will on their way home plan to come again or to urge others to make a grand tour of Canada in another year. These responsible resting upon Canadians include the following points, the very best accommodation at the most reasonable and fairest rates and the recognition of the duty to make the guests of the country realize that they are welcome in the highest degree and that Canadians value their visit and fraternizing across the border. Courtesy is one of the chief qualities in the host and hostess and every consideration makes the visitor welcome as the guest in May.

Canada has many attractions to show her visitors and these with many courteous and kindly acts her people show will make the guests of the country realize that they spent in the Dominion have been days of countless attractions and of demonstration of the spirit of kinship of the people of these two great branches of the English-speaking people.

There are powerful racial and social ties between these peoples of the North American Continent, ties which are very strong and become even stronger by the meeting of people and the Americans people on our side of the boundary line and on their side. The sense of comradeship of both peoples is strong.

To have Americans and others visit Canada means the use of outstanding. Incidentally it will increase the value of but the chief interest is the continued good will and understanding of the two branches of the English-speaking people in the New World.

MONARCHS AS COMPOSERS

Radio is widening the bounds of knowledge among the people. Many may not know that King Henry VIII of England was a musician by no means mediocre. That the royal monarch possessed a rare gift for music and for musical composition is pointed out in a BBC address which presented not without interest by royalty. King Henry was a man of wide culture and a genuine musician. He played the recorder, the flute and the virginals. A miniature of the King's Psalter shows Henry playing the harp while it is believed he performed on the viola as well as he understood perfectly the type of composition suited to various instruments. The program included his dance tune for viols, a charming song "Pastime with Good Company" and an exquisite hymn "O Lord the Maker of All Thing."

It is interesting to reflect on this aspect of a man, who while deeply religious, cultured and accomplished to be remembered chiefly for the grosser side of his character.

In the BBC program his music was followed by a madrigal and charming little song for voice with lute, "O Death, Rock Me Asleep," which was attributed to a second queen, Anne Boleyn, the mother of Queen Elizabeth I. The latter did not compose it or if she did, there is no record in her works. Queen Elizabeth loved music greatly. There was published in her reign a book of madrigals "The Triumphs of Oriana" in 1601.

Other royal musicians were John IV of Portugal, King John I of England, the ill-fated monarch, Princess Charlotte wife of George IV, and Prince Albert, consort of Queen Victoria, whose drawing room song "All Silent Were the Fountains" was sung on the program. Prince Albert was a prolific composer. His hymn tunes are sung in many British churches and among royal heads of Europe there must not be forgotten the Duke of Windsor whose bagpipe march "Piper Laddie" was written for him as Prince of Wales. At time the Duke was greatly interested in the pipes and the appeal of music is native to all human hearts and when all through the ages. Its themes may change and music may take different forms but it is one of the unifying influences guiding people's lives, kings and

It took the I.O.D.E. to find out the kind of books men to read. During the war the Order distributed nearly million magazines and 1,404,831 books to army camps, air-centres and ships. It found the navy liked books of adventure and nature while the air force read more for information. The men at sea liked western novels; the men of the Prairies preferred sea-stories.

THE ZITHER

They obey where the zither is
Any mother used to play.
They've only been to add it or
Have given it away.
They would never want it back
Each day would Never home
The strings upon a zither
One of us should care to Strum.
Mother had learned
Some, till that fellow came
To tongue
With visions of a zither
To fortune and renown.
Mother often told me if I'd practice night and Day
I might be either I
Or Paderewski.
But I only heeded mother,
And the zither learned to Play,
I might now be making music
In some popular cafe.

And I have no touch of rhythm
In my finger and my Thumb
Mother said that I'd regret it
If to learn I didn't try.
She was right, I know it now
It. Most regretful now am
I.

Perhaps I could have learned
It, as so frequently she said,
But we parted with the zither
And I chose the pen instead.
Now that fellow with the zither strums a fortune
From the strings
While I'm sitting in an office writing very simple things.

FIVE DOLLARS A LIFE

Mr. Alfred S. Black
Hattiesburg, Mississippi
Dear Mr. Black:

A couple of months ago you dropped into see me, and as the result of our meeting I wrote a column asking for suggestions on how to best spend the $10,000 left by your brother to the Black-Stevenson Foundation to provide preventive and curative treatment for cancer sufferers." And I was plenty happy when you phoned a week after the piece appeared and told me you had received 4,000 letters, men from outstanding medical and research organizations.

Well, this is letter No. 4,001, and if you're attentive and eyes can take it I'd like to outline a startlingly unspectacular plan which may save the lives of 50,000 cancer victims a year at a cost of less than $5 per life.

The idea — and it's a simple one — was passed on to me by Dr. Harold F. Hyman, of New York, the well-known physician whose book "Integrated Medical Practice of Medicine" has been called "the practitioner's bible" by Time magazine. I before I cease into Dr. Hyman's notion, let me first give you a picture of the man behind it.

In the wealthiest of nations, where we have more doctors per capita than anywhere else, millions of people annually get medical check-ups — but seldom are they checked for cancer, that something begins to hurt. The reason, according to Dr. Hyman, is that the average physician's education include a "survey" for cancer, since it involves little more than a few probings and scrapings.

Take, my own case. Every six months or so, my doctor gives me a thorough going over, and the though this has been going on for years, I can't remember his ever looking for cancer in those specific areas where cancer is most likely to occur. And so, of course, I do have cancer I don't figure to have it much longer. Because by and by that time my chances of being cured will have nose-dived about 95 per cent.

As I get it from Dr. Hyman, a person has a five hundred cancer of licking cancer if it is spotted in its highest stage and treated by a competent physician. But once the malignancy is far enough along to cause pain and associated symptoms, the odds against a complete skin-killer drops to 20 per cent. Which, in my simple arithmetic, means that of every five hundred cancer deaths can be prevented if we have the right kind of doctor's office in the country a Cancer Detection Centre, Two or 200 such centres, plus cancer searchers may come up with a miracle cure, but until that time the front-line soldier in the war against this disease must be the overworked and sometimes under-informed general practitioner.

We wouldn't it be a good idea for the Black-Stevenson Foundation to compile the latest knowledge on cancer diagnosis in one hefty illustrated volume and then, working through the various local medical societies, see to it that a copy of this volume, free of charge, reaches the desk of every family doctor in the country? And why wouldn't it be a logical extension of this idea to follow up the book with symposiums whenever the research jobs come up with a worth-while difference in test or technique?

If this program were backed up by an educational campaign to alert both doctors and public to the importance of nipping cancer before it gets a foothold, I'm convinced that at least one incipient case each year. And since there's a 50-50 chance that every baby girl born today will live to be 70, it figures that some 50,000 lives could be saved annually — either by local medicos or specialists and hospitals equipped to handle the job already.

I know this is an undramatic notion, promising no miracles and involving no glass-and-chromium skyscrapers. I also know it isn't new — clinics in many parts of the world and cities have worked along these lines for years. But never on a national scale, however, is something new, and it ought to appeal to you because it would give the Black-Stevenson Foundation the purpose and focus it's looking for. And by putting a couple or hundred thousand on the sure-shot of diagnosis rather than on the long-ranged one of cure, you would be rendering the average guy a big service — one which hardly anybody else is bothering about.

Sincerely,
Billy Rose.

MacKenzie's Column:

Indian Princes Rapidly Moving Toward Oblivion

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The host of bejewelled Indian princes, who for centuries ago ruled their humble subjects with the power of life and death, are rapidly moving toward the oblivion which destiny has decreed.

When the Indian peninsula was divided into the two independent dominions of India and Pakistan, there were more than 600 of these princes. Their combined income in wealth was so great that most of them couldn't even estimate it. They had their own armies and their own navies. Some of these have been absorbed, in whole or in part, by the dominion of India (largely the latter), and the princes have been given fixed incomes in lieu of the revenues they used to collect.

A few of the biggest states continue to exist as constitutional principalities, but their rulers are answerable either to the Indian or Pakistan government.

One of the constitutional principalities is the great state of Hyderabad, which is presided over by that amazing personality the Nizam. His exalted highness, who now speaks with the tongue of the New Delhi government, is reported to be the world's richest man.

The value of his jewelry alone has been estimated at $100,000,000 and his hoard of money and other valuables also has been the basis of a favorite guessing game in India.

The Nizam has a royal sort in many ways. He has been free in giving money for charitable purposes and for the British war efforts, but he watches his pennies. His allows himself $1.05 a day for his own personal expenses, and does some of the mending of his own garments.

The Nizam has been the most powerful prince among the princes and a peculiar circumstance is that he is a Moslem while about four-fifths of his 17,000,000 subjects are Hindus.

It was a tough blow for the Nizam to bow to the new order, and he didn't give in until Indian troops on his domain, finally agreed to turn his huge state over to the New Delhi government in exchange for a big annual income. He surrendered only his actual authority to New Delhi.

THE PACKSACK

"A. Botanist," explains a lady friend of mine, is a person who knows all the flowers that nobody has planted in his yard."

But botanists are a little more than that. Fifty years from now when all the facts of this fabulous era or discovery are being compiled the botanists will have a portion to one another, it may be that the botanists will be forever the palm over all the other branches of science for the further penetration into the mystery of life itself. It is doubtful if the physicists, the chemists could have transformed such miracles in the past 100 years without the highly suggestive explorations of biologists and including the botanists—in advance of them.

Botanists all over the world, but especially in the United States, Russia and Britain, are centring their attention on the question—what makes a plant flower? Most of us—with packets of seeds in hand—suppose that plants flower as a matter of course. Plant them in good soil, at the right season and—it says here, on the packet—they will come into glorious bloom in so many weeks.

But the botanists know differently. They know that there are mysterious and absolute laws governing the flowering of plants. They know that what we call the "short day" plants will not flower at all if grown in the north until the long days come around. And that no amount of coddling and pampering will make them flower, destined to flower during the long days and short nights, they will bloom in the short days and long nights.

They suppose, at this stage of knowledge, that the hormones which incite the plant to flower are stored at night: that the degree and quality of light is the absolute and governing authority in the matter; some require little; others need much; and that mathematics has as much to do with the flowering of a plant as it has with the building of a bridge.

SINUS DISEASE — REAL AND IMAGINARY

"I've got sinus," is an expression often heard. The expression is grammatically atrocious and medically meaningless. A sinus is a space or cavity, of which the body has several of different varieties.

"Air sinuses" known medically as paranasal sinuses, are hollow spaces adjacent to the nose and contained within the bones of the face and head. These spaces communicate with the interior of the nose through small openings. They are lined with a membrane which is continuous with the membranous lining of the interior of the nose. They may be considered as alcoves leading out of a large room.

Many years ago—and occasionally even now, the word "catarrh" was used to describe what was considered a persistent discharge or over-secretion from the nose—even thought to be suffering from catarrh. Catarrh was blamed for a variety of ailments from colds in the nose, ears and respiratory spasms in general, but all the afflictions of the stomach, bowel and urinary apparatus.

Catarrh germs were uniformly found in "catarrhal" discharges and for a time were thought to be the cause of the disorder. The passing of time without any real appearance of this notion, along with advancing knowledge of disease has proved.

Rather suddenly, the word catarrh gave way to "nasal disease". Certain segments of the public soon received this word as due to "sinus". The notion that a persistant discharge from the nose and the three-cornered tragedy often it is —soon became firmly established.

The air sinuses of the head are often infected. The infection may be acute and subside in a few days, or it may linger on and become chronic. It is highly probable that all of the nasal sinuses are infected to some extent at one time a person acquires a "cold," or other infection of the interior of the nose.

An acute infection of one or more sinuses may be the considerable pain in the sinus area, along with the usual symptoms of stuffiness and discharge. Pain developing below the eye or in the forehead — sometimes in other areas of the head is indicative of the sinus trouble—with distruction of the sinus opening.

Chronic sinus infection is invariably associated with discomfort at some point which interferes with drainage. Chronic infection may be due to bony irregularity or to the presence of abnormal soft tissues.

Many of these obstructive disorders can be permanently relieved only by expert surgery. Some soft tissue obstruction will be removed by electro-surgery and occasionally by the injection of solutions into the obstructive tissues which, result in the later shrinkage.

Persistent discharge from the nose is not always due to sinus disease or sinusitis. Abnormal sensitivity of the local tissues allergy—accounts for the difficulty in many instances.

A persistent, offensive discharge from the nose, accompanied by shrinkage of the nasal membranes said crusting, is known as "ozena". This disorder does not seem to be related to sinus disease as such and is a constitutional ailment limed either at the sinuses of the immediate condition itself.

Exposure to extreme warm to cold environments causes a nasal discharge. Irritating dusts of nasal secretions. This condition or effect is in no way to be considered as a disease.

Persistent discharge from one side of the nose in children is often found to be due to some foreign body in the nose, such as a bean or button.

Sinus disease is admittedly a factor in the high degree of persistent nasal discharge. Admittedly, it is not the only factor.

Nasal diphtheria is sometimes cause of such a discharge. It can be distinguished from sinus by a profuse slightly bloody nasal discharge persisting persistently for a few days and producing excoriation of the lip, should be suspected if it persists for more than a week and a culture should be taken to determine whether it is positive for diphtheria. Diphtheria in the nose is acute and subside in a few days, or it may linger on and become chronic. It is highly probable that all of the nasal sinuses are infected to some extent at one time a person acquires a "cold," or other infection of the interior of the nose.

An acute infection of one or more sinuses may be the considerable pain in the sinus area, along with the usual symptoms of stuffiness and discharge. Pain developing below the eye or in the forehead — sometimes in other areas of the head is indicative of the sinus trouble—with distruction of the sinus opening.

Chronic sinus infection is invariably associated with discomfort at some point which interferes with drainage. Chronic infection may be due to bony irregularity or to the presence of ab-

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THOUGHTS

I like to read diaries. It is as though the writer wrote, not to be of himself, but to others. Into a diary a man writes his true self. It was from Thoreau's diary that all of his later books were compiled. He himself once wrote in his diary:"My thoughts are my company. They have a certain individuality and require attendance, aye, personality."

We have in the inspiring meditations of Marcus Aurelius, because he wrote down his thoughts from time to time over an expanse of years. And much of the best of Emerson, Montaigne and Arnold Bennett are to be found in their diaries.

The best thoughts of us all may be those that we allowed to have us, without an immediate recording. If for no other reason, the writing down of thoughts often helps us to express ourselves in better fashion, and stimulates us to think better ones. Many a writer has discovered himself by writing down his thoughts as they came to him from day to day.

Writing down our thoughts also helps us to think clearly, thus making us better conversationalists. One of the aids of Admiral Peary, in the discovery of the North Pole, was asked what his thoughts were up there. He said: "I thought little. His reply was: "I did not think." Too many fail to allow others to do our thinking for us.

It is well to read the thoughts of others, but well also to stimulate us in our own thinking. We are forever accompanied by our thoughts. We have what thoughts they be good thoughts, and constructive ones. Many hours such as these are only our thoughts as company. Especially at night when we are alone, we should crowd our mind (with thoughts that are inspirational.

One of the thoughts of Marcus Aurelius was not to "imagine things that have not been," but to get into the habit of prizing them so much that without them you would be perturbed."

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

A UNIVERSAL TYRANNY

We often hear the expression "They say." Who are "they"? Usually this expression designates the neighbors or the people who set the styles or the gossip mongers, perhaps just the group indefinitely of public opinion.

Public opinion urges under the threat of a tyranny exercised by the people, designated by the word "they". We are afraid to wear clothes a bit different from others or to entertain in a way that might cause others to smile at us. Many of us are afraid to voice our opinions for fear the people who are supposed to know everything look down on us and consider us naive. The way fashions in clothes can change in a few months indicates the replacing of one set of robes is just a great commercial trick which we allow to have control over us. Many of us have never seem to catch on to the fact that we are being victimized.

"They" constitutes a group of tyrannical persons, thoughts, and customs which tends the whip over us on all occasions and make us take what they have to give and like it. We are victimized by what people go on submitting to what sort of thing they hand out. They get themselves insulted at and injured, but submit. Independence people of in the end.

She stressed parts of the 25th anniversary program.

Mrs. Spafford also dealt with "Dedication" adding that it must be followed by action, prayer and study both of the scripture, and of the missionary affairs of the world. The W.M.S. must dedicate itself to duty and to leadership and plain membership, making a contribution of friendship. She concluded by saying, the church is a world wide agency for the gospel and for Christian fellowship.

BEAUTY

Treatment of oily hair

If you want to listen to some high-pitched, self-pitying lament the girl with oily hair started on her lamentations. She will tell you that, three days after the shampoo, her so-called glorious crown will look as if the cat had licked it—every hair clinging to its neighbor, all of them flat on her scalp. She will affirm that this state of affairs would curdle the sweet disposition of an angel; and, as she is no angel, she gets plenty mad about it.

Hers is a common trouble. There are more oilies than drys, as any hairdresser will tell you. While dry hair may break at the touch of the comb, it lends itself to pleasing arrangements, never looks skimpy. Oily hair, especially when it is fine, silky and not too abundant, seldom takes a strong permanent. Undulations go weak; ringlets at the neckline string out into horrid little fringes.

For such a condition there may be one of two causes or both—a careless shampooing that leaves soap deposits on the shafts, thus adding to the oily appearance, or too much fat in the diet. A certain amount of fat is necessary in the daily in take of groceries—it helps to build energy—but an excess will cause the sebaceous glands to overwork. These glands keep the skin soft and tender, healthy and flexible. An excess of their exudations is no help in the cause of pulchritude.

Cut down on butter, cream, fat meats. Instead of pastries for dessert, have fresh or cooked fruit. This suggestion may not sound interesting, but just the same it makes sense. More and more we are finding out about the effect of diet on appearance.

Experiment with various shampoos. Try out several and watch results. Use a liquid soap, dilute it one-half with hot water. Many of these preparations, while excellent in formula, are thicker than they need to be and are difficult to rinse away. Give a cream shampoo a trial.

You cannot possibly get your hair clean without a final spray. You are dealing with atmospheric dust, grease and skin scales—a combination that is not easily dislodged.

Start your shampoo with a vigorous brushing to remove surface dust. Then use the spray with water as hot as you can comfortably bear. Have a cupful of diluted soap at hand, pour half of it over your head and friction your scalp briskly. The first application may not foam up. Use the spray again; apply more soap. Soon time it should be like beaten egg white. Employ plenty of elbow grease and keep adding hot water. Then the final spraying.

If possible, dry your hair in the sunlight. Don't comb it while it is wet.

about Food . . . What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

Hens have gone just about as far as they can go in Kansas.

Among recent varieties of odd-shaped eggs was that of Mrs. Ray Butler of Randolph, Kansas, who found a pair of Siamese eggs —two normal eggs joined together, each with a perfect yolk. That this sort of thing can be expected in Kansas was demonstrated last Fall by Mrs. Ansel Zillis of Lyons, who found a single egg containing five perfect yolks. The yolks matched the normal size to one as large as a bean. All were edible.

You'll have wonderful normal eggs when you garnish fresh asparagus now arriving in plentiful supplies. Fried eggs or poached eggs with hot asparagus, or cold hard eggs with cold asparagus are all pleasant, filling luncheon dishes.

The cooking time of fresh asparagus varies with the thickness of the stalk. Very thin asparagus can be cooked in 5 to 8 minutes. Very thick stalks may take from 20-30 minutes cooking time.

In cooking fresh asparagus you must handle the stalks gently or the tips will break. You can stand the stalks upright in a double boiler, and steam them, or lay them flat in a large saucepan and simmer them slowly until tender.

The cheese for the sauce in the following recipe is grated Parmesan. You may substitute any grated hard cheese with a snappy flavor.

Fresh Asparagus, Poached Egg, Cheese Sauce, Serves 4.

Order 1 large bunch of asparagus weighing about 2 pounds. Break or cut off the tough ends. Use a vegetable peeler to scrape sides of each stalk to remove scales and stringy outside coating.

Wash asparagus thoroughly but gently. Use a soft vegetable brush if tips are very sandy.

Place asparagus in a saucepan with boiling water to cover. Add 1 teaspoon salt. Simmer until tender when pierced with a fork.

Prepare cheese sauce as follows: Melt 2 tablespoons butter or margarine in a small saucepan. Remove from heat. Add 2 tablespoons flour, mixing well. Gradually add 1 cup hot milk, stirring constantly. Return to a low flame. Simmer 5 minutes stirring frequently. Add 1-4 cup grated Parmesan cheese, 1-4 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Prepare 4 poached eggs. If eggs are not served immediately, they may be kept in warm—not hot—water. They will not turn hard in warm water, kept in a warm place if not placed over a direct flame.

Place asparagus on freshly made toast. Pour cheese sauce over asparagus. Place a poached egg beside each portion of asparagus.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Attention Teen-agers! Here are answers to your problems

Well, teen-agers, here's something that's right up your alley!

In fact, it couldn't be more so.

It's a pamphlet that answers in a very wise and helpful way all those important questions you are always asking yourselves: Should you let a boy kiss you on your first date? What about this business of going steady? Can the girl who refuses to pet be really popular? Is there such a thing as love at first sight? And probably most important of all how do you know if it's really love?

The pamphlet is called "So You Think It's Love?", is written by Ralph G. Eckert of the California Department of Education, and published by Public Affairs Committee, whose headquarters are in New York City.

Let's give a brief look at some of the things the pamphlet says.

About kissing on the first date, for example.

When a girl is thinking about this question, the thing for her to do, says Mr. Eckert, is to decide what she really wants the kiss to mean. Is it to be used as a way of saying thank you for a date, or as an expression of affection? Does she want to do it mainly to see she feels it is expected of her? Or simply for the thrill it gives her?

Now a girl understands that there are all these different kinds of kisses and has decided what kind stands up against her own principles and ideals, there is one more thing for her to consider. That is, as the pamphlet puts it, what's the value of a kiss about in proportion as it is hard to get. If it comes too easy, he thinks just as much of it as he does of anything else he gets cheap. And no wonder.

One of the common pitfalls into which teen-agers are apt to stumble is their reluctance to talk each other is to jump to the conclusion that because a boy or girl attracts them on the first meeting, it means they have "fallen" for him at first sight.

Actually, according to Mr. Eckert, "people do not fall into love, they grow into love. What passes for love at first sight is actually infatuation."

This does not mean that the early attraction or infatuation necessarily is bad. On the contrary, given its chance to grow, it may develop into the real thing.

How are you going to know when it's the real thing? The pamphlet lists three tests by which you can gauge very accurately the state of your feeling toward a person.

The first is the test of time. If the feeling of attraction persists and grows as time goes on, and you feel the same, or even more so, as you come to know the person well over a long period, it can be said to have passed the point of infatuation and become something in which you can reasonably have confidence.

The second test is to be sure there is more to your response than that of mere physical attraction. A good way to make this test is to see how you feel about him or her when you have been separated for weeks or months.

And the third test is the test of companionship. Have you a lot in common? Are your tastes pretty much the same? Are there many sorts of things you have fun doing together? Do you have essentially the same standards and ideals?

There is much more in the pamphlet than there would be space to discuss here. That the most universal teen-age problem of shyness is another important subject that comes up for analysis. The troubles young people who are growing up almost inevitably have because they resent parental prohibitions about certain things are explained too, and the practical value of developing a set of moral standards against which to stack up any problem that baffles you.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

She must apologize for her intolerant remark at dinner party

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Please give me your advice about a most embarrassing situation. Last evening I went to a small dinner party, and I made a remark which showed a stupid intolerance on my part, and which I was sorry for the minute I had said it. There was a terrible silence, and then it was obvious that the hostess was doing her best to cover up my remark. Today I confessed to my mother and father what I had done. They think I should do something, write or telephone, to apologize to my hostesses. I believe it will be best to let the matter blow over, and say nothing. But still I am worried . . . and would like to know what you would advise I do.

Frances M.

Of course you are worried, my dear girl, but please don't be so foolish and so stubborn as not to apologize to your hostesses for a remark. If you are as wise as I hope you will be, you can make this unfortunate happening a constructive turning-point in your life, by doing everything in your power to lift the cloud now in your friend's mind and heart, and by making a firm resolution never again to be so unattractively impulsive and downright rude. Please write your hostess at once . . . perhaps enclosing your note in a box of flowers:

Dear Janet,

I just can't tell you how deeply mortified I feel at what took place at your dinner the other evening . . . and I want to apologize most humbly for my very stupid remark. It's sad, but true . . . I talk too much. I'm so sorry . . . so terribly sorry . . . that I spoke with such thoughtlessness, such intolerance. Can you please, will you please, forgive me?

Because flowers have the lovely grace of always saying the right thing, I am sending these roses to you to tell you how sorry I am that I said the wrong thing. And may I have the comfort of coming to see you soon to try to explain, and to ask again for your forgiveness?

Dearest love to you always.

Frances

Writing "No gift, please" on an invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our son will soon graduate from high school, and we would like to remember some friends in distant cities by sending them invitations to his graduation. But we don't want them to feel any obligation to send a gift. Is it proper to write "No gift, please" on the visiting-card enclosed with the invitation, as I have seen done?

M. S.

There's no rule either for or against writing "No gift, please" on an invitation . . . so one must decide for oneself the advisability. Personally I've never had any enthusiasm for this procedure, for (1) it seems to me some what persuming that anyone will think of sending a gift, and (2) it seems to me that if a friend wishes to have the happiness of sending a gift, he or she should be allowed this happiness. However, if you think it will make you feel freer, more comfortable, to send these gracious invitations to your friends if you assure them that the invitation is just a thoughtful remembering and not in any way a hint-for-a-gift, there is no real reason why you should not follow your own judgment.

Fashion Flashes

FANCY AIRS mark many of the new cottons designed for smart Summer wear. An imported novelty voile, woven with a dot, is used for a pretty shirtwaist model, made with an all-over tucked bodice in a large check design. The upstanding casual collar doubles over onto the short-sleeved bodice that fastens with rhinestone buttons. The skirt flares below a bright silk cummerbund belt that fastens with stiffened-loop bow.

PRETTY FANCIES are in demand when choosing evening accessories. Black satin makes a bag of circular hat-box shape, with zipped top and bottom. The top unzips to disclose a powder box, and the bottom discloses a satin-lined carry-all.

RETURNING to the fashion fold is the plaid taffeta, in new and improved designs. One such watch, with ring shank and band of 14 karat gold, has the tiny watch face protected by a raised dome of very delicate gold filigree done in spiderweb design.

HAVE YOU NOTED the popularity of the tricolor scheme for smart suit or daytime hats? Navy blue straw in a linen weave is used for a pointed profile hat, the white off-the-face-brim flanked by soaring wings of navy and white. Fine, sheer red veiling completes the three-color motif.

NO WONDER navy blue is so popular! It teams so beautifully with so many colors to make a colorful costume, one that is so well adapted to busy outdoor wear. Yellow, pink, bright red, light blue, lime, cherry red, and blonde tones from bamboo to light maple, all go well with navy. The blond tones are especially liked for matching bags and shoes.

COLORFUL COTTONS, made up into charming peasant blouses and full, flaring skirts, are popular with the square-dance crowd. Huge green leaves with embroidered veins are appliqued along the bottom of a white cotton skirt and a scoop-neck, sleeveless blouse.

But, how many of best three-year-old horses in country will take the chal- in this $100,000 classic is as rtain as the weather these dreary days in Derbytown. sence of at least 13 horses are certain they'll send their and joy out to tackle the 1¼ mile race.

ck George slapped a two- fly defeat on the even-money rile, Middleground, and there- ded to the confusion on what is rounding into one of the tough- est derbies to figure since the first got in 1875.

C. T. Chenery's Hill Prince, Tom Gray's Oil Capitol, William Geary's Your Host, the King ranch pair of Middlegrove and Miss the Mark, Clifford Moore's Hawley, Hal Price Headley's Lot O White, C. V. Whitney's Mr. Trouble, Black Gold George, the Brookmeade stable entry of Sunglow and Greek Ship, Abercrombie and Smith's Stranded, and Walter T. Fugate's Hallieboy.

Ben Jones, the Calumet Farm trainer who has saddled five derby winners — more than any other man — put the status of Theory up to the weatherman.

Theory, son of the 1944 derby winner Pensive, wound up a poor sixth in the 11-horse derby trail field Tuesday. He didn't like the muddy going.

Other possible starters are Willorene farm's Trumpet King, 10th in the trial; W. M. Feavey's Wisconsin Boy, and Dooly, another C. V. Whitney colt.

Your Host still rules the favorite, but he might not be it it comes up mud Saturday. Goetz's colt never has raced in the mud.

In the trial Tuesday Black George, three-year-old son of Reaping Award, got out in front and stayed there to finish in 1:40 flat.

Railway to Tap Fertile Tracts in Mid-Africa

Capetown — (CP) — One of the great African transport projects that will be laid before the coming conference of central and southern African countries will be a railway line linking Northern Rhodesia with the East African territories.

W. Marshall Clark, secretary for the interim transport organization for central and southern Africa, says the line will open large fertile tracts of Africa that have remained unfarmed and untapped because of their remoteness. The line will also have obvious strategic importance in time of war.

Mr. Clark, until recently general manager of the South African Railways, has already attended a preliminary conference at Lisbon which drew up a general agenda for the main conference to be held in South Africa in October.

Asked if any new pan-African transport project is likely to be discussed at the coming conference, he said "nothing much has been said yet about the plan, which the British colonial office is directing, to link the railway system of Northern Rhodesia with those of East Africa.

"At present, the most northerly point of the Northern Rhodesian Railways is Sakania. From there the line goes northwest through the Belgian Congo to the terminus at Port Francqui.

"But the new line, which is already being surveyed, would, I should imagine, branch off at Broken Hill and run northeast through Kasama and from there to the Mbeya plateau, which lies at the top of the great range of mountains between the northern end of Lake Nyasa and the southern end of Lake Tanganyika.

"The plateau lies 8,000 feet above sea level. Crossing with a railway line would be a difficult engineering task, though by no means an impossible one.

"From Mbeya the line would follow the course of the great Rhuha River until it crossed the railway line from Dar-es-Salaam. Then it would continue north via Arusha to the Kilimanjaro area and Nairobi."

Mr. Clark said that through this ambitious link-up, the peanut areas and Mikindani would be joined by land with territores to the north and south. It might even be payable to use the line to send coal to Kenya and Tanganyika from Southern Rhodesia.

"The country through which the line would pass is wild and undeveloped," he said. "But I am told that it is fertile, and many parts of it—especially the Mbeya plateau and the Ruaha valley—are said to be highly suitable for big agricultural settlements."

"Certainly, anyone who has flown to Cairo from the Union will have reflected how prosperous these vast uninhabited tracts of Africa might be if they were opened by roads and railways."

The October conference would not only concern itself with railways, Mr. Clark said, but would try to co-ordinate all forms of transport in Southern and Central Africa, except airways.

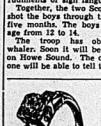
Deaf Sea Scouts Have Own Troop

Vancouver — (CP) — Ten Sea Scouts here will never hear the sound of the ocean.

The deaf boys, pupils of the provincial deaf and blind school here, have become the 85th Vancouver Sea Scout Troop. It is the only troop or its kind in Canada.

Charles Dakin, a teacher at the deaf and blind school — he is deaf himself — took volunteer training and at the same time taught another Scoutmaster the rudiments of sign language.

Together, the two Scoutmasters shot the boys through training in five months. The boys range in age from 12 to 14.



The troop has obtained a whaler. Soon it will be launched on Howe Sound. The only way one will be able to tell them from other Sea Scouts will be that no shout of "stroke" from the coxswain will keep oars in motion. It will be a hand signal.

Trailer Campers Make No Move To Vacate Site

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) — Seventeen families in the Ryding Avenue trailer camp today showed no signs of obeying a city order to vacate the west-end camp site they have occupied since 1947.

The 50 men, women and children were reported preparing a deputation to ask the city for permission to remain on the land indefinitely.

But the city, which Monday cut off electricity, toilet and water facilities at the camp, stood pat on the order it issued after a Ratepayers' Association in the area protested against the camp's existence.

"We regard the trailer dwellers as trespassers," said Property Commissioner G. D. Bland. "They have got to move and that's all there is to it."

After a chilly night of trying to light and heat their trailers with candles, lamps and small oil stoves, the group today expressed new concern, particularly for the children.

DRIVER KILLED AS CARS' BUMPERS INTERLOCK

Detroit, May 3 (CP) — Albert Foster 66 died in hospital Monday night as a result of what police said was a game of automobile tag on an express highway near Detroit.

Anthony Coccia, 20, driver of a car which locked bumpers with Foster's car, told police the fatal accident occurred after Foster's car passed him and he in turn passed Foster.

Coccia said that Foster was trying to regain the lead when the two cars locked bumpers. Both cars skidded 200 feet and Foster's car overturned.

Sees Home Burn, Firemen Could Not Go Outside Town

Huntsville, May 3 (CP) — A provincial policeman watched his home burn to the ground near here Monday night after his wife was told by Huntsville firemen they could not operate outside the town.

Constable Joseph Jones, 36, was on duty when a stove explosion started the fire. His wife Elizabeth and two small children fled in their night attire.

Several hundred people who came from Huntsville in cars were unable to help because the pump was too close to the blazing building. A sister-in-law, Joy Gillies, who was also in the frame bungalow, said she ran nearly a mile to telephone for help but none came.

Nearly everything but a bundle of winter clothing was burned. The family is staying with friends.

Huntsville is 115 miles north of Toronto. The Jones house is in suburban Chaffey township.

Huntsville is the only town of Huntsville said the town fire-fighting equipment is shipped to Aberta from the Dominion Experimental station at Morden, Man. for use by farmers to build up their wind breaks and shelter

Seize, Cart Away Load of Alleged Betting Papers

New York, May 3 (AP) —District Attorney Frank Hogan swooped down on the swank Park Avenue office of a million-dollar gambler Frank Erickson Tuesday and carted away a truckload of alleged betting papers.

The raid was the direct result of Erickson's admission before a United States Senate Committee Friday that he runs a law-breaking $15,500,000-a-year country-wide bookie business in New York.

No arrests were made.

The investigators plan to go through the alleged betting papers with a fine-tooth comb to see if they can find grounds for prosecution.

Erickson told the Senators he pays his brother $20,000 a year "to take his money to the bank."

On the Senate committee stand, Erickson said that in 30 years of making book in New York he had been arrested only three or four times and convicted only once—for loitering.

The committee has been studying a bill that would outlaw interstate transmission of certain gambling information in an effort to break gambling syndicates and cut down betting on sports events.

Erickson told the committee his "handle" was from $20,000 to $40,000 a day, but it sometimes slumped to 10,000.

Erickson said he takes not only local bets, but serves as a national "bookies' bookie" by accepting other gamblers' "lay-off" bets by long-distance telephone.

A lay-off bet is the gambler's equivalent of the insurance broker's insurance and the grain speculator's "hedging." It protects him from having too much of his own money pledged to any one wager.

Erickson said his net multi-million dollar business has been about $100,000 a year for the last two years, and has at times been larger.

Farmer Made Movie As He Worked Land

High Wycombe, Buckinghamshire, England — (CP) —Robert Mead, 27-year-old tractor driver made a movie while he worked. It records the personal impressions of a farm worker during the four seasons on the land.

"A Straw in the Wind" runs 10 minutes, has no music, no sound track, no written commentary. It cost £6 ($15.50) to make. Mead missed the humble London premiere at Bloomsbury Y.W.C.A. where admission cost sixpence (73-4 cents).

"I just took my camera with me into the fields and waited for the soil to act its part," Mead explained. "But you can't direct it like a film star. The land does the job in its own time.

"My favorite shots were of the plow. There is nothing more thrilling than seeing the gleaming plowshares cutting and turning the soil, helping nature to feed its people.

"To film the plow in action I set the front wheels of the tractor in the furrows, started the engine, then while the tractor moved along I jumped off and walked beside it."

Robert who is unmarried and lives with his parents, added: "All my spare money goes on film. And that doesn't leave much to spare from £4 6s. ($13.33) a week. But I wouldn't change my job for twice the wages I'm getting.

WISCONSIN TOWN HAS OWN MAY DAY

A demonstration in Mosinee, Wisc., was staged on May Day by Wisconsin American Legion to give the town a taste of what it is like to live under a dictatorship, "Communists" took over the town completely. Here, Mosinee citizens arrest the Rev. Lyle J. Koening, pastor of the Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church and march him off to "camp" after the "reds" seized control of Mosinee. This raiding party is led by Benjamin Gitlow, right, one of the raiding "commissars." — Central Press Canadian.

BROAD ARROWS IN STYLE

Auckland, N.Z. — (CP) —Jail uniforms are in fashion in the Solomon Islands. Lloncloths, marked with broad arrows, were recently issued and caught on immediately. Smuggled from the prisons, the "uniforms" are being sold at rising prices—and to the best people, they say.

Canadians Spend 30 Times As Much for Liquor, Tobacco As They Donate for Charity

TO WED PRINCESS

An ardent collector of American jazz records, Ralh Ghali, 31, and his bride-to-be, Princess Fathia of Egypt, have obtained their marriage license in San Francisco. Ghali is political adviser to Egypt's Dowager Queen Nazli, his fiance's mother. Central Press Canadian.

Toronto, May 2. (CP)—Canadians annually spend 30 times more money on liquor and cigarettes than they donate to charity, Dr. W. H. Stuart Stanbury, National Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, said today.

In an address prepared for opening sessions of the four-day annual meeting of the Red Cross Central Council, Dr. Stanbury said that in the year ended June 30, 1949, Canadians spent $230,000,000 on liquor and about $300,000,000 on tobacco. Contributions to Health and Welfare charities then were $35,000,000. During the calendar year of 1949 Canadian Red Cross income slightly exceeded $5,600,000.

These figures indicate the Red Cross "has not begun to tap all the subscribing resources of the country," he said. They represent a challenge to the thousands of volunteer workers "who sustain the organization."

He told the 100 delegates from the 10 Provincial Red Cross organizations that "today is the time for extending the faith which the Red Cross incarnates and has kept it great. It must progress, or wither."

The Council received a report Monday night on a 2-1-2 year experiment in Toronto which said that children receiving scientifically-prepared meals at school showed marked physical improvement over a similar number of children who ate lunches at home.

600 Children Studied

A study of 600 children, selected from 1,000 pupils of three schools in Toronto's Moss Park area, were studied in the new Red Cross Hospital for Sick Children, board of education and other personnel cooperated. The Red Cross national organization provided $125,000 for the survey.

Author of the report, Dr. E. Charlotte Whitton, woman nutritionist, said the children eating school meals showed improvement in growth, physical fitness, rate of tooth decay and absenteeism.

But the report added: "for the families living under similar conditions, the provision of a free noon meal at the school alone would definitely not be justified. This is of interest to everyone when juxtaposed with the high standard of living of the families was lowered, beneficial effect of an excellent school meal would no doubt be very great."

Four-Fold Increase

In another report Harold M. Leather, national chairman of the blood donor committee, reported a four-fold increase in the free blood transfusion service since it started in 1947. More than 120,000 Canadians received free Red Cross blood and plasma from the centres now operated in all provinces except Newfoundland and Saskatchewan.

L. A. Winter, honorary treasurer, reported 1949 income was $5,626,514 and expenditures $5,661,581. The blood transfusion service cost $1,602,221; nursing veterans' services spent $460,128 and nursing stations and clinics $1,348,902. From a special request fund, more than $500,000 was expended on British Columbia Flood Aid, another $132,000 on crippled children's work, and more than $460,000 on international relief.

Canada's Liquor Exports Total $41,000,000 in '49

Ottawa, May 2. —Canada does a $40 million dollar business with nearly 100 countries in the export of various classes of liquors, which are for export purposes classed as agricultural products, according to the latest government report on exports.

Canada's export business in this class of agricultural products in 1949 was fully as large in value as its exports of bacon, hams and cheese, larger than its export of dressed beef, and almost ten per cent, of its exports of wheat.

Federal government's report of exports for 1949 show that Canada's old ale, beer and porter to 20 countries, gin to 72 countries, whiskey to 96 countries, potable spirits to 33 countries, and wines to seven countries, and also had an export value to $6,500,000 in malt.

Rock-Happy Child Upsets Families, Brings Court Case

Birmingham, England, May 3— (Reuters)—The mother of three-year-old Terry Neale of Birmingham could not afford to buy him a rocking horse so Terry climbed every day into his father's armchair and rocked that instead.

Thursday, neighbor, until William Bullock next door had to give up his all-night job and take one with less pay because he could not sleep during the day. Mrs. Bullock then became ill and had to see a specialist. And the two families appealed to the court to do their housework.

So every time the thump-thump started, Mrs. Bullock would reach for a book marked "Record of Bumping Noises." The book was produced in a Birmingham court Tuesday. The judge awarded £5 ($15.50) damages against Mrs. Neale and instructed her to stop Terry's rocking.

Mrs. Neale says she has no idea how she's going to deal with her rock-happy son.

Foster Hewitt Will Operate His Own Station

Toronto, May 3 (CP)— Foster Hewitt, Canada's best-known hockey announcer, plans to build his own 250-watt radio station in Toronto, he said Tuesday. But he will continue the Saturday-night broadcasts which have made his voice probably Canada's most listened-to.

His application will be considered by the CBC board of governors at Ottawa May 22 and 23.

Mr. Hewitt, 46, is one of the originals in Canadian radio. He started with the first commercial radio station, CFCA, opened in 1927. He said his proposed new station would emphasize community service and activities. The station's low power would restrict its coverage to the city and suburbs.

He emphasized it would not interfere with his Saturday-night coast-to-coast hockey programs. He started these in 1931 and has never missed a broadcast since.

Mr. Hewitt said he will be sole owner of the station. His son, Bill, 21, now at CKBB, Barrie, will assist him.

STUDENT PILOT KILLED WHILE BUZZING CALGARY

After buzzing the city of Calgary for 40 minutes in a light plane, Jack Harper, 22-year-old advertising and sales employee, crashed into the home of Marshall McDougall. He had struck a telephone pole and sheared off another before he crashed into the bungalow and was killed. Police state Harper, who was a student pilot, had been on a drinking party before he took the plane up and buzzed the city hall, police station, hotel and post-office. Squad cars were waiting at the airport for Harper to land plane. — Central Press Canadian.

'No Justification' In Remark Canada Is Dissatisfied

Ottawa, May 3—(CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent told the Commons Tuesday he knew of "no justification" for any statement by anyone that Canada is "dissatisfied" with her position in the Commonwealth.

He was commenting on press reports, eg. a speech in which Prime Minister Malan of South Africa was quoted as making that statement about Canada. The report was called to the attention of the House by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader who asked him to "remove uncertainty."

Mr. St. Laurent said the same places referred to comments by Mr. Malan on dissatisfaction with the King's title.

This must be based on a resolution considered in the Commons two years or so ago when it was pointed out that the title was no longer "in strict accord" with the constitutional facts of the Commonwealth.

The dissatisfaction had been manifested but it had been stated that it no longer corresponded with the present situation. It included Ireland which no longer was a member. It had also been said it probably was not proper to have to lump together the various members countries outside British merely as the "dominions beyond the seas."

He knew of nothing else to justify Mr. Malan's statement.

Bakery Shop Owner Knocked Out of Bed by Blast

Toronto, May 3 — (CP) — A gas explosion in an East Toronto bakery today sent Archie McCuigan, 40, to hospital with burns, knocked the owner of the shop out of her bed on the second floor, and swept the front door into the middle of the street.

Mrs. Margaret MacDonald, the owner, said the blast broke all the windows in the front of the store.

A fire inspector said "usually there are a number of persons waiting for street cars at the stop outside the bakery. If there had been anyone there this morning they would have been killed for the window broke into a million pieces."

Cause of the explosion was not determined. It happened just as McCuigan opened the oven door to inspect baking bread.

British Feeling Is Hardening Against Redism

Hong Kong, May 3 (AP)—British feeling in this Crown colony is hardening against the communists.

The tide of opinion has turned from three months ago, when British offered to recognize the Chinese Communist people's republic at Peiping. At that time petitions in Hong Kong hailed the move as practical politics.

Today the colony is openly questioning the wisdom of London's decision.

Britons here resent it because their representative in Peiping has been snubbed and, from their point of view, insulted by the Chinese Communists.

More Caustic

Hon Kong's British press, which usually reflects the feelings of trade quarters, is steadily becoming more caustic about relations with Peiping.

The telegraph broke the ice several weeks ago. It said unless the Chinese Reds made an "immediate and genuine" change of policy British business men about begin a "wholesale liquidation" of their interests in China.

A change of feeling also has been noted among the Chinese colony in Hong Kong. A colonial officer was commenting on how Britain broke a communist-inspired strike of Chinese street railway workers last January.

"A year ago," he observed, "the Chinese here were all for the communists, now they're against them. Why? Because from here you can see communism working. The border's open and Canton's less than a day away.

"They know what's happening in Canton and they don't want any."

Doctor Involuntary Owner of Goat Herd

Hamilton, May 3 — (CP) — Dr. Allan Vincent doubles as a goat breeder today because he gave his sick children goat's milk four years ago. He started the goat business shortly after his two children contracted infantile eczema. They were given goat's milk and have been wheatthy ever since, he says. He now has one of the biggest herds inthe country.

Treatment Keeps Sex Offenders' Minds Occupied

Detroit, May 3 — (AP)—The first official answer whether doctors can curb sex crimes better than prisons was given to the American Psychiatric Association today.

The answer comes from Washington, D. C., where a new law is sending sex offenders to a mental hospital to remain until the superintendent says they are safe to release. This experiment holds that sex offenders are sick persons rather than criminals.

The Washington report indicates that the chances are fairly good, but that cures probably will be slow and expensive. The American Psychiatric Association is interested because similar experiments recently have been injected into law in Canada, New York and California.

The District of Columbia legislation says the persons to be confined are "not insane." They are men whose repeated sex misconduct convinces a judge they are likely to repeat. Rapists are not included. The hospital has 24 of these men. None has been released although some have been there for more than a year. Twenty-five per cent are the proved.

The first important medical finding is that the 24 suffer from five different kinds 'of mental troubles, all ordinary.

The five are mental troubles due to diseases, defective minds, compulsive neurosis feelings there is something you just have to do no matter what the cost, and split personalities and hysteria.

The principal treatments are to keep these men fully occupied each day. They work in shops, in art, drama, athletic games, riflery, basketball, playing in a band, seeing movies and television.

Labor Will Hold "House Party" To Decide Course

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 3 — (CP)—Labor holds a weekend "House party" this month to decide its course at the next general election.

In pastoral surroundings at Dorking, Surrey, remote from the nightmare sound of parliamentary division bells, party leaders assemble May 26-28 for their first major policy meeting in more than a year.

It is probably true to say that the conference's main problem will be to determine whether the next election will be fought on the basis of more socialism, or less socialism. Nobody knows when the vote will be, but the consensus currently favors November.

The last labor policy gathering was held early in 1949 at Shanklin, Isle of Wight. This was the assembly which produced the program for last February's election. It included proposals, now in abeyance, for nationalizing iron and steel industries including insurance.

This caused bruised feelings in Britain's big co-operative movement, which traditionally supports labor and has its own big insurance business. Labor leaders tactfully dropped the lapse, and backtracked a little.

Taking No Chances

This time the national executive is taking no chances. The working conference has been broadened to include co-ops and trade unionists, who contribute the bulk of the party's financial support.

Few concessions to labor's left wing are likely to emerge. The party's minute majority in parliament, plus union preference for practical rather than ideological policies, may swing opinion to the right.

For such a policy, Herbert Morrison, deputy prime minister, seems sure to be a leading spokesman. So, what he has in mind emerged in a speech last week when he said that nationalization is not the only way of socializing industries.

Among the others was the method used in agriculture where "we find the government and producers getting into a new type of partnership - - - That as far as I know, hasn't yet got a name."

Anti-Communist Bill

Capetown, South Africa, May 3 (Reuter — Measures to intensify communism, Charles Swart, Union Minister of Justice gave notice in Parliament today that he would ask leave Friday to introduce a government anti-communist bill.

He said the bill would prohibit "certain activities" detrimental to interests of the union and would make provision for declaring organizations promoting such activities to be unlawful. It would also ban certain periodicals or publications.

Red River Flood at Two Major Points Shows Sign of Waning; Flood Peak Nearly Reached

Winnipeg, May 3 — (CP) — Army and civilian personnel today tackled the bloated Red River with the knowledge that the end of its three-week rise was in sight.

At two major points along its northward course through southern Manitoba towards Winnipeg the flood had begun to wane. At Morris, almost-submerged centre 41 miles south of here, it had apparently reached full peak.

But at Winnipeg, about the end of its course of destruction, there was more to come.

Emerson, international border town, 80 miles south, reported a slight but steady drop after more than a week of constant and frightening rises.

At Letellier, nine miles north, the water was at a standstill and was expected to drop by tonight.

The reading at Grand Forks, N D., yesterday was 15.9 feet — down nearly nine from the flood crest of 24 feet reached last week.

Business Section Deserted

Elsewhere in the big business section deserted and most of its 1,100 residents gone, fought to keep the rising tide out of the new hospital. Thirty Canadian army men from Winnipeg and a number of almost-exhaused volunteers kept building the sandbag makeshift wall around the building.

Water Tuesday night was five feet deep on one side and 30-odd inches on the other.

Railway crews fought to keep lines open through southern Manitoba. The Canadian National Railways Tuesday night cancelled two trains running between here and Minneapolis, Minn.

Lines Still Intact

They said lines were intact. The main danger was "an 11-mile stretch immediately south of Morris. Crews sought to buttress banks where water lapped inches from the tracks.

In Winnipeg, the river rose to 24 feet—three-quarters of a foot above the level reached in the disastrous 1948 flood.

Round-the-clock workers piled thousands of sandbags on already-augmented dikes in several Winnipeg suburbs. At one point — the foot of Lombard Street — it Crossed C.N.R. tracks to come within a block of the Winnipeg grain exchange.

The Y.M.C.A. Canoe Club's new building in Norwood district was ripped from its concrete foundation and smashed against the Norwood bridge.

In St. Pierre, 30 miles southeast flood waters receded another foot but much of the village was still under water.

At Ste. Elizabeth, seven miles east of Morris the red was 15 miles wide. Almost seven miles from the town normally, it had crept within three.

Brush Wolves Roam Gatineau Park Area

Ottawa —(CP)— Brush wolves —packs of grey killers — have been menacing sheep herds on both sides of the Ottawa River and are moving in on Gatineau Park deer herds.

The brush wolves, small vicious animals, possibly the result of cross-breeding with dogs, have taken over the territory once roamed by the great timber wolves of Eastern Ontario.

The killers, comparative newcomers to the Ottawa area, are described as being more numerous than at any other time since the first pack arrived from Manitoba some five years ago.

A number of the wolves have been reported in neighboring Carleton Place and Richmond areas, moving with fearless contempt among the residents.

E. S. Richards, Gatineau Park superintendent, says the wolves this spring had been sighted repeatedly on the park's deer trails.

One of the marauders, shot by Howard Fisher of nearby Richmond, weighed roughly 75 pounds. Heavy timber wolves, still found in the upper reaches of the Gatineau and Ottawa River tip the scales at 150 pounds.

Brush wolves are described as a greater threat than timber wolves to deer and sheep herds. A timber wolf takes to the hunting trail only when winter hunger sharpens his killing instinct, but the brush wolves will kill for the fun of the chase.

Park rangers said the wolves had a hungry winter. Snow was light and hard-packed, making it possible for the deer to make a fast getaway from the wolves' attacks.

But now, when the deer herds are slowed down by fawns, the wolves would exact greater toll.

FINED SECRET BACKYARD GOLD MINE

Things are humming in the town of Wedderburn, Australia, about 150 miles from Melbourne, since Burt Smith uncovered a gold mine in the brickyard of Mr. Dave Butterick, a retired farmer. But Butterick and his three sons-in-law guarded their secret well. For the past 18 months unknown to anyone but the family, about 10,000 pounds, approximately $28,000, has been taken from the mine. Smith uncovered the secret when he pulled a golden nugget from a hole just outside the Butterick property. Photo shows the two sons-in-law working the mine as the women folk bring cups of tea to the men. The Buttericks bought the property about three years ago from a local bank. — Central Press Canadian.

Mr. MacInnis said that so long as there was wealth and poverty and luxury and squalor side by side, without efforts to create equality, "then we will be fighting communism." Those who believed in democracy should be as active in support of it as the communists were in support of their creed.

Ankle Fractured When Car Hit By Light Truck

Picton — A car in which Mr. and Mrs. Merton Bentley were riding was completely demolished when struck by a light truck driven by Helm Gassira of Wallington, Mrs. Bentley suffered a cracked ankle and severe cuts on the legs. The others were shaken up.

The Bentley car was crossing highway 14 just west of Picton Monday night when the Gassira truck, travelling west, struck the rear fender. The car was completely swung around and overturned, and was a complete wreck. Mrs. Bentley, who was pinned in the wreckage was released by Ted Rutter and Mrs. Robert Thompson, first on the scene. Mr. Bentley was thrown clear. Mrs. Bentley was treated at Prince Edward County hospital here and then removed to her home, route one Picton. P.P. Constable H. Caldwell investigated. Gassira Fry Disinfected Whitefish should be more plentiful in Lake Ontario and the Bay of Quinte before long. Some 39 million fry have just been released in waters about Prince Edward County The fry were raised at the Ontario provincial hatchery just east of Picton on highway 41.

More than 50 million pickerel eggs are now being hatched, the fry to be distributed later.

Divers Battle Time and Tide In Tobermory Bay

Tobermory, Argyll, Scotland, May 3 (Reuters) —Royal Navy divers are fighting against time and tide to give the world some final clue whether they have found the fabulously rich Spanish galleon Florencia, said to be buried deep in the sands of Tobermory Bay.

After more than six weeks of operations, the world's richest treasure hunt appears near its climax as the divers defy blustery weather and tearing currents to complete their identification of a wooden hulk first located a month ago.

Squally weather has interrupted the work several times in the last two weeks, but with the aid of giant compressor pumps and powerful air jets probing the bed of silt 60 feet below water, expedition leaders believe their dream may come true any day now.

The man with the brightest hopes is the Duke of Argyll, the four-old Scottish peer, whose family long owned salvage rights in Tobermory Bay. He hopes to recover more than £30,000,000 ($93,000,000) worth of gold plate, precious jewels and pieces of eight believed lost with the ship 350 years ago.

Won't Abandon Task

"Frogmen" fitted with rubber fins and divers under the command of Lt. Cmdr. Reay Parkinson do not want to abandon their task until they have given the Duke sure evidence that his treasure hunt will pay handsome dividends.

"We will go on until we have positively identified the old ship" one member of the expedition said.

Like blind men trying to 'feel' the outline of a face, the navy men go down each day to trace sections of the ships lines

URGES STATEHOOD FOR HAWAII

Oscar Chapman, U.S. secretary of the interior, right, is shown as he urged statehood for Hawaii, and attacked as "nonsense" arguments that the territory should be barred from the union because it is a hotbed of communism. The cabinet member, shown with Gov. Ingram M. Stainback of Hawaii, testified on Monday before the Senate Interior Committee which is considering a bill, passed by the House, to grant statehood to Hawaii. Encircling Chapman's microphone is a Hawaiian "aloha" lei. — Central Press Canadian.

Inland skeptics, who say they have seen more money poured into the harbor than will ever come out of it, were silenced momentarily when one of the salvage team surfaced recently with a stone cannon ball of the type used by gunners of the Spanish Armada.

The Florencia is said to have taken refuge in Tobermory Bay after the Spanish Armada's defeat and to have been sunk in the bay after her Spanish crew quarrelled with a local Scottish chieftain.

TUNNEL UNCOVERED

Fort Erie, May 3 — (CP) — A tunnel used 50 years ago by the old Southern Ontario Railway has been uncovered in excavations for the new Ridgeway water system. The railway carried passengers from Ridgeway to Crystal Beach — two miles — for five cents.

Living Costs At Highest Peak In History

Ottawa, May 3 — With living costs now at their highest peak in history, the question is where do we go from here?

Canadians will know the answer tomorrow when the latest report of the cost-of-living index is issued by the bureau of statistics.

Bureau officials now are busy putting the last-minute touches to the March report The index climbed 2.1 points in February to 203.7.

Which way it will turn is unknown. One thing is clear—there won't be a recurrence of the big jump in the rents sub-group. Since rents are surveyed quarterly the next change won't show for another three months.

Rents jumped 7.7-points in February to bring that sub-index to a high of 132.7.

An increase of 2.7 points was made in the food index, which went from 201.3 to 204.0—5.2 points below the high of 209.2 recorded last July.

Food is considered by the bureau to be the most important family budget item and carries the most weight in the cost-of-living index.

With meat prices on the rise and other food prices hovering at high levels, there was little to indicate any great come-down in the food sub-index.

One place where officials believe some saving may be indicated is among the other factors that go into the compilation of the index. These carry lesser weights and include clothing, fuel, homefurnishings and a miscellaneous group that covers hospital and medical care and transportation costs.

Clothing prices appear to be inching downward. In January the sub-index touched 183.0 and slipped to 181.4 in February.

However, fuel and lighting have become more expensive. The index in February touched a top of 136.3.

SUGGESTS NEW TAX

Toronto, May 3 (CP) — Alderman Harold Fishleigh in city council Monday suggested a three per cent "earned income tax" on non-residents of Toronto who make their living inside the city. There was no discussion by council of the proposal, which Fishleigh estimated would net the city nearly $7,500,000 annually. The proposal will be considered at the Board of Control's meeting tomorrow.

CLASHES MARK BERLIN MAY DAY

Demonstrators of West Berlin are shown as they attacked police of East (Soviet) Berlin May 1 in one of a number of clashes that marked communist and anti-communist May Day demonstrations in the German capital. This particular brush took place in the Potsdamerplatz, nerve centre of the city, British troops in armored cars, directed by a U.S. air force helicopter, broke up the crowd. It was estimated that a million Berliners, half communist and half anti-communist, took part in the demonstrations. — Central Press Canadian.

THE GIANT-KILLER AGAIN!

Dynamite Ray Villmer, the mighty atom of the wrestling ring will again essay the role of giant-killer in Memorial Arena come Friday night, he takes on that high-falutin', toothy, sheathing-iron-grip-of-gun from Arizona, that king of the longhorns, Wild Bill Longson.

Villmer, the Lilliputian of the face-twisting fraternity, squirmed, wriggled and finally heaved his way into the hearts of the faithful here last Friday when he took on 320 pounds of Ozarkian dynamite in the person of long - haired teering Hi Lee. The pygmian grappler mouthed his slingshot bag of tricks and before the towering goliath could untangle his proboscis from its screen of Tennessean hair, he was hoisted aloft, whirled about like a windmill and hurled to the mat, an inert hunk of mastodonic man.

But the diminutive Villmer will have something different to cope with on Friday. Will William, whose steaming tresses once held the mythical bauble of the world's heavyweight wrestling title, well, one of them anyway, is a grimacing Garganian who not only knows all of the tricks but wrote some new ones in the book. His shadowed Lee Thee, after losing his title to the St. Louis flash, so long that Lou thought he was living in a land of perpetual sunshine, Wild Willie is long, lithe and lissome with little of the cumbersome about him as M'lles Villmer, he of the stout heart and wiry chassis will have his work cut out to distinguish his second giant in a row.

And look who's here in the semi-final. None other than our old friend Earl "Moose" McCready. The "Moose" is making his first Belleville appearance since his second successful defence of Canada and New Zealand on the dock he will be given a rousing reception by his many friends here.

And in the opposite "cawnah" will be another ruff tuffy in Strangler Bob Wagner, also well known here. This bout should be a thriller-diller for it's the first time the pair has met in some time. And in the opener will be that masterful of the massive picture wrestlers, Wee Willie Davis (Remember the big plug-ugly who loosed the Christians to the lions in "Samson and Delilah"?) Wee Willie will battle the promising Bobbie Nelson. And in case you are interested in what Wee Willie can do on the screen, he is appearing in a wrestling picture at the Capitol Theatre Friday and Saturday. It is hoped that Willie will make a personal appearance at the Capitol before or after his engagement in the flicks.

GOOD OLD SALLY ANN

Once upon a time, the Bible tells us, there was a man sorely-stricken. He fell by the wayside unable to continue his journey. Sick near to death, he lay there while wayfarers passed him by. Then along came One of gentle mien, He of the soft voice, and healing hands. Gently He administered to the wounds of the stricken one. He helped him on his way. He was the Good Samaritan.

The spirit of the Good Samaritan lives today in a sore and needy world. It is exemplified daily in the activities of the Salvation Army. Their's are the sympathetic hands that have helped many a stricken wayfarer to health and hope. Their's the gentle men, the humble spirit, asking nothing, giving all.

This week, now, the Salvation Army is campaigning for much-needed funds. It requires $7,500 to carry on its work among the poor, the hopeless, the weary and the unfortunate. The work of the Army is well-known to all classes of people. It carries the torch of hope to light the way to those cast into the gloom of trouble and misfortune. It succors the needy. It helps those who have fallen by the wayside to brighter and better things. Its friendly smile and helping hands are denied none. Only once a year it appeals for funds to those of us who are more fortunate than many.

We cannot afford to let the "Salty Ann" down. In peace and war, the "Army" has stood by ready to serve. And it is serving unheralded and unsung day after day. Much of its good work will never be known, except by those who have benefitted.

So when the Army canvasser calls on you this week, remember. Remember the Good Samaritan. For He is represented in these uniformed or civilian-clad people who will humbly present themselves at your door. Greet him or her with a smile—and a donation. No matter how large or small, it will be gratefully accepted.

And remember this, too. You are not throwing your money away. Indirectly you are assisting some unfortunate person to a better way of living. Above all you are helping a grand organization to carry on its work for people of all creeds, colors and classes. You are helping Him who once stopped by the wayside to help one who could not help himself.

HE WAS!

Benny Oosterbaan, head football coach at Michigan, recalls the time he was scouting a game between the Wildcats and Gophers at Evanston, while cutting his coaching teeth as Harry Kipke's assistant.

"I was charting this game," recalled Oosterbaan, "when I realized there had been 35 fumbles. Each side was committing 'em but the 'Wildcats were especially poor-handed that day.

"Then Dick Hanley, coach of Northwestern at that time, started warming up a backfield substitute. This youngster pranced along the sidelines several times, then was tossed a ball. He shifted the ball from hand to hand, then fumbled it and, in reaching down, kicked the oval.

"At this time a boisterous fan yelled: 'Send him in Hanley! He's ready-'"

Second Meeting Will Provide Better Hockey

Calgary, May 3 (CP)— The first-game sparring will be missing tonight when Toronto Marlboros and Calgary Stampeders meet in the second tilt of the best-of-seven Dominion Cup final.

Both President Harold Ballard of Marlies and Stamps Coach Byron (Butch) McDonald said they expected the second meeting of the Eastern and Western senior champions would provide a faster brand of hockey than in the first game.

"Russ Dericell should regain his form and that will make a big difference," said McDonald. Goalie Russ Dertell was a model of controlled efficiency throughout Calgary's 50-game regular season. He broke the Western Canada League's record for shutouts and had the fewest goals scored against him.

In the first game Monday night which Toronto won 6-5 when Scotty Mair batted in a rebound with only 14 seconds remaining Dertell seemed jittery. He made 36 saves to 21 for the Dukes' goalie, Pat Boehmer, put the 29-year-old former Saskatoon junior bobbled two softies and was letting rebounds get away from him.

Boehmer was also off and the defence on both squads were not at their best, Ray Ballard and McDonald.

Ballard will be handling the Marlies for the contest in the absence of coach Joe Primeau. Primeau left for Toronto by plane immediately after the first game to attend the funeral of his father, killed in an automobile accident Monday.

"The Stamps appear to be the toughest club we've met so far," said Ballard, "this series . . . will show whether our youth and speed is a match for the extra Calgary experience. But the Stamps are pretty fast too."

CREATE A CHALLENGE

Hamilton, May 3 — (CP) —The Sunday sports plebiscites in Toronto and Windsor created a challenge to church people everywhere, Rt. Rev. Walter Bagnall, Anglican bishop of Niagara Thursday told the 57th annual Niagara synod. He said other communities would probably follow the lead given in the first two votes.

In civic votes Toronto and Windsor both approved Sunday sports and subsequent provincial legislation provided for Sunday sports in communities which have approved it by local votes.

Bishop Bagnall said that Sunday sports might mean a change in the church policy regarding afternoon church services, and in some places might even affect the regular evening services. The matter must be faced realistically, he said.

Mead-Johnson Wins Commercial League Title

Competing against three other teams at the Recreation Alleys last night, the Mead - Johnson team won the Men's Commercial Bowling League championship. Adding to this honor the team took away first prize money in the playoffs. Following the playoff Mead Johnson was presented with the trophy emblematic of championship.

Finishing in second place was the Brewers' Warehouse team with Esquire for Mear in third slot. Bringing up the rear but by no means last were the five "Flukers".

High individual scorer of the night was Stu Hill who collected special prizes for rolling the high triple 799 and high single 302.

Members of the new championship team are: Bert Trice, Dan Belnap, Doug Young, Barney Marsden, "Slim" Cross, "Stu" Hill and "Cec" Hardwick.

Look who's here! None other than Earl "Moose" McCready, the ol' so-and-so—fresh from his conquests of "down-under" and glad to be back among old friends again. A prime favorite with Belleville wrestling fans, the "Moose" will show his familiar ring wares in Memorial Arena Friday night against none other than the ferocious 'Strangler' Bob Wagner. It should be quite a tussle and the popular "Moose" will be an all-out favorite to win. Ray Villmer and Wild Bill Longson occupy top-billing on a fine card.

Rouyn Flashes Lose in Overtime

Rouyn, Que., May 3 —(CP)— Bagotville Allies defeated Rouyn Flashes 6-4 in overtime Tuesday night to take a 2-0 lead in their CAHA Eastern Canada best-of-five intermediate finals. The third game will be played here Thursday.

The teams were deadlocked in each period, 1-1, 2-2, and 4-4, and Nick Federonick of Bagotville fired the winning goal at 9:39 of the overtime from a mix-up in front of the Rouyn cage. Roger Baudoin added an insurance goal four minutes later.

Baudoin was top point-getter with two goals and two assists, while Archibald also scored twice for Bagotville, Bilodeau and Federonick getting the others. Lajoie scored two of Rouyn goals, Fortin and Germain getting singles.

Gilbert of Bagotville was given a 10-minute misconduct penalty in the second period and trouble broke out again in the Bendo of Rouyn and G. Legge of third when majors were handed Bagotville.

Canadiens All But Wrap up Memorial Cup by Defeating Regina Pats for Third Time

Toronto, May 3. (CP) — The annual East-West tussle for the coveted Memorial Cup appeared all over but the cheering today for a Quebec Province crew attempting to bring Montreal its second Junior Hockey championship in two years.

Montreal Canadiens, the East's smooth-clicking, scrappy Pucksters, literally wrapped up the snag Tuesday night by avenging Regina Pats 5-1 for their third straight victory without a loss in the best-of-seven final.

Their coach, little Sammy Pollock, predicted his lads would wind up the series in Montreal Thursday night. If his prediction doesn't pan out, additional games also will be played there.

With the majority of 4,429 Toronto fans cheering them on here Tuesday night, the Pats must have figured they were back home. It encouraged them to stage a gallant fight but they wilted under pressure in the third period.

For two periods the Westerners, one of the youngest squads to reach the Junior final, held an edge in play with plenty of scoring chances. But in the third time, they were either outlucked or muffed opportunities around the nets.

Herb Marshall, who potted two goals in the victory, wrecks the scoreless deadlock at 14:58 of the middle session. The Pats then were still battling for all they were worth, but the sting was taken out of their drive as the Canadiens opened up in the final period.

Four Quick Goals

The faster Montrealers sallied in for four quick goals within seven minutes after the third period opened. Three markers came within the space of a minute and 46 seconds, driven home by Art Rose, Marshall and Don English, Kev Rochford got the other.

From then on, the Montrealers tried to save a shutout for their goalie Roger Morrissette.

Paul Masnick won this angle of the battle for the Pats by slapping the puck past Morrissette with less than two minutes remaining.

Murray Armstrong, Regina Coach, and team-captain Morley Bolton take the loss philosophically.

"You'll hear no beef from me," said Armstrong. "The Canadiens are a good club, and our backs are really to the wall now." Both he and MacNeill figured they'll have to come back with better luck around the Canadiens goal early in the game.

Canadiens were jubilant. Their chant as they hit their dressing room was "One-more-to-go" to duplicate the feat of Montreal Royals who won the cup last year.

Flyers Defeat Trenton 7-0 In Soccer Game

Trenton Flyers took the lead in the Bay of Quinte Soccer League last Saturday by defeating Trenton Merchants by seven goals to none at Bain Memorial Park. Trenton Merchants had the advantage of the wind and the rain in the first half but the airmen were the much superior team throughout and gave a fine exhibition of the art of soccer. Three goals were scored in the first half by Angus (2) and Faulkner.

In the second half the "Merchants squad were really in the picture and Jarvis in the Flyers goal was hardly ever troubled. Second half goals were scored by Angus (2), Whyte and Grignon.

But for the sterling display of Wick in the Trenton goal the score would have been much greater.

The Teams—

Flyers: Jarvis, Whyte, Kendall, Hughes, Silver, Snowden, Walls, Faulkner, Angus, Grignon, Miller (subs, Bolton, Hagerman).

Trenton Wick, E. Helyer, Rushnell, Vail, Colterjohn, Mills, Hatcher, Salisbury, Riddell, Campbell, subs, L. Helyer, Martin, Bull, Dore.

Maury McDermott's Drubbing By Yankees Last Week May Have Been Blessing in Disguise

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer)

Credit New York Yankees with an assist should Maurice McDermott fulfill his promise of developing into a winning hurler with Boston Red Sox.

"That McDermott could become a great pitcher if only he gets serious about his job. The trouble with him is that he's too cocky. What he needs is a good pummelling. If some club could put his ears back—but good — he might get some sense into his head and realize he must produce first and strut later."

McDermott got his pummelling all right. The Yankees took care of that last Wednesday. A dozen men faced McDermott in less than two innings and eight reached base.

It seems that was the lesson McDermott needed. In his next start, Maury pitched one of the best games of his big league career. That came Tuesday when he hurled the Red Sox to a 6-1 triumph over Cleveland Indians. Gave Page Hell.

The gangling 21-year-old left-hander allowed only four hits and missed a shutout when Joe Gordon slammed a ninth-inning home run.

Maury had a no-hitter for six innings. An infield single by Larry Doby in the seventh ended his dream in that direction.

Ted Wilson helped Boston ring up its fifth straight with his fourth home run.

Brooklyn Dodgers gained revenge for Monday night's loss to St. Louis, trouncing the Cardinals 10-3. Preacher Roe Returned to form with a well-scattered 10-hit effort. Duke Snider, an error and a couple of walks helped the Dodgers to a big six-run inning against Howie Pollett.

Pittsburgh shelled Warren Spahn from the mound in the first inning with a four-run outburst and went on to defeat Boston Braves, 6-1. The Braves' lefthander had won his first three starts.

The Cubs outlasted Philadelphia Phillies in Chicago 10-8. The Cubs used-to-be Hank Sauer, Ken Heintzelman for seven runs in the first two innings and staggered through despite four errors.

Once again, rain played havoc with the schedule, washing out four games.

FRANKFORD

Happy Gang Wins First Playoffs

Frankford — Frankford Bowling League began their playoff finals Monday evening, with the Happy Gang and Greenhorns tangling in a very spectacular series. The Happy Gang went into the series favored to win the league championship, but bowed in two games to the Greenhorns. The Happy Gang did however, take the high total of 95 pins. The final games will be played Thursday night, with odds seemingly even.

Jack Farley, star of the Frankford bowling team in the Major League at Quarry, took his wife to Trenton Monday evening to give her a few pointers in the fine art of bowling. Imagine his chagrin when wife came up with a score well over two hundred, to edge him out by a decisive margin. Jack regained his prestige, however, in the next couple of games.

Vancouver, May 3 (CP) —One breed of British Columbia sports fan grumbles most of the season and storms with anguish at the season's peak performance.

The soccer fan whose favorite sport is a major one on the Pacific Coast, worries about problems of the sport's survival even as he turns out in fair or foul weather in surprising numbers. But he howls at the price he's asked to pay for seeing touring top-notch British teams.

Still Appears

The Soccer Commission, Keith (News-Herald) Matthews says, is prepping for the annual scream, due anytime now, when fans are told it will cost them $2 a seat to see the English all-stars May 29 and June 3.

The same thing happened last year, Matthews recalled, Everybody said nobody would turn out but more than 15,000 attended the two games Newcastle United played.

Ignored

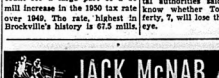
Another tale about popular Dr. George Pearkes, Vancouver's British Empire diving champion, was related this week by Eric (Vancouver Province) Whitehead.

Criticizing the city for neglecting Athan's feat, he drew attention to an informal celebration being given by friends long after the young doctor's triumph at Auckland, N.Z., last February.

Whitehead relates that Athans did more than earn a gold and silver medal, but established as well a high example of "modesty, generosity and unselfish sportsmanship."

Athan's teammate, far in the lead anyway, was having trouble with his diving and the stocky young Canadian showed up unannounced to give what aid he could and even cut short his own practice period to work with him on one of the injured Aussie divers.

"Afterwards, the Australian captain, on behalf of his team, presented Dr. Athans with an inscribed silver cigaret case as a token of their admiration," White tokens of their admiration" White-head says.



Athans said nothing about it but the Australian captain told a Sydney newspaper man "so that you can write home about it and tell them. . . Dr. Athans is the grandest sport and one of the finest fellows we have ever met."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, May 3 (AP)— Contradicting the old theory that everything happens in Brooklyn, Boston Red Sox fans ask: "Did a manager ever thumb himself out of a game there?" . . . Joe McCarthy did and that and some say it's the strangest happening of the season thus far . . . Seems Joe got the thumb while he was arguing with umpire Bill McKinley and left the park. McKinley later said he was only told Mc. Carthy "go back and sit down." . . . But a couple of days before that manager Al Vincent of the Tulsa (Texas League) Oilers rushed out to demand that an opposing player be given the heave-ho. Before he was through talking, Vincent had been tossed out himself.

Yes, it can't swear to this story, but it comes from a good quarter. . . . Seems that Paul Petitt, Pittsburgh's $100,000 farmhand, was causing his New Orleans boss considerable concern by disappearing for long walks, alone, in the French quarter. They figured Paul wasn't the kind of kid to get into trouble, but still it could happen in that part of town. . . Diplomatically, a couple of them dropped into Paul's room and carefully brought the conversation around to these jaunts . . . Petitt looked, concern on his cheek and produced a box of bubble gum . . . The French quarter never when pitcher Cliff Fannin, chasing fungoes in the outfield, stepped in a hole and twisted, not his ankle, but his neck. And Detroit's Gerry Priddy was sock-ed with a $50 fine for riding around town in a police car with a couple of detectives . .

Baseball Officials Agree Toronto Near Major Status

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—A record year for baseball in Toronto was forecast today as the Toronto Maple Leafs opened the International Baseball League season.

Not only a record for opening day, but a record attendance for the season was expected, since Toronto will have Sunday baseball for the first time.

The crowd at this afternoon's game between the Leafs and Syracuse Chiefs is expected to break the record of 22,206 established last year at Maple Leaf Stadium. The fact that Sunday baseball has been legalized drew cheers at Tuesday night's big annual banquet, when speakers included Ford Frick, president of the National League; Frank Shaughnessy, president of the International League and Mayor Hiram McCallum.

The National League president in an earlier interview had said that a third major league is "as inevitable as tomorrow" and that Montreal is a major league city right now, while Toronto with baseball "is also getting there."

On the major league angle, Mayor McCallum told the dinner meeting: "This may be the proper thing to bring Toronto into the sports limelight. We could support a National or American team in time. But let's be cautious of our approach. Treat it in a temperate way and next year, or the year after, we'll take our proper place in the sports sphere of the North American continent."

Sacrificed Support

Shaughnessy, who had made strong plea for Sunday baseb at the same dinner a year ago, s he believes "a great service h been done to Canada by Toron in forcing Sunday baseball. We are i ng to go along to the good everybody."

Don Ross, president of the To onto Ball Club, said that cont ry Allan Lamport and Fred Hu ilton, Toronto sportsman, h more to do with the success the Sunday sport campaign th any others. He noted that La port sacrificed newspaper supp in the civic election to plug Sunday sports.

Charles Watson, another To onto sports leader, called the v ory for Sunday sports "a victory the tolerant people over the p judiced people."

Frick, the main speaker, call baseball a "sprightly game th holds all the precepts of demo racy." He said the game itself w bigger than any baseball leag —"it's the same thing that gi us faith in the family, the nati and God."

In Chicago, Will Harridge, p sident of the American Leag said: "In the distant future may there will be such a thing as third league. But no one can p phesy it for certain. As far as t American League is concern we are perfectly happy right n with eight clubs."

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 3 — (AP) — Director Clarence Brown, celebrating his 35th anniversary in films, today picked the five greatest lovers of movie history. One of the industry's most distinguished creators, he came up with these selections:

John Barrymore — "He had a great theatrical flair for love. His name would add class to any list."

John Gilbert — "The dashing lover."

Rudolph Valentino — "The Latin Lover."

Brown, who has directed all five, wouldn't say which was the greatest.

"But I can tell you which one will live the longest in history: that's Valentino," he said. "He has been dead 25 years and his name is still magic."

Herbert Marshall

Brown is not at all shabashed to recall that it was he who put on the screen what he terms "horizontal love." Yet he laments censorship in one breath and in the next he boasts that "I was the guy who gave the censors the most trouble. They built their code around me."

In "Trial and the Devil," the picture that made Garbo a star, Brown had her and Gilbert play love scenes while reclining. The result aroused the world's screens—and gave the movie censoring minds something to think about. The director is celebrating his anniversary with a return to romance. He is making "To Please the Lady" with Clark Gable and Barbara Stanwyck.

"For 10 years and I've been working with deer, horses, little boys and problems," said the man who filmed "National Velvet," "The Yearling" and "Intruder in the Dust."

SECOND CRICKET TOUR

New Delhi — (CP) — In the wake of the recent successful tour of the Commonwealth Cricket team to India, a second one has been arranged for next winter. This was confirmed in London recently by George Duckworth who was the manager of the last touring team.

Hearts are trumps. The first seven tricks have already come in. South is now in the lead and must take five of these six remaining tricks. You must figure out how to do this against any defence.

Start off with a south lead of a trump that north wins with the ace of hearts. North they leads back the diamond jack which is now the top card left in that suit.

What will east play to this jack of diamonds? He could stuff a black card or ruff with either his nine or queen of hearts. So what happens will depend on what east decides to play right here.

Assume first that east stuffs a small club. Despite the fact that the diamond jack will now take a trick, south ruffs with a small heart. He does this in order to lead his small spade for north to ruff.

When north ruffs the south spade he cashes his king of clubs and leads his small diamond.

South is now bound to get the fifth trick he needs with the jack of trump he still holds.

When north leads his last diamond notice that the jack is the only trump left in south. This could be picked up by east if that player could lead his queen of trump.

But if east trumps the dummy high, south can sluff and later take a trick with trump jack. This type of play is known as a knock-out. It knocks out an opponent higher card before you must act.

Having seen what happens if east sluffs a club on the diamond jack, put back then cards. Now plan what to do if the east play on the diamond jack is a trump. Good practice even if screwy.

TO AVOID DISCORD

Molesey, Surrey, England — (CP) — The carnival committee here ruled that only single women mean enter the town's carnival queen contest. Said committee chairman F. Rickards in announcing the rule: "women would be ineligible: "We don't want to cause discord in the home."

20,000 Fans Expected to See Toronto Opener

(By The Canadian Press)

With a crowd of more than 20,000 in prospect for the International Baseball League opener at Toronto today officials of the Toronto club Tuesday night professed concern over the fact they couldn't handle the demand for tickets.

Manager Joe Ziegler had a desk stacked with currency and requests for seats, but all seats have been sold except for 3,000 in the left-field bleachers and about 2,000 in temporary stands, all of which went on public sale today. The stadium has seats for 17,765.

Middleweight champion Jake LaMotta Tuesday at New York agreed to defend his title in Yankee Stadium June 14 against an opponent who will be named in two weeks.

Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, made the announcement after conferring with the titleholder at the I. B. C. offices in Madison Square Garden.

The man who posed as Turo (Kid) Portuguez, Central American middleweight champion, must face trial in district court for fraud.

He was bound over for trial on the fraud charge, then he went back to jail, unable to post a $3,000 bond.

The future of Pacific Coast League hockey in San Diego rests in the hands of a San Diego group.

Art Chapman, general manager of the Buffalo American Hockey League Club which controls the Skyhawks, San Diego entry in the coast loop, said his organization does not plan to ice a team next season, but is willing to sell its interest.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Little Benny's Note Book

I went to the market with ma to help her carry things, and some lady started to talk to her at the pickles and spices, coming up to her with a big smile and saying, Well, Mrs. Potts, what a pleasant surprise.

Being a wide lady with narrow eyebrows, and ma said, Why, Mrs. Tumley of all people, this is really an unexpected pleasure, I had no idea you did any marketing here, she said.

I don't actually, but I happened to be in the neighborhood and I understand the coffee here is better and cheaper, Mrs. Tumley said, and ma said, Yes, that's true, I wish I could say the same of the vegetables.

Anyway, I'm so glad I gave way to the impulse, Mrs. Tumley said. It's so nice, running into you like this, she said and ma said, Yes, indeed, isn't it? I was just speaking to my husband about you only the other day, as a matter of fact, she said.

Well isn't that quite a coincidence, I remarked to Mr. Tumley only yesterday that it's been entirely too long since the last time we got together with you and Mr. Potts, Mrs. Tumley said, and ma said, Yes, we really must see more of each other. Why don't you call me up some time? she said.

Thanks, I will, or you give me a ring any time at all, Mrs. Tumley said.

And she kept on going tords the mutch worse about me to her coffee, and I said to ma, Jimminies, ma, you told pop you couldn't stand the site of Mrs. Tumley or even hear the them of her.

Well, if I said that about her I'm sure she said something husband, ma said, and I said, Then G wizzickers, ma, why did you invite each other to specials? Did you both get shunt minded? I said, and ma said, Oh, I suppose so, let's not go into any long discussion about it.

3 By-Elections Have Been Called For June 19th

Ottawa, May 3 — (CP) — The government Tuesday called three by-elections and named two new Senators to the Upper Chamber.

It shuffled representation in the 262-member Commons and 102-member Senate by voluntarily surrendering one Commons' seat and named the occupant and another Liberal adherent to the Senate. That reduced Liberal supporters in the Commons to 186

CANADIAN CRUISER WELCOMED TO PEARL HARBOR

and boosted them to 77 in the Upper Chamber.

Simultaneously, three by-elections were called for June 19, a little less than a year after the June 27 general election of 1949. They will be held in Halifax, Annapolis-Kings in Nova Scotia and Montreal Cartier. In addition two of the five Commons vacancies will be filled May 15 through by-elections in Hamilton West and Toronto Broadview.

Liberals won four of the five seats in 1949 but one member's election was declared void.

The second round of by-elections was announced by Prime Minister St. Laurent immediately after the Speaker informed the Commons that Gordon Isnor (L.-Halifax) has been appointed to the Senate. The Hamilton and Toronto by-elections were announced some time ago.

Nova Scotian Named

The second Senate appointment was that of Charles G. Hawkins of Milford Station, N.S., a prominent lumberman and president of Nova Scotia's Liberal Association.

The two filled the last Nova Scotia vacancy in the Senate and reduced Liberal membership to 77 compared to 13 Progressive Conservatives and 12 vacancies. The vacancies include three each in New Brunswick and Newfoundland, two each in Ontario and Quebec and one each in British Columbia and Prince Edward Island.

Commons membership was altered to read: Liberals 186; Progressive Conservatives 40; C.C.F. 13; Social Crediters 10; Independents 8 and Independent-Liberals 3.

Nine Commons vacancies arose from the deaths of T. L. Church, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto Broadview, and Maurice Hartt, Liberal, Montreal-Cartier, Mr. Isnor's appointment, election irregularities in Nova Scotia's Annapolis-Kings and appointment of former Mines Minister Gibson to the Ontario Supreme Court.

Kingsridge

By Alice Ross Colver

"You don't need to be. I've banked nearly all you sent home, Major Park. I could bring him you see." She picked up a fresh tissue for a final wipe and he saw her skin glowing and warm and lovely. "You didn't mind, did you my selling the house? With those horrible shacks for veterans going up right across the field, the whole neighborhood was changing. And I could get such a wonderful price! And with help simply impossible to come by and Nellie and John fixtures here and plenty of room for us all—Well, it just seemed sensible."

In her concluding words he heard her satisfaction with her decision She did not need his approval although she had asked for it. But she had it anyway. It had been smart of her. He had always gotten along well with her people. And without the expense of their care for him, he could take his time about landing something exactly right in the way of position.

"It's okay. I'm glad you sold. I wrote you that."

She gathered up all the soiled tissues and dropped them into a scrap basket beside her. Without her makeup, with her short front locks in tight pin curls, she still was pretty. Her eyes—Susan had her eyes except for color—were dark and deep-set. The planes of her face, forming a soft oval, revealed a delicate yet stubborn strength. He crushed out his cigarette and asked her if she was going to sit there the rest of the night.

"I'm going to sit here till you tell me what's the matter."

"What makes you think anything is?"

"I can tell."

"How?"

"The way you prowl around. You've done nothing but prowl since you got home. And then there's the way you look. And the way you don't say things."

"You've got to allow for my getting acclimated."

She shook her head. "I am. It's not that. I thought at first you didn't like being here— that you were angry about my selling. Then I thought maybe you'd fallen in love with some German woman." She waited in an interrogative silence.

He shook his head. "Their legs are too thick."

"Or some French woman."

"Theirs are too skinny."

"It isn't anything like that? You would tell me you know."

He gave her a slow, surprised glance. "You wouldn't mind, you mean?"

"Well, I'd try and be practical. Reasonable, I mean."

"You would!"

She nodded. She had slipped on a negligee and from a wicker chair she was regarding him thoughtfully, one foot swinging. "What else could I be?" she asked.

"Don't be too reasonable," Frank said. "Not on a thing like that. Don't let you rest. That's all right with me, I mean, you are. It's the children. I left them just kids. I come home and find them grown up. I don't know them, Susan, particularly."

"Oh!"

He looked across at her and she saw his eyes bright and demanding. "Where did she get some of those ideas she's got?"

"What ideas?"

"She talked to me, you know. Down there in the conservatory."

"Well!" Aubrey's tone was guarded. What had Susan been saying? She probably should have prepared him, but she had forgotten his caution, his conservatism. Or, rather, she had hoped there would be no reason for stirring it up.

"She says she doesn't give a hang what you or I or Nanna or the Judge think. She's going to live according to her own rights. That's one thing."

Audrey made no reply for a moment. Presently she gave him a faint half smile, "I used to talk just like that."

"And then you married me. But you still have ideas. You still like to go off on a tangent nobody else is on." He stopped. "Where's Susan going to school?" he asked abruptly.

She braced herself. "Why, she's going to that one I wrote you about."

"You wrote me about several."

"She's going to the one up th Hudson."

"Where they take all kinds o kids? From all kinds of homes?"

Audrey nodded. "I believe i It," she said firmly. "After all Susan has to live in a world that's filled with all kinds of people. not prepare her for it!"

"That's the trouble, then."

"What's the trouble?"

He squinted his eyes up into tiny points of light, and fixed them on her. He had always liked the clear incisiveness of her mind and its fearless questing. It had been what first attracted him to her. And as long as she didn't follow through with any revolutionary action on her part—as he had soon discovered she didn't—she made a stimulating companion. She took out her restlessness in talk.

But after the children came she had gone further than talk. Safe, herself, in the pleasantly restricted pattern set by her upbringing and marriage she found it exciting to experiment with them. Beginning with their diet, she had raised them according to the most advanced theories, while Frank, absorbed in his business, had hardly been aware. They were fed bananas when other babies were still on the bottle. A little later they shocked the town by addressing all adults by their given names. Still later, in the progressive school where Audrey first sent them, they grew into lusty, screaming fighters whose battles, however violent, were never interrupted or checked, whose decisions, however wrong, were given full cognizance and respect. Self-expression, not self restraint was the watchword. Reason, not punishment, was the rule. And if reason failed, the consequences must be endured by all. Frank protested—but with a growing uncertainty in his mind. And finally one day when he discovered that Donald, then age 12, could not multiply, add or subtract because "those things didn't interest him," and when Susan, age ten, and courteously requested to perform a minor favor for her grandmother had coolly replied that she "was too busy and didn't care to, thank you," there came an end. Frank had told Audrey in his clear and solid way that his kids had had enough of that kind of education. From then on they were going to do where they would learn to be something besides hoodlums and morons, where they would learn arithmetic and manners at least. Audrey had argued, but, slightly alarmed herself at the unforeseen results, she had been transferred elsewhere. She had always contended it was the fault of the teachers, not the system or the methods, which had failed. In other words, she still favored revolution.

So, when Frank was overseas and she had unexpectedly been given a second opportunity for experimentation, she took it. The school where Susan was enrolled had changed hands, she wrote Frank, and was no longer satisfactory. "Susan will simply never be able to get into college if she sticks there," she had written. "She's not too good a student anyway. I'm taking her out and sending her to one I've just heard about. It's a marvelous preparatory. It's marvelous in other ways too. In its atmosphere, I mean. Because it takes all kinds of children. All creeds and nationalities and walks of life. It's truly democratic and I feel Susan needs that sort of exposure. After all, she's been in exclusive private schools her entire life. This is private, too, in that it's endowed and expensive—but it's different. I've investigated it from all angles and am thoroughly pleased with what I have found out. I am sure Susan will gain a great deal. The Headmaster is a wonderful man. You can just feel God in him."

Frank had written back for Audrey to watch out for Judas and then had forgotten the whole matter until tonight. But tonight, confronted by Susan downstairs, he had remembered.

He said now, "What Susan has gained is a firm conviction that all people are equal. She won't have it that we aren't each and every one of us, on exactly the same level. Entitled to the same things. Deserving of the same things."

"Meaning?"

"Meaning that she takes exception to our discrimination against Gerry. He should be treated as . . . Well, as I am, returning after prolonged absence. If the fatted calf is good enough for me, it's good enough for him as well. Those were her very words."

"But if we explain." Audrey had lost its assurance.

He stood up. "My dear, we taught her long ago that she needn't listen to us."

She looked at him standing there, huge and patient and sweet. Yes, he was sweet in his generous sharing of the responsibility for the results of Susan's educational upbringing when it was actually all hers.

She said slowly "I don't think we need to worry about anything, though, Frank. Not yet. Susan is clearheaded."

"Damned clearheaded."

"I mean she's just in the ideal little stage now when she suffers with the suffering world. It gives her a kind of fragile spiritual beauty that perhaps you don't know how to cope with."

"Not as fragile as you think." He lifted his head and the brightness of his demanding look assaulted her. "But let's forget it."

To smother his doubts, to give herself time to think, she rose with one swift, fluid movement. "There's nothing to worry about really," she said.

And in her chaste blue and white bedroom, in the wing over her grandfather's study, Susan undressed slowly, her thoughts on Gerry and the kiss he had given her. She stood in the middle of the velvet rug dropping each garment as she took it off until they were all in a heap at her feet. For a moment she remained motionless. Then, moving with brisk lightness she went to the bathroom door in which there was a mirror, and, turning before it, she surveyed herself from all angles with the detached appraisal of one who had suddenly become the owner of a completely strange body.

"I guess," she said aloud reflectively "I guess love isn't just goo and slush. I guess there's really something in it."

Gerry awakened the next day in his room in the Kingridge Inn. The narrow iron bed beneath him was lumpy and hard The painted plaster walls were smoke stained. The thin strip of nondescript carpeting on the floor was frayed and worn. The dirty shade at the curtainless window hung in strips. But he was indifferent. He had slept in worse places, as he had slept in better and in both he had learned that his measure of living was, as a rule, a transient matter and therefore not too important.

He lay with his arms folded under his head as he gazed out of the window. In the early light the gay recklessness that had lent charm to his face in the night before was gone and in its place an expression of calculating thoughtfulness made him look much older and harder than his years.

His mind was shuttling back and forth over the events of the past twenty-four hours, ferreting out, as he had long ago learned to do, its personal gains and losses.

It had been luck to run into Donald at the Ski lodge, and greater luck to find him the kind of lad he was. The question "you don't remember me, do you?" brought a quick and careless reply. "Sure, I remember you. You came to Nanna's once about 10 years ago and Nellie fed you in the kitchen. You needed a haircut and you looked as though you'd knock anybody's block off if they told you to so." He had chuckled, and then he had added, with a natural friendliness, "you were down on your luck all right weren't you? But you're sure in it now. Why don't you come home with me and meet the family know?

Why not, indeed? Gerry had made no plans for the future as yet beyond realizing that sooner or later, he would be drawn back to Kingsridge by the burden of hate and hurt and furious hunger in his heart that had drawn him there before. It was inevitable. But this time there would be triumph, too, since he would go neither empty-handed nor fearful. As in his tumultuous and misguided sensibility, he had been once his own worst enemy, so now he was his own best friend. For, without help, he had pulled himself from the gutter until he stood today a man of some repute in one small sphere, at least, with money in the bank. These facts he wanted to throw into the teeth of Steven King.

Well, he had thrown them, all right, he thought to himself grimly, and in so doing had pretty effectively routed his own purpose. Because what he had secretly hoped was that as a result of his success so far and without the need of being a mendicant, the Judge would forget the past and come across with some introduction or other definite offer of help in order to establish Gerry firmly in the world of respectability and which he had formed an entrance. He needed this help. He knew it. With no job waiting for him, with no business experience no business training and no friends in business or much of anywhere, for that matter, he was going to be, indeed already was, at a disadvantage. His war record was admirable but of no practical value for the future he sought. Of course if he wanted to keep on flying —but he was fed up with it and with the Army.

Yes he needed help. And now he'd killed his one chance of getting it. But he hadn't been able to stop himself. The minute the door had opened and he had seen Elizabeth King standing there before him, the lid had blown off all his old rage and he had entered the house an enemy.

So what next?

It was a question he could not answer precisely, There was Susan, of course —

His dark face lightened and for a moment he lay there thinking of Susan. But he was unclear about her as yet and until he was clear . . .

Suddenly he flung back the covers, sprang from the bed and began to dress. At least here was a new day. And something must be done with it. Some beginning made, some decision taken. For in spite of his bright defiance to Steven, in spite of his bank account that would maintain him comfortably for a while, the future pressed. Besides, inaction was intolerable to one of his temperament. He would eat, and, eating, evolve a plan.

He finished dressing all except his shirt. Then he began to shave before the wavering mirror in a corner of the room. His mind had gone back again to yesterday and his trip down from the Ski lodge.

He had liked Donald. In him he had seen himself as he might have been. Lighthearted, really warm and with that high confidence that goes with a secure background. His own lightheartedness was always tinged with cynicism, his warmth measured, his confidence a bluff—or a threat.

On their way down, Donald had of course, asked the question Gerry had expected.

"Why did you run off that time, anyway?"

"Because I hated it."

"The school you mean? Or the family you lived with?"

"Both."

"You had a nerve— only thirteen." There had been admiration in Donald's voice. Gerry had made no reply. But Donald was as curious as a puppy and as unoffending. He went on.

"What under the sun did you do? How did you get along through those next years?"

Hints Canada Join UK in Development Of Colonial Empire

Julian Amery, British M.P., Sees Canada as Partner

By ALLAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 4 — (CP) — A hint that Canada join Britain as a partner in the development of her colonial empire came today from Julian Amery, 30-year-old conservative member for Preston North.

Amery did not elaborate on this suggestion, acknowledging that it would be a bold step for a young country bulging with opportunities for domestic investment. But, he said in a letter to the Times, it probably would be a good idea for Canada to accept part payment in sterling for Canadian exports to Britain, using the proceeds for investment in such territories as the British West Indies.

He supported his argument by saying that Canada, unlike the United States is a "deficiency country, lacking in such natural resources as jute, cotton, rubber and certain metals."

Responsibility of Britain

It would be the United Kingdom's responsibility to create conditions favorable to Canadian investment in Britain's tropical dependencies.

He listed there three essential conditions:

1. Canadians must be able to make a reasonable profit, in dollars, on their investments.

2. British subjects in the United Kingdom should be helped to invest in approved Canadian companies.

3. Canadians should be left with no doubt that colonial development is the real aim of the British government.

In a reference to the Ottawa trade and economic conference of 1932, he said "we have to get back to the principles of the Ottawa agreements—home producer first, —price producer, second; the rest—last."

Foot suggested that Canada secure payment in sterling for a "substantial and reasonable" part of Canadian imports from the sterling area and invest sterling thus earned in areas such as the West Indies.

He said a like commonwealth dollar imports "in order that we should be able to go on meeting the Canadian dollar deficit."

"Of course," he added, "it would be harsh on Canadians to put it bluntly that we are without adding certain other facts to the situation, but that is fact.

"All these other commonwealth countries must set out down their dollar imports, and at the same time Canada is maintaining a far larger dollar deficit than she had before the war."

HAS NOT GONE INTO PLANS

Washington, May 4 — (AP) — President Truman said today that he had not gone into plans for power development under the Niagara River treaty now before the Senate for ratification.

He said that the program for the Niagara development would be gone into after the treaty provides for the disposition of the waters between Canada and the United States is ratified.

Fenelon Falls Now Without Police Force

Fenelon Falls, May 4 — (CP) — With the first of chief constable, David Gordon, this community of 1,100 persons has no police force.

It also has no weed inspector, collector of municipal monies, road superintendent, parks superintendent, sanitary inspector or relief officer.

Chief Gordon, who contends his dismissal by Fenelon Falls council was illegal, did all those jobs.

The 55-year-old native of Scotland, was a policeman for 35 years, said today:

"I have been dismissed illegally and without cause and have not been given an opportunity to reply. I wasn't even given seven days notice, which I am sure usually receives. They laid no charges against me."

Chief Gordon came to this community, 16 miles north of Lindsay, 19 years ago.

Wanted Salary Boost

His dismissal followed an attempt to get a salary boost from $1,500 to $2,000 a year.

Reeve J. W. Mickey, a veterinary surgeon, said the by-law which ended Chief Gordon's services did not have unanimous support from the councillors. It was given three readings in one evening.

Chief Gordon said today he is seeking legal advice and that the Ontario Police Commission has intervened in the matter.

"If a council can treat an officer in this manner and get away with it ,nomunicipal police position is safe in the province of Ontario," he said.

In Toronto, Ontario Provincial Police said it has always been their job to police the town of Fenelon Falls. The fact that the town had hired its own chief had never relieved the provincials of responsibility. They would continue to handle the policing job.

Two-Year-Old Boy May Still Be Alive

Port Huron, Mich., May 4 (CP) —The search for a two-year-old child, missing from his home here since Monday, was spurred today by reports that he may be alive.

Although police earlier thought that Brian Marshall drowned in the St. Clair River, which runs past his foster parents' home, they have received two reports that he was alive.

Detroit detectives were told that a woman was seen in Detroit with a little boy who answered the description of Brian. And Port Huron police say that a garage mechanic saw a boy near the Marshall home just before Brian was reported missing. The mechanic gave an exact description of the clothes the child was wearing.

An extensive, two day search of the slow-moving river near the Marshall home has revealed no trace of the blond, blue-eyed child.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, May 4 (CP)—Sy spells decreasing southerly winds today. Friday will permit the warm air that has spread into Southern Ontario to move slowly northward. Central and Eastern Ontario will be able to enjoy the more seasonable weather thus far confined to southwestern sections of the province. Cloudy and cool weather with intermittent rain will continue over Northern Ontario. Cooler weather in air mass in that region continues to block the advancing warmer air.

Fourteen Killed, Forty Injured In Bomb Blast

Workmen Attempting To Extract Explosive

Catania, Sicily, May 4. (CP)— Fourteen persons were killed and 40 were injured today in an explosion at a chemical factory five miles outside Catania.

The blast occurred while workmen were attempting to extract explosive from a store of heavy-caliber aerial bombs. The dead were buried under tons of earth, stones and debris while most of the injured were cut by flying splinters and flying glass.

First reports said that about 30 bombs weighing 3,600 pounds each went off in the explosion. They blew up when a workman was taking the caps off one of them in an effort to recover its contents for industrial uses.

Origin of the bombs could not be learned immediately. During the war Catania was an important air base.

The base was subjected to heavy aerial attack itself just before the Allied invasion in 1943. Catania was captured by British troops, with the First Canadian Division encountering some of the toughest fighting of the Sicilian campaign not far away.

Today's explosion gouged a hole 15 feet deep at the factory and rocked this city of 245,000.

The terror recalled wartime bombing, as fire engines and ambulances raced through streets littered with broken glass to the factory.

All Forms of Transportation Must be Equalized Says President of C.N. Railway

Winnipeg, May 4 (CP)— Donald Gordon today forecast the financial loads carried by the railways and other forms of transportation some day will be equalized.

The president of Canadian National Railways did not say what he thinks will be done, in his speech to the Chamber of Commerce he referred merely to the necessity for "certain equalizing regulations."

The railways are definitely behind the eight ball in comparison with highway, air and water transportation facilities, he said. Railways had to maintain schedules regardless of weather and traffic conditions assume liability on a national scale, protect highway crossings, impose load and speed regulations, man trains with a stipulated number of men and work them only a stipulated number of hours.

"I do not object to nor fear competition . . . However, competition must be on a fair basis

"Something must be done to equalize the situation. That much is plain."

Making his first visit to the city since he became president of the CNR Mr. Gordon said other transportation services are not so essential as the railways.

Along the railways, "flows the life-blood of our nation. . . Canadian Railways in general and the Canadian National in particular are the fourth arm of our national defence."

R.H. Saunders, Head of Hydro, Tells of Hydro Advancement To Lodge Members, Guests

Members of the Moira Lodge Wednesday evening paid tribute to Sir Adam Beck 1930 when a large number of officials from the East Central region were guests of the lodge on their regular monthly meeting.

The occasion was "Hydro Night" and fittingly the guest speaker for the evening was Robert H. Saunders, chairman of the H.E.P.C. for Ontario.

Speaking to the lodge members and before hydro officials who were guests of the Lodge, many of whom had served for a long years, Mr. Saunders said he did not need to tell them that hydro had done a good job. "The fact that many of its officials had served up to 25 years was a tribute to the men and also to hydro," he said.

Mr. Saunders went over the entire development period of hydro from its organization back in 1906 until the present time when over three million h.p. was being developed.

Makes Good Aim

He said that Ontario hydro had made good its aim of providing abundant and cheap power for all the people of Ontario. It had fulfilled the promise of its originator Sir Adam Beck that electric power would be in every home as true to that promise hundreds as urban users were concerned hydro had not over the years gone one cent. All costs of development had been borne by the user.

Declaring that Ontario hydro had been greatly responsible for tremendous industrial development in this province. Mr. Saunders said that today over 1,000 municipalities are receiving public hydro, 300 of these being on cost contracts. Rural customers are now number 367,000 and almost every part of the province was being served.

Efficient Organization

"The people of Ontario should be extremely proud of hydro, of my predecessors and of hydro officials," stated Mr. Saunders. "Efficiency of hydro is proof degree of the loyalty, devotion of public ownership. It would be difficult to find a more efficient organization than hydro."

The speaker referred to the hydro shortage of 1948 when blackouts and cutoffs were prevalent.

"Only a few then but had a difficult time convincing the people of Ontario that one day we would have water shortage," he said. "If they had been normal waterfall in 1948 there would have been restrictions but no cutoffs."

Hon. W. Matthews said tribute to local hydro commissioners for a marvellous job in carrying the load during the period of hydro shortage and for their co-operation with the H.E.P.C.

Never Refused Power

In spite of shortages, however, during the period hydro had not refused power to one applicant. No other organization selling a commodity to the public has as good a record, he said. Hydro had power to owners of new homes and new industry if would have been a calamity."

Hon. Mr. Frost said hydro worked on the principle that everybody was entitled to a just and fair deal.

"Yes" said Mr. Saunders "hydro has done a tremendous job in keeping pace with the industrial development in Ontario. We are keeping pace with requirements of the future."

By the year 1956 1,400,000 additional horsepower would be brought into production, and three years later it would be brought into production in June of this year. Those included the work of the Government at Des Joachims on the Ottawa River, 80,000 h.p. at Pine Portage, and 56,000 h.p. at the Tunnel development on the Mississaga River.

Large Amount Spent

Referring to the many development projects now underway, Mr. Saunders pointed out that in 1949 hydro had spent 100 million dollars -in material purchased; it had spended 40 million on wages and another 24 millions on wages for construction work.

Of the 100 millions spent on materials 86 millions had been spent in Canada and more than $1 million of that in Ontario. Hydro material purchases made a big lift in employment alone," he said.

Russian Claim Rebuked as 'Impertinence'

Tokyo, May 4 — (AP)—Gen. MacArthur today rebuked as "provocative impertinence" a Russian claim that maintenance of United States military forces in Japan violates Allied occupation policies.

In a note 250 words the Supreme Allied Commander in Japan dismissed Wednesday's demand by Lt.-Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko for an explanation of the "reconstruction of the former Japanese naval and air bases" in Japan and Okinawa.

MacArthur told the top Russian representative in Japan that Okinawa does not come under international control and that the United States government is entirely free to take such military measures therein as it may deem advisable.

Gunmen Escape After Firing Shots at Pursuer

Toronto, May 4 (CP)— Two gunmen who robbed a laundry-truck driver Wednesday of $1,159 escaped after firing three shots at a man who chased them.

L. Lasowsky, the driver, said the men took the briefcase containing the money from Supply Laundry and his day's collections. Irwin Kates who operates a store near the scene of the holdup, was chasing the men on foot when they fired the shots.

Lasowski shouted "robbers" and Hymie Boot ran out of a repair shop and chased them. The men dropped the briefcase fired three shots at Boot but he followed and a corner. Boot dropped to the ground for protection. No one was injured.

Move to Banish Russian Credo Not Expected

Justice Minister Gives His Opinion

Ottawa, May 4 — (CP) —Parliament's debate on communism rolled through a second inconclusive day in the Commons Wednesday with no indication of any move to banish the Russian credo from Canada.

Justice Minister Garson, in an hour-long address, said a motion by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader to outlaw communism and "subversive activities" under the criminal code was unnecessary.

It would drive the communists underground, encourage conspiracy, arouse unjustified sympathy for "victims" under the criminal code sitiutions.

M. J Coldwell, C.C.F. leader generally agreed with justice minister. He was afraid such a amendment might seriously curb civil liberties and said Canada, as a free nation, should "not adopt any of the methods of the iron curtain countries."

T. L. Macdonnell (PC—Toronto Greenwood) delivering the main Conservative salvo of the debate three-hour sitting said the Conservatives were not suggesting the outlawing of individuals. They merely asked a strengthening of the law, not a communist witch -hunt."

May Reach Vote

Pierre Gauthier (L—Portneuf) urged that Communism be fought "intelligently" and that the anti-spying principle be a belief in God. A vote may be reached on the question later in the week.

Aussie Labor Approves Bill To Outlaw Reds

Sydney, Australia, May 4 (Reuters)—The Australian Labor party today decided to endorse the principles of the coalition government's bill to outlaw communism.

Meanwhile, at pit-top meetings throughout the 115 mines in New South Wales voted against their communist-led union's order to strike for one day in protest against the bill. Coal production loss was estimated at 29,000 tons, about half of New South Wales' normal daily output.

In Canberra, Joseph Chifley, Labor chief and leader of the parliamentary opposition, said Labor party would approve sections of the government's bill, but would seek alterations in those dealing with the liberty of the individual.

He added: "The Labor party differentiates between the part of the bill which dissolves the Australian communist party, expropriates its funds and declares it unlawful, and the provisions of the bill which authorizes the government to proscribe other organisations and persons who are members of such organizations, or advocate or support certain views."

Will Power Alcoholism's Only Cure; Antabuse Only Helps, Say Doctors

Detroit, May 4—(AP)— Will power is still the only cure for alcoholism. Antabuse, the newest drug that claims to be a cure, is useful, but no home remedy.

This was reported to the American Psychiatric Association today by 12 Canadian and American doctors. Their findings: Alcoholism self is safe. But take a drink with antabuse in the system and the face turns red, breath shortens, nausea and terrible worry sweeps over you.

The obstacle to the wife's putting antabuse secretly in the coffee, the doctors said, is that there is no taste to it. Also, they said, if they took even a bottle of beer secretly.

People with bad hearts, high blood pressures, certain blood circulation troubles and bad livers are not allowed to take antabuse. Several doctors said it is necessary to have a psychiatrist direct the treatment. Not because of safety, but because success depends on the drinker getting psychiatric help for his will power.

In San Francisco, six doctors reported 1,000 cases with 60 per cent still dry after six months, 50 per cent still doing less drinking except 12 who were worse after drunkenness. In Albany, N.Y., 150 were treated. Ninety-four improved greatly.

In Montreal, where 125 have been treated, half of those who had failed to reform with other treatments succeeded with antabuse.

None of the doctors would predict whether antabuse is helpful only of staying dry with antabuse would be a permanent cure.

99-Day Chrysler Strike Settled, Work on Monday

Union Claims it Received '10-Cents-an-Hour Package'

By GLENN ENGLE

Detroit, May 4 — (AP) — The 99-day Chrysler strike, second longest and costliest in the history of automotive industry, was settled today.

The strike cost $1,427,920,880 in lost wages, barely short of the record $1,457,000,000 General Motors strike of 1945-46 that lasted 112 days.

Chrysler and the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) announced agreement on new contracts this morning.

The 89,000 strikers in 25 Chrysler plants across the United States will return to work Monday. Fifty thousand made idle in supplier plants will stream back behind them. The company hopes to reach capacity production within two weeks.

$100 a Month Pension

The union claims it received the "10-cent-an-hour package" in pensions and hospital and medical benefits for which it called the strike last fall.

Settlement carried a $100 monthly pension including federal social security benefits, for workers 65 with 25 years service. Hospital and medical benefits also were increased.

The new contract, which would run for three years, must have the formal approval of local unions before the U.A.W. will send the strikers back. That was believed to be a formality however.

Voting by the local unions is scheduled for Saturday.

Although the first of the striking workers will be back on Chrysler Monday it is doubted that full production in the various Chrysler, DeSoto Dodge and Plymouth assembly plants will be resumed before the middle of next week.

Color Question Discussed by Niagara Synod

Hamilton, May 4. (CP)—Attacking problems of racial discrimination, Rev. Canon H. A. Cody of the Synod of the Diocese of Niagara today the Negro "problem" was not the only one standing up to the color question. There was not a single Negro in the Synod or even in the average church, he said.

"We are told that we are doing everything necessary for the Negro by segrating them," he declared. "Christianity should face up to the fact that just because a man is white does not mean we ought to be thankful to God.

"Christ said we should be like little children but he didn't say we should be like children. Let our emotions overrule plain common sense."

Canon Cody wondered if breakdown in the color bar might be answer to the problem. He told the Synod he did not know.

U.S. May Use British Comet or Avro Jetliner

Washington, May 4 (AP)—United States Government officials are considering using a foreign built, jet-powered commercial transport—either the British plans or the Canadian Avro Jetliner— for scheduled operation tests over U.S. airline routes.

The proposal was made because the U.S. has no jet transport and is unlikely to have one for a couple of years. Both civil and military groups in the U.S. want steps to shorten the lead taken by British and Canada in what promises to be a major portion of the future aviation market.

Operating data with a new type plane is necessary for connection with solving problems of air traffic control, terminal to terminal speeds, dependability and fuel consumption. The information would help decide how much effort the U.S. should put into jet transports.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration has included both the Avro Jetliner and the DeHavilland Comet as possible flight test planes. Harold A. Jones, a civil aeronautics board member, will inspect the Comet — the world's first all-jet commercial plane — and other British turbo-prop transports late this month. U. S. airlines and other aviation officials who have seen the Comet have praised it highly.

May be Ready by U.S.

The British government has been considering flying the 36-passenger Comet to the U.S. It already has flown to Italy and Africa at average speeds of 450 miles an hour. On a 3,178 mile run from Edinburgh to Brighton, England, the Comet took 43 minutes—an average of more than 530 miles an hour.

The Jetliner, or de Avro C-102 as she is technically designated, last April 18 streaked the 365 miles between Toronto and New York slightly under one hour, averaging about 400 m.ph. Leaks told in Ottawa for commercial airliners between Toronto and New York in one hour, 50 minutes.

Built to carry 40 to 60 passengers, the Jetliner is slower than the Comet, and has considerably "less range," including under present fuel reserve standards to hops of 500 to 600 miles.

Powered by four Canada-Ltd., the Jetliner resembles conventionally powered aircraft except that it is unusually quiet. It is powered by four gas-turbine engines.

THROWN FROM ROLLER

Cobourg, May 4 (CP)—Thrown from a field roller when the horse bolted, F. A. Black, 55, died in hospital Wednesday. He suffered a fractured skull.

Sen. Hardy Says Canada's Minister To Cuba Hasn't Enough to Do

Ottawa, May 4 (CP)— Senator A. C. Hardy, Conservative, said today that Dr. E. H. Coleman, Canada's minister to Cuba, is "bored to death" because he has "nothing-to do." And, he said, he's not a bad Canadian envoy in the same position.

Disrupting the calm of the Senate External Affairs Committee, the Brockville barrister and business man said he didn't blame Dr. Coleman — former Undersecretary of State—for that situation.

The trouble arose. Senator Hardy explained, from the fact that Canada's whole diplomatic service has "grown too rapidly and too large."

His statement emerged as Leon Mayrand, Assistant Undersecretary of the External Affairs Department, was being asked whether Canada contemplates with Consuls-general in some capitals where she maintains full diplomatic relations.

Mr. Maynard told Sen. Hardy he was sure Canada's business interests in Cuba were of a size to keep Dr. Coleman busy. Diplomats tended to operate at a higher level than consuls and had access to places consuls don't attain. They therefore had greater advantages.

"There's too much keeping up with the Joneses," said Senator Hardy.

50 Per Cent Of City Taxes Now Collected

Over 50 percent of the city taxes for 1950 have already been paid into the city coffers, it was announced today by Mayor H. Jack Ellis. The date was announced of the first instalment of taxes has just passed.

To date over half a million dollars has been collected on the current year's tax roll by city tax collector Drury S. Denyes. Total tax roll is approximately $961,-000.

Mr. Denyes stated that this year saw the biggest collection of taxes in the history of the city for the first instalment with collections being large enough to pay all outstanding notes for current expenditures for 1949 and 1950.

He pointed out the fact that taxes in Belleville were considerably increased this year, this purpose by the taxpayers to date has been very gratifying," stated Mayor Ellis in commenting on the collections. "It was not the fault of this year's council that the tax rate went up and I wish to express my appreciation to local tax payers for their response."

Despite the increased tax rate there was shown an added tendency by taxpayers to pay their complete taxes with the first instalment and thus take advantage of the one and a half percent discount on the remaining three instalments.

Story in Rhyme--

The sight of three men waddling up the river yesterday inspired the newsroom poet to break out into verse. Here 'tis. Editor.

Three daring young men with the greatest of ease
Waded the river clear up to their knees,
Three spears prodded sharply—
the crowd they did please—
And it happened in broad light of day
Their movements were graceful, with verve and with dash
They enacted the drama in play by play—by-gosh.
But now they are sorry they acted so hasty
For the law came and, took them away.

Seaway Essential To Safeguard Investment

Washington, May 4 — (AP) — Senator Connally (D-Tex), Chairman said today the St. Lawrence seaway is essential to protect the investment the United States has made in the industrial Great Lakes region.

Chapman, testifying before the House of Representatives Public Works Committee, in support of legislation to authorize the seaway and power project, thus refuted a point the committee has heard time and again.

The big waterway, he said, would make possible the full - scale utilization of newly-developed Labrador iron ore deposits. Without the seaway, Chapman said, the ores are not economically transported to the hub of the steel industry, located at or near Great Lakes cities.

He said use of the Labrador ores, coupled with utilization of low-grade ores remaining in the upper Great Lakes area, would spare the country the possibility of a shift of existing steel making facilities from present locations."

Members of St. John Ambulance Brigade Demonstrate Training

Demonstrating their ability to give assistance to the injured and the manned in times of flood, fire, accident, or national emergency, members of the Women's Division and Junior Girl Cadets, St. John Ambulance Brigade, last evening showed provincial inspecting officers the extent of their knowledge of first aid nursing, and child welfare during annual inspection at Brigade Headquarters on Front Street.

At the beginning of the inspection, the girl cadets, ranging in ages from 10 to 16, were called into columns of two by Mrs. C. W. Tice, cadet officer. Provincial Commissioner V. A. M. Kemp then passed along the ranks and spoke to the girls individually.

Give Practical Demonstration

For the second phase of the cadet inspection, the girls were formed into smaller groups to give a practical demonstration of what they had been taught in their first aid classes. The manner in which they had learned the intricacies of applying splints and the skill they had gained in applying the various types of bandages won warm approval from Commissioner Kemp and Mrs. Ethel Anderson, provincial nursing officer for Ontario, at the conclusion of the Junior Cadet inspection.

They commended Mrs. Tice and Mrs. Lillian Ashley, local superintendent of cadets for their good work, and for the time they had devoted to instructing the Junior Cadets in first aid and practical nursing.

Following the junior inspection, members of the Senior Women's Division, many of whom were from No. 137 Division at Picton, were called into line by Barbara McLuskie, Commissioner Kemp also spoke to the senior members individually, questioning them as to the particular phases of their work they liked best.

The second part of the inspection, like that of the junior section, consisted of practical demonstrations of first aid, nursing and bed making, under the close observation of Mrs. Anderson and Commissioner Kemp.

In conclusion, Commissioner Kemp addressed the Senior Division and congratulated them on what they had accomplished.

Stresses Men's Part

He emphasized the need for establishing a Men's Division and a Boys' Cadet unit and said that he was completely at a loss as to why Belleville did not have a Men's division.

The commissioner went on to relate how 1,000 adult members of St. John Ambulance Brigade handled 25,000 emergency cases in the province of Ontario last year. He pointed out that this meant a rate of roughly 15 cases per person. "Another 1,000 new members," he said, "would mean an additional 15,000 cases aided."

Mrs. R. J. McLuskie, divisional superintendent, welcomed Commissioner Kemp and Mrs. Anderson on behalf of the Brigade members. She extended a special welcome to Mrs. Connie McGibbon and the members of the Picton division.

Citations were presented to numerous members for outstanding services during the past year by Commissioner Kemp and luncheon was served at the conclusion of the evening's program.

Tourist Business Greatly Assists Farm Income

"Belleville's booming tourist industry yields an inestimable revenue to the local farm market through its consumption of many tons of foodstuffs each year," Mr. Burrows, secretary of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce declared today.

The volume of foodstuffs sold to visitors in this district alone runs into thousands of dollars during the height of the tourist season, he asserted.

"The local farm population receives a handsome dividend each year from the sale of home grown market, dairy, poultry and fruit produce," he said, and pointed out that the success of the tourist business filter right back to the primary producer, helping to bolster farm income and purchasing power.

Over 250,000 hungry vacationists crossed at the Thousand Island Bridge and Niagara Falls last year, and a large percentage stopped at local hotels, restaurants, resorts and catering establishments. The added local purchases of these establishments greatly increase local farm income, he emphasized.

In conclusion, he asked everyone to get behind efforts to highlight the current "Tourist Service Week" now being sponsored across Canada, and to try in every way possible to improve this community's tourist services during the coming season.

Little Hope Held For Baby Burned By Electric Heater

Toronto, May 4 (CP)— Little hope is held for two-months-old Susan Markle, seriously burned about the head arms and legs Wednesday night when an electric heater set fire to her crib. Her mother, Ann, 19, is also being treated in hospital for burns suffered when she held the baby and flaming blankets in her arms to smother the fire.

The father, John H. Markle, who stayed behind to extinguish the fire while his wife and baby were rushed to hospital, collided with an automobile when he tried to catch them. Both he and the other car driver escaped with a shaking up.

Mrs. Markle said she was warned of the baby's plight when she heard her 15-month old son screaming.

Saunders Promises New Business Office for Hydro

A new hydro building to house the business offices of the East Central Region of the H.E.P.C. will be constructed in Belleville in the near future, it was announced Wednesday night by Robert H. Saunders, Ontario Hydro chairman.

Speaking at "Hydro Night" being observed by members of the Moira Lodge A.F. and A.M., Mr. Saunders told his listeners that a new hydro office at Belleville was long overdue. The new building would be constructed as soon as possible, he stated.

Referring to the new building following the meeting, Mr. Saunders said it had not been determined where the new building would be constructed. It would not, however, be at the site of the present offices on Victoria Ave.

WHAT COURTESY TO TOURISTS MEANS

Everyone whether in business or not knows enough of human nature and of the laws that govern business to know that one's attitude to others is of paramount importance. In the business realm of tourist kindliness or courtesy is the only expression that can be given consideration.

Last year Americans swarmed into Canada and poured into the lap of Canadian economy and wealth just $900,000 besides contributing to the happiness of the Canadian people during the summer in entertaining and showing friends from across the border, that many something that divides this land from the great Republic. Besides there is the pleasant reaction on the visiting tourists.

The fact of United States currency is a great boon to Canadian industrial and national life. These visitors come gladly spend dollars and are grateful for the vacation they are able to enjoy here in our holiday lands.

Courtesy is the answer to this generous American visitor. A courtesy that will go far to make for these neighbors the happiest occasion of the year. Courtesy means money in the ordinary sense of affability, it means readiness to direct visitors to camps to which they plan to go, it is fair treatment in all dealings they have with during this holiday time of summer. There have been times where "high" prices have been complained of in the years. No Canadian should do anything that would to mar the good opinion that Americans are so willing to hold of the people of Canada by asking more than necessary for the eating and meals and other services. Canadians have an opportunity to earn the reputation being a grateful, courteous, people now as the flood of summer touring will soon begin, bringing countless thousands to this northern land of which Canadians are so proud for its beauty, its natural attractions and its history. Generous welcome of our guests from the United States, generously but not extravagantly, with a sense of courtesy and kindliness is the only adequate expression Canadians should voice as the touring season reaches, when the camps and lodges in countless parts of this holiday land, and in hamlets towns and cities will be obtaining our guests from the United States.

Nothing is more appreciated by anyone than accommodation that leaves nothing to be desired of the guests courtesy on all occasions. In the vast majority of cases visitors that has been the attitude of Canadians. There however been some exceptions. But good food and accommodation, thoughtfulness for the guests all go to make our visiting cousins from "across the line" ambassadors wherever they go testifying to the hospitality of the dominion's inhabitants.

CLEAR VIEW OF HIGHWAYS

The view of those who travel the highways will not be spoiled by large signs, according to the Department of Highways.

Nature is to revel in her own rich heritage of rolling level land stretching far away into the distance, vistas which are soothing to the mind and the eye of the tourist and the drivers who use these main thoroughfares connecting the various parts of the Province. Ontario is a land of natural beauty and nothing is to be allowed to detract from the appeal of beauty the highways have for all who use their roads.

Modern highways are things of beauty. Their utility is a sense of course and the source of great developments in all parts of the province. Therefore the engineers with their long views stretching for miles to the horizon are the proof that modern science of engineering can create out of cement with the aid of machinery for building, such lovely long vistas of beauty which lead the eye on and on.

Those who have seen the change from the days of the macadam and mud roads to the permanent highway era know of the vast difference which has come about. Few kept engineers could have dreamed of the transformation which has been possible.

Now this beauty is not to be denied the motorist whether he be Canadian or tourist passing through the dominion: No one is to obscure these rich views.

This step by the Highways Department is worthy of commendation.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

A good many of us still remember Queen Victoria in the days when Victoria was reverenced as the Duke of Wellington; and the Duke Wellington—reflected an uncle of his who was born in 1896.

That is just three moves back to the chessboard of time; and 1896 was the first year that an American citizen was permitted to print and publish whatever he chose without consulting any authority in church or state.

This freedom of the press—meaning, of course, the printing press and not, as a good many of us imagine, the newspaper press—is quite a recent thing—us; Victoria; Wellington; and his uncle—though the Duke's press was fairly old for the time. Books were few and far between. Considerable numbers of our ancestors could read and write, though no doubtless moved their lips when reading, and got humbago from trying to write.

We feel very superior to them in this day and age, when everybody can read and write and two hundred thousand printing presses rain down a blizzard upon the countryside. The melancholy fact is that in proportion, we today are not one-half-farthing better than tenth as well informed as our three-times great-grandfathers and grandmothers who were being booted about the earth by their betters in the year 1800 ago!

What little there was to be known in 1896 twenty printing presses could handle. Today we read from 6 a.m. until midnight, steady, with only fifteen minutes for breakfast, lunch and supper, we could not know all that is being printed on one subject alone, say, electronics. In proportion, there has probably never been so ignorant a world in human history as right now.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Explains Duties Of Architect

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

The letter to the editor in your issue of May 2nd indicates a lack of understanding of the powers and functions of an architect.

An architect prepares plans and specifications which are used for the calling of tenders for a project. When tenders have been received, the owner of the project considers them, and frequently asks the opinion and advice of the architect before any contract is let. Then then consummated between the parties, namely, owner and contractor. The architect does not award the contract, and is not a signer of it.

In the awarding of the contract for the school on MacDonald Ave. the Board accepted the recommendation of the architect unanimously.

Impressions of Britain

WAGES

By RALPH CAMPBELL

Oxford, England, Special. —In considering the prices of food, and the rent of houses, fuel and other expenses, it is possible that one may receive a false impression unless one examines the income situation. After all, people are only materially better off if income increases faster than the cost of living. In this article we shall attempt to present a general and as realistic picture as possible of the size of the British wage. All figures are at the devaluated rate.

By Canadian standards, British wages are very low, but then the cost of living is much lower, too. The average wage-earner (as opposed to those who receive salaries or profits, and also excluding workers in agriculture, coal mining and railways) received about $16 per week in April, 1940, and while there may have been an increase since that time it is unlikely that it is very great. This does not appear very much to Canadians, but on a per capita quarter times as much as the average wage-earner in 1938. Now of course there has been a great increase in taxation and in fact of British life consisting these, he is still 15 per cent better off than he was in 1938.

In these calculations we must remember that there has been an increase in taxes and in accompanying exemptions as well as food subsidies, but even so the figures show that the married man with several dependents is somewhat better off than he was in 1938. The single man, however, pays a higher rate in proportion to his income and consequently may quite likely be no better off than in the year 1938. In fact, one would say that a comparison of the figures would show that the married man has improved his position relative to the single man and that he is improving it is absolute terms.

Women Better Off

Women have experienced greater improvement than men, but only in a total wage, but in wages adjusted for the increase in general cost of living. The weekly earnings of girls have increased since the three-quarters of what they were in 1938. Yet there are still a large number of girls who receive less than $5 per week. Women's average weekly earnings have increased relatively more, from 47 per cent in 1938 to 58 per cent in 1949. On the whole they have had a considerably greater increases in pay than men.

Now we have been talking of wage earnings or "take-home-pay," as opposed to wage-rates, which is the rate per hour, or day, or per article in piece-work. Wage rates statistics are to be treated with suspicion since there may have been considerable increase in the number of hours worked per week, or the type of piece work, or improvements into British paid categories. Take-home-pay is a safer measure and includes bonuses, overtime, up-grading within an industry (to better paid work) and changes in proportion of men and women. There have also been more impressive when one considers that they deal only with employed workers; if they had shown still greater increase in potential wage earners employed or not, the position in 1949 would have shown still greater improvement since unemployment was quite as small.

More Equal Returns

The trend in wages has been then, toward more equal returns between the sexes, and even between men and boys, with the proportion going to men showing a steady decline. This was to be expected during the war, when so many women and youths were attracted into war service but the interesting thing is that it has continued since 1945. Hours worked have diminished, in the case of men by about 1 hour since since 1938, standing at 46.6 for men; women work now 30 hours per week less than in 1938. This gives us a good general picture, but it does not include the effect of earnings in different industries. These will be considered and corrected for taxation and cost of living changes.

Coal-mining has shown a huge increase — average earnings in 1938 were about $20 per week, but in April 1949 these had climbed to about $40 per week. This is a most impressive change, and to anyone who has spent any time in the mining areas a most welcome improvement. We hope that it will continue and increase, but it seems that this movement in wage rates has gone on during the war and since, for the Miners' Coal Board has taken over the mines.

Wage increases in agriculture have been small, those of cattle and have risen by over two and one-half times since 1938. Textile workers have had the least increases. In the main, the greatest increases have been in those industries which were poorest paid before the war. The smallest increases have been in the better paid industries.

Meanwhile the cost-of-living index, based on a working class family, has increased less rapidly being about 78 per cent more in October than it was in 1938. But for wage-earners, at least the increase in earnings has exceeded the increase in taxation and in cost of living.

Wages Compared

It is interesting to compare the figures of wages in different countries for earnings and earnings adjusted by cost of living. These must be viewed with suspicion since there are different methods of arriving at the indices, especially of the cost of living, but nevertheless a comparison is helpful.

Based on hourly earnings in 1948 or 1949, and on an index of pre-war 100.

	Index of Pre-war	Adjusted for Cost of Living
Germany Bizone — all workers	190	54
Sweden	190	124
Switzerland	201	141
United States	222	133
Great Britain	231	133
France (daily earnings)	1810	100

We should realize that there is no consideration here of hours worked, unemployment, or taxation.

There may be many individual cases of wage earners who are well off and others who are poor, for the war, or who are at present spending the "lunch" of profits and taxation on an income which are not expanded as rapidly as others. But on the average the British wage earner seems to be better off than ever before.

We shall deal in our next article with the position of the profit receiving groups — where the situation is vastly different.

Editor's Note: Mr. Campbell is touring Britain in the course of studies this instalment concludes a series of "Impressions of Britain." It may be that he will find time during the holidays to do more on his fine articles on Britain.

MacKenzie's Column:

Soviet System Of Satellites, Will it Collapse?

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Foreign Analyst)

Paul G. Hofmann, Marshall Plan administrator, told a meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington this week that the Soviet system of satellites is going to "crack and crack quite suddenly" from ten to fifteen months within.

That's a daring prediction and the last I expected to find it recorded in some quarters. For example John M. Hightower, AP diplomatic expert in Washington, reports that little support is to be found in official circles in the capital for Hoffman's statement.

The first element is an important consideration—that is, the question of "WHEN" the upheaval might come. Hoffman takes cognizance of this when he says:

Tensions Growing

"The tensions are growing. Eleven years ago we had three countries to worry about—Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin. Two are gone, and I expect to live long enough to see the third one go."

Our only guidance in figuring this out is that Hoffman is 58 years old.

It is no secret that there is much dissatisfaction with Soviet rule in the satellites and that, as Hoffman says, tensions are building. It is no secret either that the satellites are being kept in hand by ever-firmer controls.

All the satellite peoples are literally under Moscow's heel. Independent. They have shown this by revolts against their overlords through the generations. The heavy regimentation of communism doesn't suit their lively natures. The Slavic people, including the Russians themselves, always have been that way.

Military Control

The spirit of revolt is there. But against this is the cold fact that the whole country is in the grip controlled by Red military forces and police. Hoffman, who perhaps has an unarmed populace to rise against them, even if it wants to! The answer is that only some fortuitous circumstances, which would enable his hand in the community. There is the Queen, who is the top official, and then there are the workers and the drones. The drones have a few task given over to them. And there are guards before the door of the community to see that no enemies enter.

It was amused at the fact that only one Queen can exist. All others are disposed of through natural causes, leaving the one supreme ruler. There is action all

ON DIABETES — FOR THOSE WHO MAY NOT HAVE IT

What I have to say here about diabetes is old stuff to those who have it—and know it. To those who do not know where they stand in the matter, and this might include you, the words which will follow might impel them to find out.

Diabetes is a disease in which the supply of insulin is insufficient to meet the bodily needs for the metabolism of carbohydrates. Now, just a minute! Don't be discouraged, I will try to explain it.

Insulin is a substance manufactured normally in the pancreas, which is a gland lying behind the stomach and which also produces certain digestive juices that pour into the intestine where they function in the process of digestion. Insulin is not poured into the bowel but is picked up in the blood by the circulating blood and transported to the various tissues of the body.

Insulin has the particular property of metabolizing—changing into energy—sugar, which is taken into or elaborated in the body. If sufficient insulin is not available, the sugar which would normally be converted into energy "piles up" in the blood and overflows into the urine. The retention of sugar in the blood and tissues leads to various disease processes which can not be described in detail here.

If the pancreas is totally removed from a human, diabetes commences abruptly. However, the loss of the pancreas rarely, which results, is often not as great as that which exists in severe case of diabetes, and a person deprived of his pancreas requires only from 20 to 40 units of insulin from diabetes.

Clinical observation shows that factors other than the simple lack of insulin are involved in the cause of diabetes. Many factors have been identified, in part, as being responsible for diabetes, the irregularities, of the pituitary and adrenal glands.

Diabetes, at present, is an incurable disease, but one which can be so regulated as to cause very little interference with general health and usefulness.

Diabetes may occur in childhood, but most cases develop in fifth or sixth decade of life.

The disease may exist for some time without producing noticeable symptoms. It is often discovered in persons who are enjoying apparently normal health.

The outstanding symptoms of the disease—when they develop —are excessive thirst, appetite and output of urine. Most diabetics are overweight. A strong hereditary factor is involved.

The diagnosis of the disease is established by the presence of sugar in the urine and excessive sugar in the blood. It is possible to have sugar in the urine and not have diabetes. An excess of sugar in the blood—while fasting—clinches the diagnosis.

Many cases of diabetes may be controlled by dietary regulation alone. Others require dietary regulation and the daily use of insulin. Exercise invariably decreases the amount of sugar in both the blood and urine. Many active persons do not require insulin. Strenuous exercise, however, requires them when they become sedentary.

Infection greatly increases the requirements for insulin. Insulin is not effective by mouth. It must be injected. Even children learn to inject themselves with very little difficulty or discomfort. The management of moderate case of diabetes imposes very little inconvenience or discomfort upon the patient.

Neglected or advanced diabetes may produce serious harm — upon the blood vessels and eyes, for instance—and death will be certain. These complications need not develop in the well-managed case. Everyone should know whether or not he or she has diabetes. A simple test of the urine is the first step.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

God Bless Us All

I am thankful, happy and grateful that your advice was so beneficial—although it took me months to get up courage to go to the doctor as you urged. It might have saved myself a lot of unnecessary pain. Nowadays the injections are painless. Anyway I am now freed from years of suffering from bronchitis and I say God bless you and Dr. ——. (Mrs. K. Strength for the Day

THE TRIPOD

John Wesley had three good words with which he ordered his life. They were these—believe, love and obey.

They are the legs of a tripod upon which life may stand secure. They represent the three fundamental aspects of life — right belief, right emotion, and purposeful action. We must have the right theory of life before we can live it in a satisfying fashion: what we believe constitutes our philosophy of life. Believe the right things, said Wesley, begin with the right theory, and you have at least started in the direction of right action.

The other's second word was 'love' and by this he meant the attitude of active good will toward everyone. He knew that the passions of hate and self-seeking are sinful and destroying, but the passion of love is healing and pregnant with happiness.

With the right theory of life and the right attitude toward others, one is ready for action, and this action Wesley comprised under the word 'obedience.' For him if God has given us the truth, then life consists in a searching out of that truth daily and obeying it.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BEES

I was invited to a friend's house to view a private showing of a moving picture on the life of bees. I have read a great deal about bees, but soon learned that I knew nothing about them. Now the picture of their community and working has been graphically placed in my mind. Nature has brought home to me anew as the greatest teacher that we have.

Call it instinct, intelligence or what you will, the fact remains that in the life of the bee is to be found a model for human life out of the life of a community of insects. The bees are workers, and each is assigned his task in the community. There is the Queen, who is the top official, and then there are the workers and the drones. To the drones have a few task given over to them. And there are guards before the door of the community to see that no enemies enter.

It was amused at the fact that only one Queen can exist. All others are disposed of through natural causes, leaving the one supreme ruler. There is action all the time. If catastrophe occurs, all pitch in to repair the damage, and in a most intelligent manner. These insects are among the great mechanics and the work at repair is carried on with skill. It's all for one and one for all.

Everything works out perfectly in the community of bees, all cells where the eggs are placed, and where the honey is stored. The very architecture of the home of these bees gives an amazing picture of exactness and strength. Every emergency is met. How exactly human beings, the great experts on bees should have been a little slow in discovering them in 1730, who in youth lost his eyesight, but who continued, nevertheless, to study bees, penetrate into the story of these industrious insects. He has become one of the most noted of all writers about bees. Moreover, he owed to his faithful second eyes, Francois Burnens.

In my library is one of the most famous of books on bees, the one by Maurice Maeterlinck. That I read years ago, and have almost forgotten. Some day I shall get it down and read it afresh. Few books, if any, are more interesting and inspiring than those that nature is our greatest teacher.

NATIONAL BLOOD TRANSFUSION SERVICE

Rate of growth of the Canadian Red Cross Society's free national Blood Transfusion Service is illustrated in this chart. Since the beginning of the service in 1947, the number of bottles of blood used by patients has increased more than five times. In 1949, voluntary donors contributed three and a half times as much blood as was collected in the first year. This Red Cross service is now established in whole or in part, in eight provinces.

Frequency standardization was completion of the amalgamation of the vast hydro organization started in 1944. Answering objection in some parts of the province to the "foisting" of a share of standardization costs on areas already having 60 cycle power, Mr. Saunders said that these areas had gained plenty as result of the amalgamation.

A Different Story

"But that is a different story," he admitted.

"The fact is that we are getting ahead with the job of bringing cheap power in abundance to the people of Ontario."

Within the past week Ontario hydro had reached a peak in making power available, this either from production or purchases. Last year 80,000 h.p. had been brought into production which had not been thought of in 1948.

"Yes," Mr. Saunders went on, "hydro has weathered the storm and is going ahead in the future to assure a reserve of power that will guard against either a sudden breakdown or lack of power.

Proud of Hydro

Mr. Saunders said he was proud of hydro; proud of the fact that he was living in a country with the highest standard of living in the world. Living standards could be gauged by the amount of electric power used per capita. In Ontario this was 3,600 k. w. h. per person per year. In Canada the figure was slightly over 3,400, while in the U. S. A. it was but 1,600.

Mr. E. G. Gurnett, regional manager of the East Central Region, with headquarters at Belleville, introduced Mr. Saunders, while Evan Barlow, member of Moira Lodge, expressed the appreciation of the Lodge.

During the meeting Mr Saunders was presented with two bronze keys to the city. One of these was presented by Mayor H. Jack Allin, and the other by Mr. Barlow as he expressed appreciation to the speaker.

99-DAY CHRYSLER

Union Claims Victory

U.A.W. president Walter Reuther viewed the settlement as a "victory over the blind selfishness of the Chrysler Corporation."

He added:

"The Chrysler strike was more than a fight for pension, hospital-medical and insurance benefits and an improved contract. The Chrysler strike was a part of a great human crusade to build a better tomorrow and a better world—a world in which we and our children can have a little more of the good things in life, a little more security and a little more happiness."

Herman L. Weckler, Chrysler vice-president and general manager issues a statement stating:

"The new contract is a good contract. It provides pension and insurance benefits that should be helpful to our employees in the emergencies of life that people are not always financially prepared to meet. And with the cooperation of our employees and the union, the contract should also make for smoother operations in our plants . . .

"As regards pension and other benefits that the individual employee gets under the new contract, he could have got substantially these at the conference table without losing a single day's pay."

In addition to pensions and hospital medical and insurance benefits, the union claimed these other gains:

Higher vacation pay for Chrysler workers with from three to five years service. (It is customary in the auto industry to take pay in lieu of vacations.) The increase is $31.10 a year.

Non-Economic Gains

The union also claimed these non-economic gains: A check-off of union dues. (It had asked a union shop agreement.) Strengthened grievance procedure. Improved seniority provisions.

The pension plan is backed by a trust fund, to be jointly administered. The company is not forced to pay any specified cents-an-hour amount into the fund, but is pledged to keep it actuarily (financially) sound.

The company offered the walkout to pay $100 monthly pensions, including federal social security benefits, but refused to set up a trust fund. It declared its "good faith and credit" were guarantees enough The union demanded a trust fund.

The pension differences were major causes of the strike.

The Chrysler pension plan is almost identical with one which recently went into effect at the Ford Motor Company, the only other major one in the auto industry. The union now is negotiating for $125 monthly pensions including federal social security, from General Motors, last of the industry's big three to get U.A.W. demands on pensions.

Sheffield Seeks Canadian Nurses

Sheffield, England, — (CP) — The fame of Canadian nurses has reached British ears.

Sheffield Regional Hospital board wants some here. It has asked the ministry of health to consider arranging for students from Canada to train as nurses in Britain.

In its reply, the ministry explained that the reason why a large number of British nurses go to the United States to train as nurses is the higher rewards available there.

The ministry said it thought it doubtful whether many students could be encouraged to train in the United Kingdom. However, the suggestion was being considered by the nursing division of the ministry of health and the Sheffield board would be informed of any further developments.

Another doll item coming up is one which changes facial expressions while at the same time. This idea Mr. Freeman, 28, picked up on a European jaunt this do practically everything now year.

About $400,000,000 was spent on toys in Canada and the United States last year, Mr. Freeman said. Most of it went on dolls.

T.B.C. Graduates Tell Of Mission Work

A most enjoyable time was spent Tuesday evening at the Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle when a group of graduates from the Toronto Bible College entertained the audience with some fine vocal selections in trios and mixed quartets.

The Rev. Robert Grey, pastor of the church, presided over the early portion of the meeting, turned it over to the Rev. D. E. Raymer, secretary of the College, and to the Rev. Harold James, of the South African General Mission.

Mr. Raymer gave a brief outline of the work as carried on at the Bible College, while Mr. James, who has recently returned from Northern Rhodesia, presented news of the work in the foreign field, telling of the power of the Gospel in individual lives.

Four of the graduates gave helpful testimonies which were of great encouragement to young Christians in their everyday life.

Following graduation, the Bible College Chorus recently thrilled some 8,000 at Varsity Arena with their fine singing. Since then, they have been visiting. In separate groups, some of the eastern cities comprising Belleville, Ottawa and Montreal.

A Bouquet for Mother

Daughter could give no better gift on Mother's Day than an invitation to sit down at her own table and enjoy a meal which she has entirely planned nor cooked. If daughter's enthusiasm is not equalled by her experience mother will not mind.

Cookery has become an exact science and it is comparatively easy to learn the rules and principles of cooking different foods, then follow them exactly in every detail. If daughter has been fortunate enough to study home economics in school she will have her own recipes but may need a few pointers on meal planning.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, suggest a menu for Mother's Day which can be easily served by the novice but would give mother a break even if she had to prepare it herself.

Mother's Day Dinner Menu

Fruit Juice Cocktail . . . .
Chicken Marengo
Asparagus Parsley Potatoes
Mixed Green Salad
Hot Rolls
Rhubarb Sundae
Tea Cookies Milk

The cocktail may come straight from the can or be a combination of several juices but must be well chilled. This may be served in the living room or at the table with an accompaniment of crisp crackers.

The meat course is always a problem for the beginner and usually takes the longest time to cook. "Chicken Marengo" requires two hours cooking but in that time the fowl is cut into the pot and comes out to be served as "chicken". It is easy to prepare and can't go wrong if the instructions are followed implicitly.

Asparagus is the vegetable for May. Parsley potatoes sound so much more elegant than plain boiled and a little butter and finely minced parsley will work the trick.

The green salad will be lettuce, fresh and crisp, with a favorite dressing.

Chicken Marengo

1 fowl (4 to 5 lb.)
¼ cup fat
½ lb. mushrooms
6 tablespoons flour
½ cup water
1 cup canned tomatoes
1 small clove garlic, minced
1 cup apple juice
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cut fowl into pieces and fry in hot fat until well browned, remove from pan. Fry mushrooms in fat left in pan until lightly browned, then remove. Add flour to fat, blending until flour browns. Add water gradually, stirring until thickened. Add canned tomatoes, minced garlic, mushrooms, apple juice, chopped parsley, and seasonings. Stir until well blended. Add fowl and simmer in sauce until tender, about 2 hours. Yields six to eight servings.

FOUR DIED FROM FUMES

WANTS AMBER LIGHTS

Barbara Ann Scott Launches Another Phase of Career.

Hollywood, May 4 — (AP) — Canada's pretty idol of the ice, Barbara Ann Scott, launched another phase of a career here tonight that closely parallels that of the once incomparable Sonja Henie.

The blue-eyed blonde from Ottawa, Olympic and world figure-skating champion until she turned professional last year, makes her debut as the featured soloist of "Ice Capades of 1950."

She has a month's engagement with the "Ice Capades" show and most likely it will provide the ornate showcase from which Barbara Ann will glide into a movie contract and a fortune — just as Sonja did 14 years ago.

Barbara Ann is luckier than Sonja. Her showcase is already built. All she has to do is step in and skate. She also has a new 'agent,' the powerful and influential Music Corporation of America.

Sonja, as old-timers recall, hit California virtually unknown to the important circles of Hollywood and built her own show from scratch. The important movie people came and Sonja scored a success.

Tonight Barbara Ann will have the important people in the audience. Is she nervous? She smiled. "No. I used to have butterflies in my stomach before competition, but this is different. Now I go out to please the people, not the judges."

Miss Scott looks shapelier and even prettier than Miss Henie, but probably isn't any more antagonistic to a professional career.

Remember two years ago she was quoted as saying: "Who turn pro? How could I do such a thing? Mother would just die..."

Mrs. Scott is here with Barbara Ann.

Anyhow, tonight Barbara Ann, 1948 Olympic queen, gets her chance to emulate Miss Henie, 1936 Olympic queen.

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

Maria Theresa knew all about the high price of coffee. So scarce were coffee beans in the 17th century that Maria counted the coffee she owned as part of her dowry when she married into the French royal family.

This historical fact will not provide much comfort to housewives today when they go to the market for several pounds of mocha.

If U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists have their way, you'll eventually be buying cheaper coffee again. By using techniques of U.S. fruit growers, a team of scientists in Guatemala hopes to boost production from one pound per tree to three to five pounds.

The fact that many people are drinking instant powdered coffee doesn't prove that this form of beverage is getting better. Instant coffee will never be as good as fresh until they learn how to capture an aroma in powdered form. But instant coffee is an obvious time saver and is especially useful in making coffee desserts as in the Coffee Sponge Cream recipe below.

Coffee Sponge Cream. Serves 6.

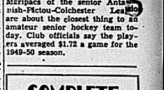
Place 1 tablespoon plain gelatin in 1-4 cup cold water to soften. Heat 1 cup of milk until bubbles appear around edge of saucepan. Add 1 tablespoon powdered instant coffee, stirring well.

Beat 2 egg yolks in the top part of a double boiler. Add 1-4 cup granulated sugar stirring well. Place top part of double boiler over simmering water. Add heated milk and 1-8 teaspoon salt. Beat with rotary beater until mixture begins to thicken slightly or coats the back of a spoon.

Remove from heat. Add gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Pour hot mixture into mixing bowl. Place in refrigerator until mixture begins to jell around edge of bowl.

Beat 2 egg whites until stiff and fold into mixture.

Beat 1 cup of heavy cream until thick. Add 1-2 teaspoon vanilla and 2 tablespoons granulated sugar. Set aside 1-4 of whipped cream. Fold balance of whipped cream into gelatin mixture. Turn into glass serving dishes. Place in ice tray in chill thoroughly and become stiff. When ready to serve, top with whipped cream and a half maraschino cherry.



BRAZEN COUGARS

Salmon Arm, B.C. — (CP) — Cougars are bold in this district. Glory Temple, big game guide, shot one in the kitchen of his cabin near here. The cougar had been chased into the cabin by a dog. The same night he shot another on a nearby hill.

ALMOST AMATEURS

Picton, M.S. — (CP) — Picton Meripacs of the senior Ontario-Picton-Colchester League are about the closest thing to an amateur senior hockey team today. Club officials say the players averaged $1.72 a game for the 1949-50 season.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His girl friend's mother is unreasonable

Dear Miss Fairfax:

There is a girl I like very much whose mother is very strict with her that I have a hard time seing her at all.

Saturday and Sunday are the only times I can take her out and her mother makes her come home at 10 or 10:30 Saturday evening. Then she has to go to church both Sunday morning and Sunday evening. If she doesn't her mother won't let her go out again for a week or so. This girl has a sister about 36 years old, and the mother treats her the same way, also other members of the family.

What can I do to get the mother to trust me and this girl so that the girl can stay out long enough on Saturday night to go to a show and have a bite afterward. I am afraid, though, that you are almost certainly up against a stone wall where this mother is concerned. If she has her family as completely under her thumb as you indicate, you are not going to be able to make much impression on her.

Sometimes miracles can be brought about, however, by a little diplomatic flattery of a mother such as this one. If you were to be quite attentive to her, for example, by bringing her candy or flowers once in a while, it might very well soften her heart towards you in time. Spend a few minutes talking with her when you come to get the girl to go out with you, and treat her as though you consider her an important person. It's worth trying.

In the meantime, stick to the letter of the law she has laid down and plan your dates to get back at the time she specifies.

Severe criticism from an Anonymous reader

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I see your column quite frequently, and I think I have never read one where less sympathetic understanding, interest or love for young people is shown. It seems that you delight in sarcasm and belittling their problems. To them, I am sure they are very real.

I agree with you in many of your ideas, but I am sure you hurt many already distressed young persons in your blunt, critical manner. There are better ways, I know, to direct young people into right paths and proper decisions.

I don't write out of inexperience in this field. For five years I have been Dean of Women and adviser of girls in a certain college. I am also the mother of three children.

I love young people and feel distressed to see them batted around, as in your column so often.

"One who understands"

Dear "One who understands":

I am sorry that you feel I am unsympathetic with young people and have no interest in or understanding of their problems. I don't think if you have read my column consistently, for I am sure if you had you would not feel this way.

I am certainly in accord with you when you say that young people's problems are very real to them. This holds true of anyone from babyhood up to old age. There are times, however, when people, and particularly teen-agers, make problems out of nothing, and also pretend to be baffled over situations in which right and wrong are perfectly obvious to them.

Wherever there is real trouble and honest bewilderment, I do not think you will find me lacking in sympathy or eagerness to help to the best of my ability. With phonies, however, I have no patience.

May I add that your letter would have impressed me more if you have given your name and specified the college where you claim to be Dean of Women? Most women holding a position of such responsibility would have sufficient courage of their convictions to refrain from hiding under a cloak of anonymity.

Rita to Polar Bear, Women in Headlines

London—(CP)—Dr. Edith Summerskill, who often hits the headlines herself, says that women make the news.

"Women can make or break a journalist," she told a Ladies' Night meeting of the London Press Club.

"After all, who made the news? —Rita Hayworth, Ingrid Bergman and now a woman greater than any other, Brumas."

Brumas is the four-month-old polar bear cub now drawing record attendances to Regent's Park Zoo.

Dr. Summerskill, appointed minister of national insurance in the recent government reconstruction, addressed the press club on one of its two annual guest nights.

"I have a horrid suspicion," she said, "that the women are invited on those two nights only to keep them sweet and reasonable for the other 363 nights."

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Inhale slowly and deeply through the nose.

Pleasing voice adds to charm

It's not just what you say, but how you say it. The world "hails" can be a cordial greeting or a rebuke, according to the tones that are used and the inflections.

It must be that many women are not aware of the fact that they have unpleasant voices, or there wouldn't be so many rasping, shrilling, or shouting ones. Women everywhere are endeavoring to be lovely to the eye, seeking charm. The female of the species spends billions every year for clothes, cosmetics, beauty treatments. But appearance is not the whole story. A woman must have a certain appeal. She can have it by cultivating a pleasant voice, using it properly enunciating words clearly. It is just something that the average woman seldom thinks about.

It is our opinion that loveliness should be heard as well as seen. Your family, your friends, the people you meet, all have ears as well as eyes and many of the smart ones can size up your character, to a certain extent, by the manner in which you speak. Consider the woman who whines. You know what she is—self-pitying, selfish, fancying that every hand is raised against her. You sidestep her whenever you can, because she is a depressing influence.

The woman who shouts—as if her listeners were deaf—hasn't any manners. She is not a cultured woman or she wouldn't do it. Then there are the mumblers who seem to chew their words, running them together. You must be forever asking them to say it again, which certainly does not make for delightful conversation. There are the one-key talkers. They drone on and on and on.

The unpleasant speaking voice can be improved immensely. There are specialists to whom one can go for help, if the voice does not qualify. With a little effort one can accomplish a great deal. Often the trouble is nothing more than slovenly speech, not making oneself clear, not timing words. An even commoner reason is using too much volume, pitching the voice too high. With a little thought and exercise, the voice can be made charming.

Teachers of voice culture say that the average woman talks in the back of her mouth or through her nose, producing hard, flat tones that lack resonance, have no musical qualities or emotional feeling. The tones should be vibrant, speech fluid and easy.

Deep breathing is recommended as a help. Stand at an open window; inhale slowly and deeply through the nostrils, counting ten while you do that. Exhale slowly through the lips. After ten deep breaths, say the vowels slowly and clearly.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

May Birthstone—Emerald. And here's the famous verse:
"Who first beholds the light of day
In Spring's sweet flowery month of May
And wears an Emerald all her life,
Shall be a loved and happy wife."
Her verbal thanks were not enough

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The plans for our marriage were made suddenly, because my fiance's company transferred his business-location. Therefore we had an informal wedding, telephoning the invitations to relatives and friends. The time was so short that quite a few of the guests brought their wedding gifts to the reception, which was at my home, [illegible] the gifts when the givers presented them, and expressed my thanks and appreciation. Now my sister has written me that she heard that most of these people are criticizing me for not having written thank-you notes. Do you think that I should have written (or even should write) thank-you notes when I have said my thanks at the reception?

W. T.

Yes, I do think you should have written a thank-you note, a warm, enthusiastic note of appreciation, to each giver. Your relatives and friends were particularly kind and thoughtful in their plans for your happiness, since they had to plan and buy their gifts at very short notice, had to bring them instead of more conveniently sending them. All [illegible] receiving a note is enough time to really express adequate appreciation. You have had a wonderful opportunity to show your relatives and friends "back home" that you are an appreciative person . . . but it's not too late even now! So sit thee down and write each kind donor a really warm and articulate note. . . thanking for the sweet thought, for the gift itself; comment on certain features of the gift (charming color, or handsome design or other features, and as many now be even more possible than at the reception, your plans for using it or placing it in your new home. (And express your husband's thanks too!)

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My father died two years ago. I am to be married in our church soon, and I want so very much to have my mother give me away. . . you suggested that this is correct, in your column of several days ago, and that gave me the idea. But mother is quite timid, particularly alone my dear father's passing, and she insists she "would feel too embarrassed before all those people" to go forward and make her response of "I do". I am doing my best to assure her that it will take only a little, but I still haven't persuaded her. Have you any suggestion that might help us, Mrs. Beeckman? (My father's brother, who has been unbelievably good to mother and me, and who is my godfather, is going to escort me up the aisle.)

Mary Louise M.

Yes, I have a suggestion. Just the right one, I think, because it will mean that your mother won't have to leave her place. During the ceremony, she will be standing, in her place in the first pew on the left of the aisle, and at the proper time in the ceremony, will reply "I do" in answer to the minister's question, "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" Also, after your uncle has escorted you up the aisle, he will take his place at the end of the first pew with her, and so she will have the comforting reassurance of his loyal and devoted presence. I hope she will decide that this procedure will make this loving privilege and duty entirely simple and easy for her.

Schoolboy Designs Child-Size Dresses

London, —(CP)—Leslie Gordon London schoolboy, spends his leisure designing, cutting and sewing child-size women's evening dresses.

Leslie's dresses are so well designed and finished they have impressed some of London's wholesale fashion houses. They occasionally give him odd bits of material.

Most of Leslie's pocket money goes on materials and trimmings that he wants for special effects. His workbench is a corner of his father's tailoring shop and here he tiny dummies he sews, sequins and embroiders.

"I've always loved the beautiful dresses in the shops" says Leslie, "and I wanted to try to make some. My brother taught me to sew and I made my drawings but did not have any materials.

"So I went to a wholesale house and asked for any bits they had left over. They laughed at me at first, but now they are always very interested to see my finished models.

"At school my headmaster has helped to get my admission to a technical school where I shall study dress-designing and the practical side."

Gay British Socks Make Hit Overseas

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London—(CP)—A new line in British socks is making a hit in export markets.

They are decorated with birds, flowers, coats-of-arms and family crests. There are golfers' socks, angler's socks with fish designs socks with school crests and any other pattern requested. Price is high—£4 10s. ($13.95)—but they are selling like hot-cakes.

The socks are plain at foot and top with intermediate panel of colored striping supporting such patterns as the Scottish Thistle.

Forty-two-year-old John Carr Doughty is the man behind this idea. He invented attachments to hand-driven knitting machines to carry any pattern desired.

Girls are taught to operate the machines and then work in their own homes. Mostly they are women with children who can't work in factories. They make around £1 ($3.10) a day.

2,000 Employees

Doughty now is employing more than 2,000 women but says:

"A year ago I employed only a few hands making specialized knit-wear such as mittens for R.A.F. rear gunners—nothing for export. Some trade slackened. I decided to try the United States market.

Doughty took a long trip up the Amazon river photographing birds and flowers and butterflies to be incorporated in his sock designs in their exact colors.

His plan was successful. The first sample socks to reach New York met with instant acclaim and orders poured in for a wide variety of styles.

"One Chicago department store ordered some with the firm's trade mark on at the heel, then to all their male shop assistants to wear on duty," said Doughty.

BRIDGE ST. EVENING AUX.

About 60 members enjoyed supper, served by Mrs. Don Williams' group.

After supper, the president, Mrs. Arthur Clare, called the meeting to order and conducted the business.

Reports showed that good progress on the year's work was being made.

An invitation to a meeting at Holloway Street United Church on June 6, was read and discussed. Some members signified their intention of attending this meeting.

It was decided to send some supplies for use in a summer school at one of the mission charges.

Miss Kay McPherson and Miss Frances Sullivan, with their committees, had charge of the program. They are "Ye are not your own."

Home Missions

Chapter V of the study book was summarized through a playlet which set forth the work done by some of the home mission workers. It also emphasized the responsibility for making the social order Christian.

Chapter VI was given as a questionnaire, bringing out the great need for workers giving full time service in the churches, Indian schools, hospitals and colleges.

The question was asked, "What constitutes a call to this work?" John R. Mott's definition was given "A need known and the ability to do that work constitutes a call". Often parents, who are too ambitious for money and social position, are more to blame than the young people themselves in holding back workers from full time Christian service.

Little Shop Idea Becomes Craze of Paris Fashion

By DOROTHY WADDINGTON

Paris. — (Reuters) — "Boutique"—little shops selling all manner of fashion accessories—are the latest craze among France's leading fashion houses.

Once the word "boutique" simply meant a shop.

Today it spells a fashionable wonderland.

Shaped like a flower vendor's cart or designed to represent anything from a huge bird cage to an exact reproduction of an old garret, a boutique has become the dream of every important fashion house.

The more original the idea upon which it is based, the better.

The first boutique was opened by Madame Schiaparelli just before the war, on the ground floor of her show rooms on the Place Vendome.

The idea then was taken up by Robert Piguet who launched "Chariot"—a gilded flower vendor's cart, filled with all the accessories worn in his collection, which was pushed through the salons.

The "little shop" plan has come to stay.

At first, the boutiques served simply to sell the dressmaker's perfumes and to allow the client to buy accessories the designers recommended for her costumes.

Since the war, with prices for models soaring, these boutiques have permitted the dressmakers to design simpler clothes which require only a single fitting. The prices correspond, and here one may buy a dress bearing the label of a famous fashion house for 20,000 francs (about $60) and up.

Now, boutique presentations take place each morning with all the fanfare of the major collections. The group of clothes shown is generally limited to about 40 instead of the some 180 garments shown at the major collections.

Christian Dior continues to ask the top prices for his boutique clothes. A simple cotton dress is priced at 45,000 francs while a suit or coat will cost between 70,000 and 80,000 francs.

In his boutique clothes, he repeats the theme of his big collection with simplicity as the key note.

So successful has the French boutique been that United States department stores are now attempting to copy the idea, with boutiques modelled directly on those of their French cousins.

MOVE TO BANISH

Resuming the second day of debate on communism, Mr. MacDonnell said the opposition did not propose "to make thought a crime." The amendment proposed would guard against overt acts and would "make it easier for labour to deal with its own situation."

Many men claimed the democracies must show their economic organization was better than that of the communist world. But it was not needy people who turned communist. It was persons with "dominating personalities" persons with a "strange aberration."

The opposition's amendment merely suggested that the law be improved to the end that all agencies, including labor and business, that are seeking to deal with the matter, may be further assisted, Mr. MacDonnell said.

Viewed With Misgiving

Mr. Coldwell said he viewed Mr. Drew's motion with "considerable misgiving". He was afraid that it might be used "either now or in the future to prevent free discussion, free consideration and activities that should be of a quite legal nature."

The necessary laws were on the statute books. He believed it would but "endanger the usefulness of those laws when we drive underground the activities of subversive elements, whether they be communist or fascist."

Mr. Drew had suggested limiting certain parts of the press. But Mr. Coldwell believed "our democratic institutions and our democratic ways are sufficiently strong that we do not need to fear a handful of people who are circulating literature against our institutions."

Fading Greatest Danger

If civil liberties were to be protected "and if we are going to place before the people or other countries, those as a free nation, then let us not adopt any of the methods of the iron curtain countries."

The Garson said political freedom is facing its greatest danger. The democratic countries were facing communism a philosophy whose purpose was to destroy the democratic way of life.

To abridge political freedom would be abandoning one of the democracies most powerful weapons against communism.

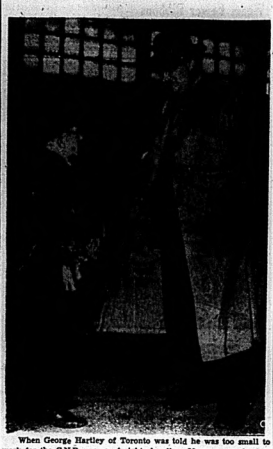
But the opposition's motion, if drafted "could not be an amendment to the law as it stands at the present time because everything that the amendment is designed to cover is in the law now."

The present law covered unlawful assembly, treason and sedition where overt acts could be proved.

In cases where overt acts could not be proved, "the mere creation of a new offence of communist activity, or similar activities, will not overcome the need of evidence to establish those overt acts. For whether an overt act we have no evidence of wrong ideas or of communist activity or similar activities."

Brings Drew to Feet

Mr. Garson said that in criticizing the justice department for lack of action against foreign language newspapers in Toronto, Mr. Drew was taking a "position rather embarrassing to himself". The papers were publishing the same sort of matter when Mr. Drew was premier of Ontario.



Mr. Drew jumped to his feet to say the federal justice department had charge of the R.C.M.P. which in turn had the necessary translation facilities.

Mr. Garson said that Mr. Drew should know it is the provincial attorneys-general who have administration of justice in the provinces.

Mr. Drew said the minister had authority to act in every case where he knew the criminal code had been violated.

Mr. Garson replied that Mr. Drew was "quite wrong". Federal action only was taken on the authority and with the approval of provincial attorneys-general.

TOO SMALL?

When George Hartley of Toronto was told he was too small to work for the C.N.R. as a freight handler 30 years ago, he just wouldn't take no for an answer. His insistence that he could handle as much as any man won him the job. Tuesday the 4-foot 8-inch Hartley met 6-foot 3¼-inch Donald Gordon, C.N.R. president. They are shown above as Mr. Hartley tells how he got his job in 1919. — (CP Photo.)

Nine Teachers Resign Over Salary Terms

Gananoque, May 4 — (CP) — Nine of 11 teachers at Gananoque high school have submitted resignations in disagreement with proposed salary schedules, R. G. Kelly, chairman of the management committee said Wednesday.

The teachers had asked for $200 yearly increase until the maximum level was reached. They are backed by the Ontario Secondary Teacher's Federation, which advised them to look for other positions.

The entire 11-member staff previously had rejected a proposed schedule calling for $200 yearly increases until a salary of $2,700 was reached with $100 annual increases to the maximum after that.

The resignations have not yet been considered by the local board. Gananoque is some 15 miles east of Kingston.

Swindlers Part Dupes And Money in W. Germany

By CLEMENS METZNER

Frankfurt, (Reuters) — Swindlers are riding the gravy train in West Germany's economic recovery. The public here is hearing the warning: "It is your money they are after."

Police officials say that many former black marketeers have turned to new rackets after having lost their "jobs" owing to the now abundant supplies of food, tobacco and coffee, which they once almost monopolized. Now, the lure is the deutschemark.

Many of the swindlers operate as counts, princes and barons. The archives of German nobility at Wrisbergholzen, in the British zone, unmasks about 150 of them every week.

Among them have been found the chief of the city's criminal police, two former S. S. officers (remember of Hitler's blackguards) and another man who as "Prince Karl Von Hannover and Braunschweig" claimed to be a cousin of the King of England.

One of these, with a variety of aristocratic names, got not only money from sympathizers but also the names and addresses of friends of theirs in other towns from whom he could expect support.

When sentenced at Augsburg in Bavaria, recently to six years' imprisonment he boasted that he had collected 200,000 deutsche marks (over $44,800).

An ex-officer of the S.S. of Dresden, sent to the Rhineland under an assumed Jewish name and became a prosperous merchant there. He was even a member of the synagogue board before suspicions were aroused and he disappeared.

Frankfurt police estimate that a hundred bogus medical practitioners have been caught in the past 12 months.

One, who was really an office clerk, was among 50 applicants for the job of chief of the Baden Baden hospital. He got it, and performed hundreds of operations before other members of the staff began to be suspicious. Now, he is serving eight years' imprisonment for having caused physical harm to 225 patients.

Marriage swindlers regard West Germany as a happy hunting ground, largely because there are so many "surplus" women. The police believe that light their victims keep silent—because they are afraid of looking ridiculous.

Phoney emigration agencies have collected hundreds of thousands of deutschemarks from Germans who would like to start a new life abroad.

A former circus voice imitator invited wealthy ex-Nazis, properly denazified to a private meeting of the fuehrer." It was reported to have realized 70,000 marks before the British military police broke up the meeting.

Orchestra Leader Thinks Canadian Tops on Trumpet

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York — (CP) — Maynard Ferguson, Montreal trumpet player, is going with orchestra leader Stan Kenton.

Kenton paused long enough during a busy two-night appearance here to hail the Montrealer as a "sterling asset" to his 40-piece jazz band.

"He's the most talked-about trumpet player in the country today, I guess," said the orchestra leader in an interview sandwiched between lunch and a recording session at a radio station. "We're really happy about him. He's wonderful."

"He's planning to set up his own orchestra when our tour ends in another four months."

Ferguson, regarded by many as Canada's top trumpeter, had his own band in Canada before he joined Kenton a few months back.

The Stan Kenton orchestra was here for two jazz concerts in Carnegie Hall. The appearance was part of a comeback tour which started in California on Jan. 31. The cross-country swing already has taken the band to Montreal, Quebec, Niagara Falls, Ont. and London, Ont., for one-night stands. Then, winds up a few months Canadian dates, the tall, good-looking conductor said.

Kenton, nattily dressed in a grey suit with striped tie, was asked why he quit the field 14 months ago.

"Band leading is a rugged business," he said. "It got so I just had to whip myself to go on a stage and conduct. There were a lot of bands then and we were all billed alike; there was too much competition in the field."

Why the comeback?

"I figured it was possible to do what I wanted to do, put the emphasis on concert music," he said earnestly.

"Jazz is a music that has developed and become too complex to play in any sort of tin pan alley manner now.

"There are lots of easier ways of making a living than conducting a band but I love it and that's what I want to do."

Kenton launched enthusiastically into the subject of jazz.

"I believe greatly in contemporary music," said the orchestra leader, who plays piano and composes as well. "Ten characteristics of jazz has constantly grown — — — has developed to a point where it is not even a part of popular music any more.

"I think what will evolve out of it will eventually be known as American classical music."

Another former Canadian, Chico Alvarez, also plays trumpet in the Kenton orchestra. "I think he comes from Quebec but he has lived in the United States for some time," Kenton said.

Viscount Alexander Wears Fewer Ribbons

London, —(CP)—Field Marshall Viscount Alexander, on a visit to London, intrigued decoration-minded Britons by appearing in uniform wearing only half as many service ribbons as he is entitled to.

When Lord Alexander first sailed for Canada in 1946 to become governor-general, he wore 34 decorations, arranged in 10 rows, in London for a short visit, the field marshall recently was photographed wearing only 17 ribbons stacked in four rows.

"What Lord Alexander has done is to drop his foreign decorations," commented the Daily Telegraph. "Characteristically, he prefers five years after the war, on the rare occasions when he wears uniform, to reduce the display to modest dimensions."

Around the Home...

TOM GARD'S NOTE BOOK

Our new neighbours moved in yesterday, and we had fun watching them start immediately to fix up the interior to suit themselves. With the house shortage being what it is, I didn't think it would take long to find a tenant. I have met the man of the house, "Red" Breaux, but not his good wife—he was too busy! The two robins must have liked the shelter I put up for them in the early spring as they have decided to stay.

Most of our feathered songsters will be returning soon and looking for a nesting place. Help ease their housing problem by building one or two of the houses illustrated. Weathered wood without paint is a satisfactory building material. It's wise to stay fairly close to the dimensions as given in the booklet "Around the Home".

Does your doorway extend a welcome? It's a most important feature of the home that can be made very attractive by an arrangement of flowering shrubs for summer, ornamental evergreens for winter effect, and climbers. Perennial plants are best for the man who owns his property, annuals for the one who rents.

Rock Gardens

I spent two enjoyable hours in The Royal Botanical Garden last week admiring its beauty, listing some of the plants that are in bloom even at this early date, and getting some ideas for rock gardens. When asked what can be done with a sloping bank my usual suggestion is to build a rock garden. When carefully planned and executed, it's a decided asset to your property. You'll find directions and a list of plants that can be used in the booklet "Around the Home".

Further Planning Of Welfare Type Can be Expected

Toronto, May 4 (CP)— Perry Bower, president of the Dominion Mortgage and Investments Association, said today Canadians can expect further planning of a "welfare type." He said it probably will be accompanied "in spite of it" by a rising standard of living.

In a speech prepared for delivery at the association's annual meeting, Mr. Bower listed these "important economic and political changes."

1. Self-employed business men have become a much smaller percentage of the total working population than they were before confederation.

2. As a community, Canada has become less willing to accept "free market prices for our commodities" and is demanding expansion of controls.

3. Government, through progressive income-tax and increased welfare payments, is controlling more income distribution.

4. Government is competing more and more with private industry through its various boards and corporations.

These four "instruments for the redistribution of income" had developed largely with the shift in political power, he said.

The Canadian Manufacturers Association and the Chamber of Commerce, for instance, now "have less influence in Ottawa and the provincial capitals" than have the wheels of pools and the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Dockers Refuse To Work Vessel Due to Rats

Barry, Wales, May 4 — (CP) — Rats popped out from all over when hatches were opened aboard the Finnish sailing ship Pamir.

The vessel arrived in the neighboring port of Penarth last September with a cargo of bagged barley from Australia.

As each sack of grain was moved, rats jumped out. Dockers refused to work the vessel.

Experts found the rats to be of a British variety. Infesting the colony started in port while the vessel served as a floating warehouse for the Ministry of Food.

Living amid an abundance of barley, the rats reproduced themselves by the thousand.

Trenton—(Special) — Flying glass has not as yet made their appearance in Trenton district but they expect further plantings of flying glass has. A resident of Heber St. notified police that her yard was covered with pieces of glass dropped by a passing plane.

Upon investigation police found small large pieces of glass not only covered her lawn but were found as far as Herman St.

Police also found two pieces of metal believed to have been dropped by the plane. These were turned over to the service police at the Main Station, R.C.A.F.

The Trenton branch of the Canadian Legion has announced that their weekly dances will be continued starting in two weeks. In order to hold these dances the bar at the Legion will have to be closed.

More Foreign Investments

Ottawa—(CP)—The idea that Canada join Britain as a partner in the development of her colonial empire brought forth the statement from Canadian economic experts today that Canada is continually trying to increase her investments abroad.

However, the experts questioned the practical side of the suggestion by Sir Hartley Shawcross, president of the British Board of Trade, that Canada accept part payment for her exports in the United States dollar pool and invest the sterling in such British territories as the British West Indies.

One expert said that if the idea of the British Cabinet minister for Preston North was for the Canadian government to accept such sterling and do the investing, then Hyswold constituting nothing more than another loan to Britain. Canada was not prepared to make another loan.

However, if Mr. Amery's suggestion was for Canadian business men to do the investing on a voluntary basis, then it appears to be not in line with the trend already adopted in Canada—to find means of increasing foreign investments abroad.

Some significance on the part of Canadian to invest in Britain's colonial empire was shown because of the uncertainty of the future of the investment and the emphasis on the rate of return, the source said.

Dr. Maurice H. L. Pryce, 37, will succeed chief of the Theoretical physics division at Harwell, the Ministry of Supply's atom city.

Fuchs, German-born but naturalized, was sentenced to 14 years in prison March 1 for betraying secrets to Russia.

Dr. Pryce, a professor of physics at the University of Oxford, has been acting as a consultant at Harwell. In 1944-45 he worked on atomic energy research with Canada's National Research Council.

Spring Seeding In West Ontario Becomes General

London, Ont., May 4 — (CP) — Postponed by continued rain, spring seeding in Western Ontario progresses generally throughout Western Ontario.

If the fine weather keeps up it will be in full swing by the weekend, predicted one agricultural observer. Further rainfall will put it off again.

Earlier this week Dr. G. P. McRostie, head of the field husbandry department at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, said that only three times in the past 50 years has seeding been delayed past May 1.

Denies Illiterate Man Gets Licence To Drive Taxicab

Kitchener, May 4 — (CP) — Police chief John Patrick has denied a Toronto report that an illiterate Kitchener man was given a licence to drive a taxi cab.

Chief Patrick said in an interview Wednesday that the man concerned was not a "truck-driver, not a taxi-driver and no licence purposes—did not come under police regulations at all.

He was commenting on a statement by Ivor Brake, manager of Associations, who told a "serious loophole" in the method of issuing drivers' licences in the province.

Mr. Brake said an illiterate Kitchener man was given a cab licence although he could neither read nor write and could not recognize the words on highway signs.

Chief Patrick said a close check of police licence records and taxi companies failed to turn up anyone who was illiterate.

Officials here said the man mentioned by Mr. Brake was detected a year ago when he applied for insurance and could not fill out the forms. Police said they don't know where the man is now but that he probably isn't driving a cab in Kitchener.

Toronto, May 4 — (CP) — A cookie killed one-year-old Garry Allison Wednesday night. The baby choked on the cookie, given to him by his mother, and was dead by the time his father took him to a doctor's office.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Feelin' Like Top

The liver should pour out about 2 pints of bile juice into your digestive tract every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the digestive tract. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those bile-making organs Carter's Little Liver Pills to get them 2 pints of bile flowing freely. Then you feel "up and at 'em." Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Effective in making bile flow. Be sure you get Carter's Little Liver Pills. Fit at any druggists.

Quebec's Senior Blacksmith Says Job Hard Way to Earn Living

By BERNARD DUFRESNE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, May 4 (CP)— After 56 years in the trade, Quebec City's senior blacksmith says if he was young again he'd try something else for a living.

At 61, grey-haired Theodore Savard can still shoe a horse in record time but he thinks it's too hard a way to earn a living.

Savard says the horse-shoeing trade, once profitable in Quebec is almost extinct because of the automobile.

When he was a 15-year-old apprentice, Quebec had a population of 75,000 and the city's 30-odd blacksmith shops were jammed with business. Now with the population almost tripled, there are only eight shops going, and shoeing horses is just a sideline for them.

Savard keeps relatively busy with welding and wrought-iron jobs for neighbors in downtown St. Sauveur district where he has operated his shop in Bolseau Street for 40 years.

To show how good his business was in his younger days, Savard recalls that one day he and another smith shod 65 horses.

"I felt beginn the next day," says Savard, "but what do you think happened? We had 35 horses, and 30 more the third day. My muscles ached for two weeks after that."

But his trade, dying out or not, has left Savard with some good memories. Twenty-five years ago it was sporting to own a pacer and race it against other fast horses over Quebec's winter roads.

One winter Sunday afternoon Savard matched a pacer he owned against a rival's for $100 in a best-of-five series of heats on a one-mile course.

Savard won the first heat, but lost the second when his horse broke a shoe. The blacksmith did a quick shoeing job on his racer between heats and won the next two.

The following Sunday, Savard again ran his pacer against the same horse for $200 and won the money.

Former German Guard Repaid for Kindness

Auckland, N.Z. — (CP) — Helmut Hippe has been rewarded for his kind treatment he gave 21 prisoners of war he guarded in Saxony factory during the war.

Then a corporal in the German army, Hippe risked punishment when his superiors by smuggling extra rations to the prisoners and doing other things to make life easier for them.

One of the prisoners, Private Eric Dewe of South Canterbury, New Zealand, did not forget Hippe's kindness. He wrote to Hippe, offering to pay his fare to New Zealand and give him a job.

Hippe, who with a wife and young son had been eking out a bare existence as a draper's salesman in post war Berlin, jumped at the chance.

After a four-year battle of forms Hippe and his son recently arrived here.

Frau Hippe died before permission was granted for the family to come, but the father and son are intent on settling down as New Zealand citizens and forgetting the past.

SAYS LATTIMORE DEFENDED RUSSIA

being urged by the United States Commerce Department to bring strong pressure on western European leaders to tighten their controls on trade with eastern Europe.

He will see these leaders at London next week.

Commerce officials are reported to be concerned at what they consider discriminations against American business, "arising out of differences in the controls system operated by the western European countries and the United States.

East-west trade policies are expected to be among the subjects discussed by Acheson with Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain, Foreign Minister Schuman of France and other foreign ministers whom he will meet in London.

A memorandum from commerce to the State Department, it was reported today, advocates that Acheson take a strong line with the other conferees.

Disagrees Sharply

Acheson is understood to disagree sharply with this recommendation on several grounds: (1) that drastic measures would harm the main objective of American policy which is western European recovery; (2) that east-west trade is necessary to western European recovery; (3) that the State Department is constantly obtaining greater co-operation from the European governments on trade controls and heavy pressures are unnecessary.

For control purposes, two chief types of goods are involved in trade between Soviet-bloc countries and the west. They are embargoed goods like guns and heavy machine tools; and controlled goods such as automobiles and tractors which might have military uses. The disagreement arises in connection with the second category.

Some European countries other do not list for control the goods which are on the U.S. Commerce Department list—or else they list them but grant licences liberally. Some countries therefore in effect give their exporters an advantage which American exporters do not possess in shipping eastern Europe machinery, vehicles and manufactured goods generally.

FEES REDUCED

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—A reduction in fees for owners of thoroughbred race horses was announced today by the Ontario Racing Commission. Starter fee is $5 instead of $25.

Magistrate S. T. Bigelow, Commission chairman, said no fee is necessary for owners or drivers of standard-bred horses for trotting races.

Committee Seeks Key to Master Wire Network

Washington, May 4 — (AP) — Senate gambling investigators today sought from two witnesses — described as henchmen of a slain Kansas City gangster—the key to a master wire network carrying race news to bookmakers in the United States.

A Senate Crime sub-committee called in Tano Lonoco and Eddie (Spitz) Osaghey, identified by a federal grand jury as partners of the late mobster Charles Gargotta.

After the Commerce sub-committee winds up its hearings, a special five-man Senate Committee will open an over-all investigation into organized gambling and crime syndicate operations.

The Senate Wednesday approved the special inquiry on a showdown vote of 36 to 35—with Republicans leading the fight to place the investigation in the hands of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Directs Crime Hunt

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem. Tenn.) is scheduled to direct the crime hunt. He said he hopes to get a staff organized quickly to start investigations by May 15th.

This investigation will be entirely separate from the Commerce sub-committee's present study of proposed legislation to bar the interest of gamblers in information across state lines.

Senator Wherry (R.—Maryland (Dem. Ariz.), chairman of the sub-committee, said he had subpoenaed Lonolo and Osaghey to get the "full story" of the operations of the Continental News Service in Kansas City.

A Federal Grand Jury report on the record of Gargotta and political leader Charles Binaggio in operating Standard News as the source of racing news flowing over the facilities of bookies in Kansas City, alleged centre of $30,000,000-a-year bookie business.

The Senate sub-committee has traced the flow of racing news throughout the U. S. to many distributing points. But it hasn't been able to bridge the gap between distributor and book'e—or to find the source of racing news flowing over the so-called mystery network.

Prexy, Faculty On Auction Block To Move College

Baltimore, May 4 — (AP)— The tall man, immaculate in conservative blues and highly-polished shoes, stepped forward unexpectedly in front of the stage as his name was called.

"All right, girls, here's your chance," boomed the auctioneer's voice.

Look him over carefully. He might be put to scrubbing floors . . . but he looks more like the house mother type to me. What am I bid?"

The spry man on the block was the president of a top-ranking women's college in the United States — Dr. Otto F. Krauss, head of Goucher College. This morning he and his faculty stepped up before the student body to be sold for anything they would bring — their services, that is.

It's all for the Goucher College fund. It takes money to transplant a college 19 miles. And that's what they're doing with Goucher — moving from busy Baltimore to new buildings being erected just outside suburban Towson.

The auction idea came from the girls. They're trying to raise $2,500 for their contribution.

Follows Doctor's Instructions

San Francisco, May 4 — (AP) — The next time his wife is expecting, Police clerk John Gerald Kenny will install an upstairs phone—just in case.

The 29-year-old officer, roused from his sleep Wednesday, rushed downstairs to telephone Dr. William D. Clark:

"The baby's coming right now, Doc. What do I do?"

The doctor gave step-by-step instructions. Kenney rushed upstairs to carry out each step, then down again for more instructions.

After several trips up and down, he finally panted into the phone, "it's a girl."

LIVES AFTER FIRING BULLET POINT BLANK INTO HEAD

It was a million to one chance, but Mrs. Loraine Workman, 27, of Los Angeles, is alive today after firing a bullet point blank into her head. The bullet did not penetrate her brain. Instead it followed the course of her skull beneath her scalp from the right temple, lodging near the left. Above, Dr. A. D. Trotter, who attended Mrs. Workman, said "in 25 years, I have never seen anything like this." Mrs. Workman has been brooding since her husband left her a week ago. Physicians said they expect her to survive. — Central Press Canadian.

New Approach Among Powers Is Foreseen

Moscow, May 4 (Reuters) —A new approach among the great powers to the problem of peaceful co-existence in an atomic world was foreseen by foreign observers today as a possible outcome to United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie's visit to Moscow May 10.

Official Soviet reaction to Lie's Paris announcement Wednesday of his visit was still awaited early today. But foreign observers thought the United Nations chief would get a warm welcome here.

Lie said in Paris that he hoped to see Prime Minister Stalin about "a new and great effort" to end the cold war.

It was not immediately known here whether such an interview would materialize but foreign observers thought Stalin's known interest in the United Nations might well open the way for it.

These points were noted by the observers.

1. The Soviet Press commented favorably on Lie's recent proposal to end the United Nations deadlock over Chinese representation by holding a special Security Council meeting.

2. Emphasis has been reiterated here recently on the Lenin-Stalin thesis of the possibility of prolonged peaceful co-existence of the Socialist and Capitalist systems as a fundamental Soviet foreign policy.

Three Persons Facing Trial For Perjury

Montreal, May 4 (CP)— Three persons from Green Valley, Ont., today faced trial for perjury arising from their testimony at a coroner's inquest into a fatal auto accident at St. Telesphore, Que., four months ago.

John J. McKinnon, whose 21-year-old sister Claire was killed when his car crashed into a telephone pole last January was ordered for trial at preliminary hearing Wednesday. Also committed on the perjury charge was Pauline Lajoie, 25, and her sister Rose, 30, passengers in the car.

All three swore at the inquest last Feb. 15 that they had not stopped between Lancaster, Ont., and St. Telesphore the day of the accident.

In court Wednesday Mrs. Fernand Lemieux, owner of a hotel at St. Telesphore, said the three were members of a party who ordered beers and soft drinks at the hotel that day.

PROJECTIONIST SAVES 300

Cincinnati, May 4—(AP)—William A. Lynn, 35, projectionist at the Royal Theatre, was credited Wednesday with saving 300 persons from deadly fumes when motion picture film caught fire in his booth. He braved fire and nitrous fumes to close booth shutters, slam a fire door and throw an exhaust switch before fleeing.

Winnipeg Still To Feel Brunt Of River Flood

Winnipeg, May 4 — (CP) — The Red River gained ground over a 45-mile stretch of Southern Manitoba today but elsewhere it lolled like a spent fighter — sinister, but no longer deadly.

The flood level continued to rise from Ste. Agathe, 24 miles north to Winnipeg, South of Ste. Agathe it receded sluggishly, slipping from the stricken lands as quietly as it had crept.

The main fight south of Winnipeg was on the rail lines. Canadian National Railways service was still suspended to Emerson, once the focal point of the flood on the international border. Officials cancelled all but work trains as the crews fought weight down threatened tracks.

From St. Jean Baptiste north to Swaines, ballast and sandbags were dumped to hold the rails down. The two centres bracket Morris, 41 miles south of here.

The rise at Morris, where most of the 1,100 inhabitants fled and where the river took over almost the entire town, had apparently stopped late Wednesday night.

24 Feet Above Normal

Still to feel the crest were Winnipeg and the smaller centres in the widespread skirts. The reading in the province's largest city was 24.4 feet above datum at 1 a. m. this morning. Three-tenths of an inch had been added in 24 hours.

The level was a foot above the crest in 1948, when property damage rose into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The weak was expected within 48 hours.

Water Wednesday broke through a dike at Holly Avenue and Crescent Drive in suburban Fort Garry, inundating four homes. Other dikes were holding firm but volunteers and army troops kept round-the-clock vigils on them.

At Dominion City, 60 miles south of Winnipeg, the Roseau River forced its way into the streets. Two families were evacuated and a traffic bridge was threatened.

At St. Jean, another 10 families moved in when the Rosseau joined two inches. Livestock feed was in serious short supply.

Sizzling 89 Deg. One Year Ago

Toronto, May 4 — (CP) — A year can make a lot of difference, Torontonians say today.

May 4, 1949, the mercuries climbed to a sizzling 89 in a similar high for this date. Today they are expected to reach a mere 55. Heavy clouds hung over the city today and rain is forecast.

Montreal May 4 (CP)— Further roadblocks to romance face winsome Elaine Hasziers today.

The 19-year-old brunette wants to marry Nick Cooper, 22-year-old suspect in the $4,400 robbery of the Royal Bank's Rosemount branch in northeastern Montreal last April 25. Cooper surrendered to police Tuesday night after telling a Montreal Herald editor that he wanted to "face the music."

"We want to get married," Cooper told city editor Harold Gardner.

Cooper comes up for arraignment tomorrow.

But the laws delays are creating problems to the marriage plans. Wednesday, Elaine and her mother visited a notary to apply for a license because Miss Masters, as a minor, must have her parents' consent. They explained that Elaine's father has been "missing, somewhere in British Columbia for two years." Notary Harry Kolber said that writ must be made to the courts so that the mother's signature alone can be valid—and the technicalities will mean a 10-day delay.

But Elaine hasn't given up hope.

"I will do everything possible to be married as soon as possible" she told reporters.

Questioned on Other Jobs

Meanwhile her boy friend may run into further difficulties. Detective Lieut. Romeo Longpre, head of the city police holdup squad, said that Cooper now is being questioned regarding three burglaries in addition to the bank robbery.

Judge Gustave Marin Wednesday postponed sentence to May 10 for Eric McConnell, 26, and Jean Brunet, 25, who have pleaded guilty to the bank robbery.

Police said that four young men pulled off the holdup, which ended with a running gun battle between the bandits and two police constables. George Wallace, 24, suffered a severe abdominal wound and now is in hospital.

Cooper said when he gave himself up that he had been entrusted with the $4,400 loot and that he had escaped to New York after the robbery. He denied that he had any part in the shooting and he turned over more than $2,000 to police which he said was all that remained of the stolen money.

Skunk Yet 'King' With 50c Bounty Dead or Alive

Paris, Ont., April 4—(CP)—The skunk still is "King" here, but councillor Barney Clarkson is on the warpath.

Clarkson declared war on the unwanted guest last month when he encountered one of them on the main street in this western Ontario town. But since then they've continued to have things pretty much their own way.

The councillor got down to serious business Monday. He persuaded the city fathers to place a bounty of 50 cents a head on the skunks—dead or alive.

The bounty went into effect Wednesday night. The skunks went into hiding. Nary a skunk was trapped.

Trend to Right Reported in Scottish Elections

London, May 4—(CP)—A definite trend to the right was reported today in returns from Scotland's municipal elections.

Following abnormally low polls in Tuesday's voting, Progressives and Moderates now hold office in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee, Dumbarton, Dunfermline and Kilwinning. In five of these cities, a labor administration formerly was in control. There was no change in Edinburgh.

Political observers here declined comment on the Scottish results. As a national political Scotland is autonomous as far as local government is concerned, and a tendency for other parties to unite against the socialists is more widespread than in England and Wales.

There has been little change in Scotland's political complexion nationally since 1945. In that election, Conservatives won 37 seats compared with 26 last February. Labor won 37 seats each time.

Estimate 20,000 Test-Tube Babies in United States

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

New York, —(AP)—There are probably about 20,000 test-tube babies in the United States.

This is the estimate in a new book, "Fertility in Marriage," by Dr Louis Portnoy and Jules Saltman.

Dr. Portnoy has been for about 10 years a member of the staff of the sterility clinic, Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York, and of the fertility service of the Margaret Sanger Research Bureau. Saltman is a writer and editor on medicine and psychology. The publishers are Farrar, Straus and Company, Inc., New York.

The book says that artificial insemination succeeds 70 to 80 per cent of the time. Some doctors believe even higher percentages.

Even the test-tube method frequently requires several months of trials. The failure usually comes from the great difficulties in discovering a woman's fertile period.

Doctors, the book says, are very careful in test-tube baby cases. They study not only the donor but the prospective parents, and sometimes refuse because they do not think the parents are sufficiently stable in character. In these refusals the doctors fear that after the test-tube baby arrives, either husband or wife begins hating the male.

"It has occasionally happened," the book states, "that a husband who became a father through donor insemination has later, perhaps years later, proved fertile enough to produce a child of his own. Resentment and emotional difficulties involving the two children might conceivably arise, yet doctors who had such cases report nothing of the kind occurs."

Doctors preserve the anonymity of the donor father. Sometimes it is suggested by a couple that the donor be a male relative. The doctor invariably vetoes this.

No reputable doctor, the book asserts, would let the husband's knowledge. But wives sometimes ask this.

In England it is customary to limit the number of inseminations from any one donor, so as to avoid the possibility of children of the same father marrying under the belief that they are not related.

Vancouver to Clear Waterfront Shanties

Vancouver, —(CP)—A dramatic murder trial has reminded the city it must eradicate the waterfront shacks and flophouses clustered along Vancouver's tidal flats.

Frederick Roger Ducharme, a convicted murderer, occupied one of the hovels in this slum area which houses approximately 700 persons.

At Ducharme's trial—he was sentenced to be hanged June 30 for the sex-slaying of Ferne Blanche Fisher—the waterfront area was described as a "nest of perverts."

Several determined campaigns to remove the eyesore near downtown Vancouver have failed during the last 13 years, but another one is underway.

Mayor Charles Thompson has announced that some 300 dwellings are destined for destruction. The "clean up" will begin as soon as weather permits, he said, but admitted it will be a hard task.

In executing the plan to rid the city of its "shanty town," civic officials admit they will create an even knottier problem.

Inhabitants can be evicted as squatters, but where will they be housed?

The city probably won't carry its plan too far until a solution is found to this problem.

Famous Caricatured In Life-Size Models

Only four of its 20-odd occupants walk and talk. They are railway shunter John Prescott, his wife, Esther and their children John, 5, and Margaret 10.

The rest of the household are all life-sized models created by 40-year-old Prescott in his spare time. Among them are Winston Churchill, President Roosevelt, Laurel and Hardy, Greta Garbo, Gandhi, George Bernard Shaw, Danny Kaye and Sir Stafford Cripps.

Each model is a light-hearted caricature of the real person's best-known mannerisms.

"At one time I was keen to become a cartoonist," Prescott said, "but though I studied hard it didn't seem to be my line. Then I got the idea of combining cartoon with life-like models.

"Dressing the models is a bit expensive, though my wife and I make what we can. I use ordinary clay for the heads, then cast them in plaster. Coloring the features is a ticklish job but I've now got the right flesh tints.

Modern Education Includes Courses in Job Selection

Toronto — (CP) — The students of yesterday may have gained all the training necessary for their eventual occupations, but they missed one type of education accorded their children today— vocational guidance— how to choose a job.

In the last few ears vocational guidance has become increasingly important in the curricula of secondary schools.

In Ontario, every secondary school has at least one guidance expert on the staff and larger cities have full-time directors. More than 800 teachers in the province have had training in guidance instruction.

Head man in Ontario's job-choosing education is Howard R. Beattie. He and three assistants fill in the details of the overall guidance program of the Ontario Department of Education.

A recent survey by the State University of New York revealed just how successful the program has been. After every guidance program in Canada and the United States had been considered, Ontario's was named best. California and Michigan took second-place honors.

Reasons for Success

Mr. Beattie attributes the program's success to the sympathetic understanding of teachers, cooperation of the Ontario College of Education, the practical aspects of the course and the fact that the final decision is left to the pupil.

"We never tell a student what occupation he should go into. Most individuals will succeed in a number of occupations. We are more concerned with vocational interest than occupational choice" he says.

Aptitude tests are also used, he said, but their value is minimized since the results must be considered with other factors.

In 1941 Mr. Beattie as appointed the first city vocational guidance director in Ontario, at London. He became director of the first guidance service in Hamilton in 1943.

Since he has been with the department he has finished a one-year term as first Canadian president of the Council of Guidance and Personnel Associations of America.

Asked when a boy should make up his mind what he wants to be, Mr. Beattie replied:

"Not until he has to."

Hospital Tries Out Home Care Project

Montreal —(CP)— Montreal's Herbert Reddy Memorial Hospital is experimenting with a plan to ease the shortage of hospital beds.

Col. Wilfrid Bovey, president of the hospital has received a grant from the federal government to carry out a "pilot project" in the care of patients in their homes rather than in hospital beds.

During the past few years various New York hospitals have extended hospital care to patients' homes. The patient remains under the care of his physician and nurses find interns visit him at his home.

The patient will leave the hospital at an earlier date than usual, under the Reddy plan and spend the period before complete convalescence at home.

Interns will visit the patient daily under direction of the physician and make reports as if the patients were still in hospital.

"One main difference between our scheme and that in force in New York," said Col. Bovey, "is that the New York hospitals are limiting the patients who are public charges and the entire operation is at public expense.

"In our plan the patient, while not paying as much as he would in hospital, will be expected to contribute and when the experiment is over we hope the Home Care section will be self-supporting.

The Skipper and the Paint Brush

Many a small-boat skipper would never have become a full-fledged land-lubber to navigate his craft, nor will he permit the uninitiated to ply the paint brush prior to the spring boatfitting. Just as in the trade in navigation, so he knows the pitfalls involved in getting his boat ready for the water.

For those who may lack the experience, here are a few things to watch for if you plan to do any repainting. Remove metal fittings, and wash thoroughly inside and out with hot water and cleaning powder. Examine the hull carefully for any sign of rot, injuries or decay. Be on the lookout for paint that has peeled, cracked or blistered — this will mean a complete hull-scraping and repainting for maximum protection. Otherwise, a general sanding is all that will be required. Use either sand paper (grade 60 (coarse for a big job); followed by 100 (fine to add the finishing touches). Or if the surface is in reasonably good condition, perhaps 100 will do the job alone.

One good reason for removing old paint is so that the coats won't get too heavy and break down under their own weight. However, it is false economy to attempt to save money by failing to paint when painting should be done. Applying frequent painting will prevent decay and deterioration.

Always make sure that the surface is perfectly dry, and don't try to paint during damp or wet weather. Also, the surface must be absolutely clean and free from oil and grease.

All cracks, nail or screw holes should be attended to before you get down to the actual job of painting. These may be filled with putty before the priming coat, or seam cement can be used after the priming coat has been applied.

Always be sure to get the right material for the specific job. Don't use a cheap primer or an ochre primer where satisfactory results are desired. The life and nature of a paint coat depend greatly upon the nature of the first coat applied directly to the surface. If the first coat cracks and peels off, so will the finish coats, and all your hard work will have been to no good purpose.

It is well to remember, too, in brushing out a coat, the paint or varnish will have to be fairly thin, thus it is always wise to wait for a warm day before attempting to paint. In addition, the materials may stand in a pan of hot water during the application so that you will be sure they are of the right consistency. Don't reduce a varnish or an enamel with linseed oil. It will seriously retard drying and may result in trouble. Always follow the directions carefully and then, if you are still not 100 per cent sure, consult your dealer.

Three further "don'ts" remain, and they are of great importance: Don't shake varnish or enamel. To do so creates air bubbles which are detrimental to the finish.

Don't use an outside paint for inside work or vice versa, unless specifically recommended for use in that manner.

Don't apply paint, varnish or enamel when the surface or outside temperature is too hot. This will cause blistering.

Future Chancellors May Have To Play to Empty Houses

By ALAN HARVEY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 4 (CP)— Judged purely on its entertainment value Britain's 1950 budget was a flop. If the speeches get any duller, future Chancellors of the Exchequer may have to play to empty houses.

Budget day used to be regarded as the most exciting event of the Parliamentary year. It was always a sell-out spectacle. But the recent practice of prefacing actual tax changes with a lengthy review of Britain's economic position is not to everyone's taste.

This time, there were all the time-worn trappings of a great occasion — the chancellor's dispatch box, which ever since Britain froze selling batteries to them of orange juice to refresh the speaker celebrated for his austerity; the massed crimson benches filled to overflowing, and the crowded expectant galleries.

But it didn't come off. After Stafford Cripps finished the first hour of his address, members stirred restlessly. An hour later, with the real news of the March still to come, some Parliamentarians began drifting out of the Chamber.

Observers of all political colors found the 2 1-2 hour speech hard to take.

The Daily Telegraph, Conservative, noted that "heads were nodding" after the first hour. It said the Chancellor's exercise in economics had drastically expectancy from the atmosphere.

The Daily Graphic, also Conservative, summed it up in a two word headline: "bleak house."

Several members detected what they called a "schoolmaster's chant" in the economic statement."

J. P. W. Mallalieu, Labor member for Huddersfield East, wrote in the Left-wing Tribune.

"As his review of the country's external economic position proceeded, I seemed to hear the tic-toc of the school clock and to hear the drowsy humming of a lawn mower on the school field outside."

Budget boredom even afflicted the editorial writer of the Independent Times. He started a sentence with the words:

"Brooding over the bleak and barren budgetary scene. . ."

Whitehall Notebook: Party's Influence Will Be Spread Evenly Over Country

By ALAN HARVEY

London, May 4 (CP)— Socialist strategy at the next election will be to spread the party's influence more evenly across the country.

On the theory that the strong could help the weak, party chiefs in the impregnable industrial areas will be asked to divert some of their superfluous strength to marginal, middle-class seats.

Herbert Morrison, Deputy Prime Minister and the man who is the party machine, told a conference:

"The strong, safe constituencies could be willing to set some of their people aside to help the weaker ones—as long as they are the right people to do so."

Richard Crossman, once considered the leader of Labor's back-bench rebels, wrote that the obvious lesson of the Feb. 23 general election is that the smug left should aid what he called "politically-distressed" areas.

Clarion Call

"Elections are won not during but between campaigns," Crossman wrote in the new statesman and nation.

The Clarion, edited by the late Robert Blatchford, was a popular Labor newspaper before the First World War. Young Socialists called themselves "Clarion Scouts" and obtained their propaganda points from the paper. Election Dagger

Other popular themes of post-election comment are that the party polled the highest popular vote in Britain's history, but still fell far short of its aims. When Labor came joyously to power in July 1945, some of the bolder spirits predicted that Socialism would be in the saddle for at least two decades.

Now there is a general feeling that the Conservatives have regained the initiative. Nationalization of new industries has provoked generally unpopular; consolidation is the rallying cry.

War Secretary John Strachey, in an article in the New Statesman, said that in the last five years Labor has made "at least an important beginning at curing the indispensable job of our times by democratic means." Everything hinged on whether the achievement could be "secured, consolidated and extended."

Strachey said two of the party's main accomplishments were redistribution of income and a planned economic system relatively free from the fluctuations of world markets.

WHERE SOVIET'S 71-BED FAMILY RUFFLES GLEN COVERS

Leonid A. Morozov, first secretary to Russia's United Nations' delegation, recently rented this old J. P. Morgan estate in Glen Cove, N.Y., for the use of his "family" this summer. Tuesday 71 beds were being moved into it, much to the consternation of the local residents who have a restriction limiting each house to one family, to prevent would-be resort owners from purchasing the town's famous estates. It is believed that the estate will be used as a summer place for members of the Soviet delegation and consulates, etc., in the U.S.—Central Press Canadian.

Siamese Twins Will be Divided By Operation

Edmonton, May 4. (CP)— An operation to separate Siamese twin girls Brenda and Beverley Townsend scheduled May 14 is believed to have a "reasonable chance for success," Dr. Eardley S. Allin, Edmonton surgeon, declared Wednesday.

At a press conference in which complete details of the babies' condition were revealed for the first time, Dr. Allin said the operation is an "acceptable risk under the circumstances."

The children, born last Nov. 17 at Tofield, Alta., 42 miles southeast of Edmonton, are joined from the third rib to the navel by a common section about three inches wide and seven inches deep. X-rays have indicated they have a common liver—large enough for two children—but no other vital organs are shared.

In the operation, a team of six Edmonton doctors headed by Dr. Allin will seek to cut through skin, bone and tissue connecting the children and divide the liver in two.

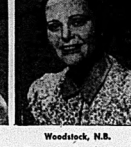
RED ROSE TEA

Winnipeg, Man.

Frankly I've been buying Red Rose Tea only since Tom's Mother came to visit us; it has always been her favourite tea. There is nothing like a cup of good tea—and after tasting Red Rose Tea I know why Mom prefers it. Red Rose Tea is Good Tea! It makes more cups per pound! It is everything the Red Rose Tea people say it is. Tom's Mother visited us six months ago and I've been a Red Rose Tea fan ever since. I see now that the price has not been increased and I'm telling all my friends.



Three Rivers, Que.

I've been buying Red Rose Tea for several years and I wouldn't think of any other tea now. Not only does it have a bright, satisfying flavour, but it actually costs less per cup because there are more cups per pound. A good cup of tea is hard to beat—and Red Rose Tea is Good Tea. To top it all, the price of Red Rose Tea has not been increased. This makes it doubly our favourite tea!

Hamilton, Ont.

I would never have believed that there could be such a difference in tea until I tried Red Rose Tea! Red Rose Tea makes the best cup of tea we've ever had at our house and we have tried it the "Canadian" way. It is good and satisfying. Another thing about Red Rose Tea is that it costs less per cup! Red Rose Tea makes more cups per pound. And now that I see that the increase in price does not apply to Red Rose Tea, I am more convinced than ever that it is the tea for us.

Woodstock, N.B.

Because of our large family, tea is an important item in our budget. When I decided to try Red Rose Tea I was amazed at its full flavour. It was not long before I noticed that I always got more cups per pound with Red Rose Tea. Red Rose Tea has been our favourite tea for years. Now that I'm told that there is no increase in price on Red Rose Tea I am more convinced than ever before that Red Rose Tea is Good Tea!

Calgary, Alta.

About two months ago I thought I'd try Red Rose Tea for a change— we have never had it before. Hooray! I was surprised at the bright, flavourful cup it made! I have been buying Red Rose Tea ever since, especially when I discovered that it makes more cups per pound! This is an important consideration when your family drinks as much tea as ours does. And now there is an additional saving, the price of Red Rose Tea has not been increased. So it pays to buy good tea and Red Rose Tea is Good Tea.

NO INCREASE IN PRICE
RED ROSE TEA IS GOOD TEA

Barbara Ann Named on Glamor Team of Sports

New York, May 4. (AP)—Harry Conover, who deals in figures—behind that walk on high heels—picked eight women including Ottawa's Barbara Ann Scott on his "all-glamor" team of sports. "Georgeous Gussie" Moran of the lace-panties tennis fame isn't on it.

"My choice as the No. 1 beauty in Athletics would be a tie between Nancy Chaffee, the tennis star, and Phyllis Riggs, a little-known roller skater," the model agency executive said.

"Gussie Moren has her merits but I think much of her glamor is due to clever publicity. She doesn't make my varsity."

Here's Conover's Varsity of Pulchritude:

Nancy Chaffee, Ventura, Calif., tennis.

Phyllis Riggs, New York, roller skating.

Barbara Ann Scott, former World and Olympic figure-skating champion.

Brenda Helser, Los Angeles, Olympic swimmer.

Alice Baeur, Midland, Texas, golf.

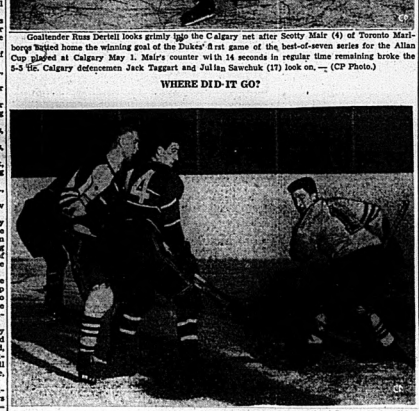
Vicki Draves, Pasadena, Calif., Olympic divicic champion.

Sarah Palfrey Cooke, New York, ranking tennis star.

The beauty expert, who daily passes judgment on some of the most stunning female creatures in the world, said he thinks skating and tennis do the best job of putting feminine curves where they ought to be.

"In fact, if one could combine the two—skate and develop shapely legs and play tennis to improve the upper part of the body—the result would be an almost perfect figure."

"Women golfers are generally on the dowdy side, masculine and leathery complexioned," he said, "but the Bauer girls are an exception. Marlene is a nice but still very young. Alice has a blonde, fresh beauty.



"Swimmers, you'll notice, always have tremendous shoulders and don't seem tightly wound—take Eleanor Holm and Esther Williams. But you have to admit they're mighty lovely mermaids.

WINNING GOAL

Goaltender Russ Dertell looks grimly into the Calgary net after Scotty Mair (4) of Toronto Marlboros Wasted home the winning goal of the Dukes' first game of the best-of-seven series for the Allan Cup played at Calgary May 1. Mair's counter with 14 seconds in regular time remaining broke the 5-5 tie. Calgary defencemen Jack Taggart and Julian Sawchuk (17) look on. — (CP Photo.)

WHERE DID IT GO?

Goalie Bob Tyler glances over his shoulder to make sure Montreal Canadiens' Jacques Nadon didn't slip the puck past him into Regina's goal. Nadon didn't, but his team-mates struck with four goals in 6½ minutes to route the Pats 5-1. It gave Montreal a commanding 3-0 lead in games in the best-of-seven series for the Memorial Cup. The game was played on Toronto ice May 2. — (CP Photo.)

New York, May 4 (AP)—When the United States Golf Association Executive Committee met at the Augusta (Ga.) Geo. Ewald Wins Third Straight, Sets New Record in Harrier Race

Finishing strong with a 20-yard sprint George Ewald, crack cross-country runner of BCI, broke the tape ahead of the field in the school's annual five-mile harrier race for his third consecutive victory yesterday afternoon.

Ewald smashed his own record of 32 minutes flat established last year, when he negotiated the distance in 31.55, knocking five seconds off the former mark.

He won the Kenneth J. Colling Memorial Trophy for the second consecutive time. The trophy, donated by the late sports editor's brother Mr. Cleo Colling was presented to Ewald by the donor shortly after the conclusion of the race. He will be presented with a miniature, his permanent possession later this year.

Coughlin Close Second

The blonde speedster was chased to the wire by fleetfooted Bill Coughlin who finished scant seconds behind the winner. Coughlin and Ewald made a two-man race of it practically all the way until the final few hundred yards when Ewald drew away to win by 125 feet.

Nine entries faced the starter's gun at 4.30 p.m. with eight finishing. Roy Bradshaw found the going a little too tough for his liking and withdrew from the race during its later stages.

Bringing up third position was Edmund McClay with Sherman Brant in fourth slot. Following in the order named came Ernest Brooks, Donald Barclay, Edwin Colclogh and Donald Ashline.

Principal George E. Currie acted as starter with Messrs J. Musgrove, Wesley Reid and Don Stirling as timers. Reports of the progress of the race were given the large crowd of student and "civilian" spectators from time to time over a "walkie-talkie" system arranged by Mr. Youdale and his school signal section. It was a distinct innovation, one greatly appreciated by the large crowd that awaited the finish.

Trophy Presented

The winner and the field posed for photographs on the steps of the school central entrance following the race where the presentation took place.

Mr. Colling congratulated Ewald on his sensational victory complimenting the field on the excellent race and remarking on the enthusiasm shown by the students.

Principal Currie in a brief address added his congratulatory tribute to winner and field stating the race was a fine "evidence of sportsmanship and school spirit." All contestants, he said, deserved credit for the race for the fine showing made. He also paid tribute to the school signal section and Mr. Youdale for the service rendered in reporting periodical positions of the runners during the hard five-mile grind.

QUADRUPLETS BORN

Dr. Keithahn said the babies are doing well, although the smallest is rather feeble. He said Mrs. Feifert is in "fair" condition. She is the mother of six other children, including twins.

The infants varied from 2½ to 4½ pounds. Two girls were born first, then the boy, and then the third girl.

'Dromers' Defeat 'Reckers' Keglers By 5 to 2 Score

The Belleville Bowl-O-Drome bowling representatives took the measure of the Recreation Alleys "Reckers" in a scheduled Quinte League Men's Tournament fixture at the Bowl-O-Drome last night, defeating their city rivals by a 5-2 count.

The Bowl-O-Dromers piled up an impressive aggregate score of 3621 as against 3478 of the "Reckers". The Dromers block scores were 1016 - 1310 - 1295 with the opposition rolling 1078 - 1196 - 1204.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

WORTHY CHOICE

Edgar Laprade, New York Rangers' great little center, was almost a unanimous choice for the Lady Byng Trophy for 1949-50. The 30-year-old smoothie was either the first choice or second choice of every one of the 19 sports writers and sportscasters in the six N. H. L. cities did the voting and points were awarded on the basis of three for a first choice, two for a second and one for a third.

Laprade is the recipient of a cheque for $7,000 from the National Hockey League for winning the trophy.

Red Kelly, who was the closest competitor Laprade had in winning the trophy, was the first choice of three selectors, the second choice of five and the third pick of two. Bill Quackenbush, Boston defenceman who was the 1948 - 49 Lady Byng winner, finished in fourth place with 13 points.

Twelve players were voted for by the selectors, but seven of the 12 only received a single third - place vote. Sid Smith of Toronto finished fifth in the balloting with five points. The seven players who received a single third-place vote were Harry Watson, Toronto; Roy Conacher, Chicago; Gordie Howe, Detroit; Bill Mosienko, Chicago; Elmer Lach, Canadiens; Ted Kennedy, Toronto and Max Bentley, Toronto.

Laprade, who was the winner of the Calder Memorial Trophy as the National Hockey League's outstanding rookie in 1945-46, enjoyed his greatest season in 1949-50 since he broke into the League. In 60 games he scored 22 goals, had 22 assists and scored 44 points. He was the fifth highest scorer on the Rangers. He was also a defensive bulwark and killed off penalties for the New Yorkers. The 5'9", 157-pound forward was a bearcat for work and was on the ice as much if not more than any other player in the loop. He was the key man in the New Yan is defensive and defensive strategy. He only incurred a single minor penalty in 1949-50 and that was a two-minute sentence for tripping.

SOCCER AT FAIR GROUNDS

President Les Digby of the Bay of Quinte Soccer League announced on yesterday that the game scheduled for tonight between Trenton and ANAF Vets at the Dundas Park field has been transferred to the Fair Grounds here on account of the unplayable condition of this air field.

Saturday should be a red-letter day for soccerites when the Belleville teams, Navy and United clash in a league fixture at the Fair Grounds. Hinsmore Mayor Jack Allin and other notables will be present and it is expected a large crowd of supporters of both teams will turn out for the match. Kick-off at 3 o'clock.

Since it is understood the Commercial Softball League will operate under OASA rules, here are the playing amendments to the 1949 rules as adopted by the 1950 OASA Convention:

Three foot line must be marked out in field — half way between home plate and 1st base — three feet outside base line — to point 10 feet beyond 1st base:

Base-runner out for running outside three foot line. (Runner must stay within confines of base-line and three foot line.)

Player replaced in game cannot return to game either as coach or player;

Shoes and numbered part of uniform;

Quick return pitch not allowed — umpire to immediately call "time";

Batter may not change from one box to the other until "time" is called. Batter may request umpire to call "time";

Base-runner standing on base, hit by infield fly, not out;

Base-runner who stands off base or hesitates between bases when batter has ball, must be called OUT;

An "out" for leaving a base too soon on a caught fly ball is not a force-out and when such an out is the third out in an inning, any runs scored before the third out is actually made will count.

'TWAS EVER THUS!

The phone banned right merrily at the reportorial mansion Tuesday evening after some of the boys had perused the paragraphs regarding the allowing of 1949 OAHA team players and baseball players of that year, into the charmed circle of the "A" Section of the Commercial Softball League.

It seems, the voices insisted, that the rule, or whatever it is, barring such players has been into effect for a couple of years and since it is part of the constitution, nothing can be done about it — and quotes.

Yesterday afternoon we were told, by another informant, that managers of the teams in the senior section of the loop got together and voted unanimously in favor of the the regulation barring these players.

"And furthermore" a second telephone voice said, "it's none of your d . . . . . business what is done".

That's okay and lovely with us, chum, whoever you are, but we'll bet you our salary against your hat — back, that you will be the bigest squawker extant should your name be left out of the box-score, or line-up. And in addition perhaps it's none of your d . . . . business just what happens to the Commercial League games. This newspaper is not duty bound to print a line about the results of same nor gives them any free publicity.

And we happen to be in the driver's seat when it comes down to handing out a lot of something for nothing. Remember that, whoever you are.

At least we'll do this much for a pal. Jack McNab requests any players desirous of turning out with the Belleville Motors team of the "B" Section CSL, be on hand tonight at 8:30 on the collegiate campus for practice. You're more than welcome, Johnny m'lad.

New Balk Rule Threatens To Make Farce of Baseball; Four Called in One Game

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Balk, Balk, Balk, Balk. How silly can you get? Pitcher Vic Raschi of New York Yankees, umpire Bill Summers and the American League hold a major league record that is better forgotten.

Raschi, guilty of only one previous balk in his big league career, was nailed four times by Summers Wednesday at Yankee Stadium. And this in the league where "the same-old rule" was to be enforced. Each time Raschi was found guilty of a "non stop violation.

In all the years of baseball no pitcher ever was called four times in a game before Raschi. Three was the old high.

Raschi's first three balks didn't matter much. Chicago didn't score. The fourth balk hurt, but not fatally. It permitted Gordon Goldsberry to stroll home from third breaking a 5-0 tie.

As it turned out, Raschi survived balks, walks and 10 hits for a 6-5 victory over Ted Kluszewski of the White Sox.

Thus, Boston-Red Sox, breathing fire at their Fenway Park home ripped off their sixth straight victory, a 7-2 romp over Cleveland. The Sox routed Bobby Feller, Ellis Kinder went all the way for the Sox. Walt Dropo clubbed a two-run homer and single.

Senators Nip Browns

Gil Coan hit a home run with the bases filled and two out in the seventh inning to give Washington a 4-3 comeback edge over St. Louis Browns. Ned Garver was coasting along with a three-hit 3-0 shutout when Coan hit his second homer of the year.

Two blasts about those poor old St. Louis Cardinals. Those aging Red Birds took a series from Brooklyn, just when the Dodgers threatened to run away with the National League.

The Cards did it the hard way Wednesday, winning in 13 innings 6-5 with two runs in the last of the 13th. Jim Russell apparently won the game for Brooklyn with a homer in the first of the 13th. But Joe Garagiola's two-run single with the bases full made reliefer Willie Ramsdell knuckle down.

Garagiola set the stage for the dramatic ending by driving home the tying run with a double in the last of the ninth. Carl Erskine was pitching at the time.

Al Brazle picked up the victory on a neat four-inning relief job. Ramsdell took the loss.

Durocher Thumbed Out

Leo Durocher got the thumb from umpire Larry Goetz but the New York Giants won anyhow 5-2 over Cincinnati. It was the Giants' second victory of the year. Monte Kennedy went the route, scattering nine hits to whip

Canadiens Only One Game Away From 'A' Title

Montreal, May 4 — (CP) — Montreal Junior Canadiens today are hot favorites to give Regina Pats the coup de grace and win the Canadian Junior hockey title in four straight games.

Going into the fourth encounter of a best-of-seven final series for the Memorial Cup with a 3-0 lead, Canadiens are a two-to-one favorite to sew up the series.

Coaches of the "cousin" teams — both are farmclubs of Montreal's National Hockey League Canadiens — had little to say about the outcome of the game.

After seeing the Montreal operator of the International Baseball League Wednesday between Montreal Royals and Jersey City Giants, the stick-wielders retired early and spent quarters until spent a quiet evening in preparation for tonight's clash.

Regina, now in a do-or-die position, isn't "breeling," was the only comment Coach Murray Armstrong of Pats would give.

His boys played good hockey all the way, he added, but Canadiens obviously are a better team.

Coach Sam Pollock of Canadiens wasn't taking anything for granted. "We've still got to win four games," he said when the team returned Wednesday after playing in Toronto the only game played outside of Montreal.

"The series won't be over until the final whistle is blown and that may be a long way off yet," he added.

Winning the championship tonight would give Montreal its second straight Memorial Cup. won by Montreal Royals over Brandon Wheat Kings last year. Should a fourth game be necessary, it will be played here Saturday night.

The Montreal Forum's share of the take in that fourth game will be turned over to Montreal's joint hospital fund campaign for $18,000,000.

Edgar Laprade Been Awarded Lady Byng Cup

Montreal, May 4. (CP)—Edgar Laprade, 30-year-old centre with New York Rangers, has been awarded the National Hockey League's Lady Byng trophy as the most gentlemanly player of the 1949-50 season, it was announced today.

Laprade, who collects a $1,000 cheque from the N.H.L. for winning the trophy, was almost a unanimous choice by the 18 sports writers and broadcasters of the six N.H.L. cities who did the voting. A native or Mine Centre, Ont., he polled 48 of a possible 54 points, to beat out Detroit's Red Kelly by a wide margin.

The trophy is awarded to "the player adjudged to have exhibited the best type of sportsmanship and gentlemanly conduct combined with a high standard of playing ability during the season."

Laprade, winner of the Calder Memorial trophy in 1945-46 as the N.H.L.'s outstanding rookie, incurred only one minor penalty in the last N.H.L. season.

Racing Season Opens at Dufferin Before 10,000

By The Canadian Press

Ontario's 145-day racing season opened Wednesday at Toronto with 10,000 fans thronging the pint-sized Dufferin track in perfect weather. Keen action with some close finishes marked the first events of the 14-day meet at the half-mile oval.

The events were also the first held under Ontario's new racing deal. The recent appointment of a racing commission with Magistrate Tupper Bigelow as its head is expected to clear some of the cobwebs out of the racing set up in this province.

One of Wednesday's close finishes was the featured inaugural handicap, five-furlong dash for three-an-olds and up. The event paying $1,800, was won by Blarney Maid with Bogging Bob second and Donna Briar third. It took the camera to decide the winner. Blarney Maid gave back bettors $6.10 for their $2.

One of the racing commission's acts Monday was to issue a jockey licence to Bobby Keane of Toronto, suspended after a row with officials last summer. Wednesday, Keane marked up two winners, coming home with Kay Story in the third and taking secondary honors, the fifth, aboard Best Book.

At Cincinnati O., both Lee Oma of Detroit, gunning for a crack at the heavyweight boxing championship, and Bill Weinberg of New York were disqualified for foul tactics Wednesday night in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

Referee Earl Butler ordered both fighters out of the ring after they had seven full rounds of mauling, butting and heeling that drew constant boos from the estimated crowd of 3,500.

Oma, rated the No. 3 heavyweight in National Boxing Association rankings, weighed 194 and Weinberg 212 1-2.

At London, jockey Gordon Richards Wednesday rode the 2,990th winner of his career. No man has ever ridden as many. The veteran of 29 years in the saddle will celebrate his 46th birthday Friday. Richards has ridden 33 winners since the English flat-racing season opened March 18. He stands a good chance of reaching 4,000 today since one of his mounts is a 1-10 favorite in a three-horse field. He had three mounts Wednesday at Sandown Park and won with all of them.

Welland Stokes, 1949 Ontario Senior Baseball champions, opened the 1950 exhibition season Wednesday night at Waterloo with a 2-1 win over Waterloo Tigers. The International club outhit the Niagara district winners, 4-3, but wild pitching lost the game for them.

N. Wedge of Kitchener rolled to a 749 count at Toronto Wednesday to capture the high three honors in the men's division of the Ontario Bowling Association's annual tournament. H. Hemphill, Ottawa, marked up 315 to win the high single.

Sarnia Beavers tied with Windsor Sterlings for leadership in the Canadian-American Lacrosse league Wednesday night at home when the best Wallaceburg 17-7 inthe opening game of the season.

Allan Kelleher Signs With Ottawa Nats

Allan Kelleher, 20-year-old former baseball player of this city signed a contract yesterday to play with the Ottawa Nationals of the Border League, it was announced in Ottawa yesterday afternoon.

Kelleher, the announcement stated will play an outfield position, but will be coached as a pitcher and a first baseman.

Playing manager Bill Metaig was impressed with Kelleher from the time the youngster first put in an appearance for a tryout.

Your Host Still Favorite to Win Kentucky Derby

Louisville, Ky, May 4—(AP)—The Kentucky Derby masterminds are unanimous today in the thought that Your Host will stride out of the starting gate in the $100,000 "run for the roses" Saturday.

"Come on and catch me—if you can."

The speedy California express still is the favorite for this 76th running of North America's most colorful turf event, which will see 13 or more three-year-olds tackle the tough 1¼ mile distance.

Four big questions are up for consideration, and all won't be answered until shortly after the field slams out of the barrier at Churchill Downs the day after tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. EDT.

1. Will the weatherman bring more rain and an off track, or will it be fast?

2. What horse is going out in an attempt to run with Your Host's blazing speed, and try to keep him from stealing the race?

3. Can the son of Alibhai-Boudour II carry his speed all the way?

4. If not, who is the one most likely to come along and pick up all the blue chips?

The weather forecast was for scattered showers today. For Saturday, the weatherman said some showers were possible.

Prefers Fast Track

Harry Daniels, trainer of Bill Goetz's Your Host, would prefer a fast track. Your Host never has had to race in mud.

Your Host flew to a six-length victory at Keeneland in his last outing, and broke the track record for seven furlongs in the process. Jockey Johnny Longden will be aboard Saturday.

Chris Chenery's colt, Hill Prince, Wood Memorial winner, won't be anywhere at the start, but in the past when everybody had just about given him up for lost, the strapping son of Princequillo-Hildene started passing horses like they were standing still.

"I think Hill Prince is the horse to beat," said Daniel. "And that Eddie Arcaro riding him won't hurt. He can ride a mule.

"But then, I don't have any amateur on my horse either," Daniels added, patting Longden on the head.

"David" Ray Villmer and "Goliath" Wee Willie Davis are on the wrestling card at Memorial Arena Friday night although the pair does not meet. Villmer, who scored a startling upset with his defeat of the towering Il Lee last week has been matched with another "giant" Wild Bill Longson former world champion. Wee Willie Davis is scheduled to clash with Bobbie Nelson in opener. Wee Willie who is a featured motion picture star is also appearing at the Capitol Theatre in the wrestling picture "Bodyhold", tonight, Friday and Saturday. Earl "Moose" McCready, who has been a leading contender for his 1950 debut here in the semi-final against the ferocious Strangler Bob Wagner. All eyes will be centred on the elusive Villmer and the former champ, Longson. It should be even better than the main bout of last week.

Syracuse Chiefs Spoil Opening For Toronto

(By The Associated Press)

The International League jinxfully got a break from the weatherman.

Opening day was staged in the ball parks of the circuit's four northern teams Wednesday and a total of 69,570 fans turned out command to the sweeps 28,660 fans who saw the four southern teams open their season some weeks ago.

The largest crowd of the day, 19,236 fans turned up at Toronto to see the Maple Leafs nipped on the occasion by blanking the Maple Leafs 4-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Art Hartley.

Hartley dueled on even terms with young Jackie Bowers until the seventh when the Chiefs snapped a scoreless tie with two runs. They added two more in the following frame against Lou Possehl to clinch the decision.

The second largest crowd — 15,097 — showed up at Rochester and the Wings rewarded the fans by downing Baltimore Orioles 6-2.

Johnny Yuhas was credited with the victory, his third with out a loss. Yuhas let the game in the seventh after he was stiffed on the leg with a ground ball and Jackie Collum finished up.

A crowd of 13,000 watched the Royals turn back Jersey City Giants 4-3 in Montreal. The Royals won the game in the ninth inning when Damon Phillips singled with the bases loaded. The triumph was Turk Lown's third without a defeat and Montreal's sixth in seven starts.

The defending champion Buffalo Bisons pleased a home crowd of 15,807 by scoring four runs in the ninth inning to defeat the Springfield Cubs 7-3.

Calgary Stamps Score 5-4 Win Over Marlboros

Calgary, Alta., May 4—(CP)—Calgary Stampeders showed Wednesday night they can't be easy picking for Toronto Marlboros in the best-of-seven series for the Canadian senior hockey championship.

The cowboys earned a 5-4 victory before 6,000 fans, bouncing back from a 6-5 loss Monday, to tie the contest for the Allan Cup at a game apiece.

Harold Ballard, Marlie club president who coached the team in the absence of regular mentor Joe Primeau (in Toronto attending his fathers funeral), put the finger on the Stamps victory.

"Stampeders certainly know how to capitalize on their chances and we didn't seem to be able to."

Three of Calgary's goals—in- cluding the winner—were scored when Toronto was shorthanded. The eastern champs scored only once with a Stampeder in the penalty box.

Although penalties apparently played an important role, the game was relatively clean and and only nine minors were called five to Toronto.

Goalie Russ Dertell, 29-year-old Stampeder veteran, shared the spotlight with a couple of buddies also getting along in hockey years. Doug (Crafty) Cairns, 35, and Bunny Dame, 32, were the big reasons Toronto couldn't salt away the puck when Calgary was shorthanded.

Slaps in Two

In addition to his penalty killing stints Cairns slapped in a couple of goals. Johnny Millard, Milch Pocket and Stan Devico got the other Calgary goals.

Marlies best attacking line was George Armstrong, Bob Hassard and Danny Lewicki. Armstrong, 19-year-old right winger, scored Toronto's first goal when he tore in fast and shot a rebound from a long Hollett drive over a sprawled Dertell.

The lanky Armstrong also was credited by officials with getting the last Toronto goal at 17:06 of the third. The counter followed Devico's effort giving Calgary a 5-3 lead and was a screened shot which Dertell never saw. Armstrong however told officials his shot was tipped in by centre Bob Hassard. Lewicki also was given an assist.

Third game of the east-west hockey final will be played here Saturday.

The Milliner

A business man usually makes a good bridge player. Such as they are, he picks up a set of rules for his guide. These he applies in a practical manner, even if not consistently.

Instinctively he follows some mathematical basis. It may not be strictly in the groove. But he combines it with tactics that give him some degree of success. He gets up.

He is accustomed to losses and gains. He knows their relative value. If necessary, he will boldly make a sacrifice play when the situation warrants. Not often is his reckoning false.

Such a player sat east in this deal:

NORTH
♠A 6
♦10 3 2
♣K Q J 6 5 4

WEST
♥J 9 7 4 2
♦Q 8 5
♣A 7 2

EAST
♠K 9 7 3 2
♥A 5 3
♦K 9 7 4
♣10

SOUTH
♠Q J 5 4
♥K Q
♦A J 6
♣9 8 3

South became the declarer at a contract of three no-trump. The opening lead from west was heart four. Looks as if nine tricks are cold with five clubs, two aces, king and queen of hearts.

However, east took trick one with heart ace and studied the possibilities. He decided that declarer needed the five tricks in clubs to make the contract. He set out to prevent it.

If west has the club ace, dummy will need spade ace as a future entry. Therefore, east returned the spade king. It was a deliberate sacrifice. But it forced the dummy ace. And it paid.

West laid off with the club ace until the 3rd round of clubs. With spade ace gone from dummy, the remaining north clubs were dead.

Declarer thus got only two club tricks and spade ace from dummy. His south hand picked up tricks in other suits. But not enough for a total of nine his contract called for.

Bizarrely giving up king for sacrifice to make a later gain has come to be known as the Deschappelles coup. It takes this name from a famed whist expert of the 19th century.

Some coups can drive you cuckoo.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 4 — (AP)—Most movie stars who complain of overwork can't evoke much sympathy, but Dan Dailey might have a point.

"I haven't had a day off in a year," said the lanky hoofer. With strenuous dance rehearsals he works harder than most filmsters and he now is seeking some time off. Having just finished three pictures in a row, he was put into a guest appearance in "Tll Get By." Now he's supposed to start "Call Me Mr." but he hinted he may elude the assignment.

Dan is happy over the success of "When Willie Comes Marching Home," which he said is his favorite of all his pictures. It may be significant that the film contains only one brief musical number.

Thursday Thoughts

Betie Davis strongly doubts a report that she might return to Warners for another picture. She's too happy on the outside. . .

Errol Flynn may rate westerns, but he is slated to start "Rocky Mountain" next month. . .

Some timing. Elizabeth Taylor's film, "Father of the Bride," was previewed last night. Saturday she goes through the real thing with Nick Hilton.

Cufe Notes

Joan Crawford says she'll do the projected musical at Warners if she is given enough time to prepare the dance numbers. . .

Allan Ladd continues to be Paramount's pet. The studio announced he received 14,000 fan letters in one day. He averages 25,000 a month, says the studio. .

Also in the record department: the call sheet for "The Grave Bulls" on location in Mexico listed 9,045 extras.

NERO DIDN'T FIDDLE

Historians say Emperor Nero did not fiddle while Rome burned because he was 50 miles away at his villa in Antium when fire occurred, and did not return to the city until it was in ashes.

Workers Reach An Agreement, Return to Work

Owen Sound, May 4. (CP)—Some 200 striking employees of the R.C.A. Victor Company will return to work today after reaching an agreement on wages, group benefits, holiday privileges and other questions at issue. The strike began April 24.

A joint statement Wednesday by the company and the International Woodworkers of America (C.I.O.) said:

"The strike at the R.C.A.-Victor Company plant has been settled by an amicable agreement between the company and the I.W.A.

"Some of the highlights of the settlement included a new base rate, improvements in the merit and bonus-incentive systems and an approach to an annual guarantee of work.

"The contract contains union shop and automatic check-off, two weeks' vacation after four years, seven statutory holidays, and a group insurance plan covering sickness, and accident, hospital and sick pay."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for the good of his figure and his appetite, and I said, G, pop, here comes Admiral Tricker.

Yes dodo, and look who's with him, his pesky little grandson that he's so degressingly proud of, pop said, and I said, We've still got time to cross over to the other side of the street.

That would be the most practical move, but unfortunately the most practical things are often the least polite, pop said.

The result being we kept on going, hoping Admiral Tricker would do the same thing with little Boswell. Which he didn't, stopping and saying to pop, Well, another nice day.

Yes indeed, I wouldn't change it if I could, pop said, and Admiral Tricker said, Ha, ha, that reminds me something Boswell got off about the weather this morning. He's always getting something off about something. Boswell's a card, he really is, in fact he's got off several good cracks lately that I want to tell you about. Anyway, speaking of the weather, Boswell was drinking his milk this morning, and he said, "Why dont it rain milk instead of water?"

I see, he was alluding to the high percentage of water contained in even the best milk, pop said, and Admiral Tricker said, No, he just meant why dont'ens by reasons of the celestial laws of gravity? pop said, and that's the funny part of it.

Oh, do you mean he was referring to the Milky Way being a permanent fixture of the heavens? pop said.

Admiral Tricker said, Certainly not, the child is no Einstein, he's just a card, that's all.

And he kept on going without telling us what eits Boswell got off lately.

Sons of Freedom Taken to Jail

Vancouver, May 4. —(CP)— Chanting a dirge-like hymn with bathtub baggage slung over their shoulders, 61 Sons of Freedom Doukhobors arrived Wednesday on their way to Oakalla prison in suburban Burnaby.

Twenty-three of the all-male contingent were convicted on nudism charges in recent trials at Nelson and Trail and will serve terms at the mainland British Columbia Penitentiary at New Westminster.

The others, also involved in the outbreak of burning and stripping the last few weeks, face trial at the Nelson Spring Assizes of arson and conspiracy charges.

Their four guards said the 400-mile trip from the interior Kootenay country where they were arrested for nude parading was "a very quiet one".

HISTORIC AREA

Fort Beausejour in New Brunswick was built by the French, between 1751 and 1755, during their long struggle with the English for the possession of Canada—but before it was actually completed it was captured by the English. During the American Revolution in 1776 it withstood an attack by the invaders. After the war of 1812-14 it gradually fell into ruin and in 1926 it was established as a National Historic Park. This photo was issued by the Department of Resources and Development which maintains the National Parks and Historic Sites Service. — (CP Photo.).

BERLIN TEAM WALKS OUT

Stockholm, May 4 — (Reuters) — A visiting Berlin soccer team, bearing "Deutschland Ueber Alles" booing repeatedly from a loudspeaker after a match here, left the field when the old German national anthem had been played 16 times.

It was later learned that a new assistant, looking for music, had put a disc of the German anthem on the stadium photograph by mistake—and was unable to stop the machine.

Kingsridge

By Alice Ross Colver

Gerry had thrown a quick look the lad beside him in his well completely adequate clothes then at the gleam and shine the roadster he was driving. could not possibly guess, of course. He would not be able to define the sordid, desperate, ngerous kind of living Gerry known. The greatest adven- Donald had ever had was go to college last September, even there he was walled out by money.

He answered the last part of question briefly, "the hard ." And something in his tone ticed Donald. But only for a moment.

That time you came to see us" said. " remember you never sked for a thing. But you had ty clear through your shoes your bare feet. And no over- t."

'd forgotten."

Only he didn't. Riding along sun-covered highway, it all came back to him and he could ll as vividly as though it were yesterday every detail of t visit. He could see himself he must have been a lad big like age, unkempt and rough looking, grown out of his jacket, grown out of his pants, his thick golden hair unruly, his eyes wistfully as he moved from tree tree across the King property from the weary nightwatchman taught him, ready to run or ready to fight on a split second notice. He had hated the need for stealth, the caution that sent to the back door, and the sight of terror in his heart that lowed his footsteps even while quickened his breath. But he had been so unsure. There were moments when he wondered that he had ventured to come at all. Seven long days Judge who sold so easily put the law on him. However, he had been comforted by a nostalgia stronger than himself, the nostalgia for a glimpse of the nearest thing he knew to home and friends before starting out on the great and dreadful experience of war. For that had been his decision. He was through with knocking about. There was an adult in it. He was through with the bleak misery of box cars and the coldness of flop houses, with the risk of stealing rides on freight cars and of wherever he could catch it. He had had enough of the disheartening search for work at so often ended in mistrust and the threat of police or in the most rehearsed and meagre pay. He had had enough of the companionship of bums and toughs of Skid Row.

Gerry had learned a lot, of course. He had learned it was best to travel alone, for one thing and in a strange town to go straight to an officer of the law. More often than not he would be given a meal in the local jail for the night where he was at least warm and dry, where he slept free of bedbugs and where he would be given a cup of coffee in the morning before being sent on his way. He could press his trousers by sleeping on them under the mattress, and he could polish his shoes with a discarded piece of grease picked up in a garage or first-class hotel. He had learned again he looked almost decent. Decent enough, anyway, to get a small job raking leaves or cleaning out gutter pipes and, with the job, money enough for a haircut. Maybe a free meal. Maybe some cast-off clothing. Oh yes! He had learned a great deal. But now he was through. He was on his way to Canada to join the Army up there. If the United States ever got into the scrap he would transfer. But in Canada, where men were needed, no one would ever check to find out his real age. No one would bother that he had no home address. It was his chance.

He had crouched for what seemed like years behind a bush peering into the big old-fashioned kitchen before him. The frosty windows had melted and ached through their broken soles, the searching wind had knifed into his thin jacket and the layers of newspaper beneath it clear to his bones until he had begun to shake uncontrollably. Yet he had stood there unable to tear himself away.

From where he hid, he could see the broad open hearth upon which a fire was blazing brightly. He could see the shining of copper pots and pans hung against the brick of the chimney, the gleaming bronze cost of the Irish setter lying outstretched against the far wall, the comfortable figure of the black-clothed housekeeper with a yellow mixing bowl in the broad lap of her starched blue gingham and her kinky gray head bent above it. He could see the round table in the centre, set with its red-checkered cloth and old John blacker than ever in his white butler's coat, tipped back in a chair beside it, spelling out words from a newspaper he held. And, seeing it all, a hard lump rose in his throat together with the familiar storm of fury in his heart. Why was he on the outside looking in this way? Why couldn't he be in there — belonging? They'd never let him. That was why! He wasn't good enough. Yet some of the same blood ran in his veins that ran in theirs.

In his aching anguish he must have made some sound, for it was then that the dog, catching his presence, had risen, pattered to the closed door, sniffed along its edge and commenced to bark. Still Gerry did not run. He could not remember now exactly how he had finally got into the kitchen. Perhaps the dog, rushing out when John opened to investigate had driven him to the only possible safety—inside. Perhaps it kind of madness had seized him and borne him forward despite himself. Perhaps he had cried out and John had recognized his voice. Anyway, in a moment he was within the house, trembling as with ague before the fire, and Nellie, her round face filled with concern, was bustling about to get him something to eat while old John piled the firewood higher.

Never so long as he lived would he forget that meal. Thin thick slabs of white bread, the mound of sweet yellow butter, the cold, sticky jam, the steaming soup, all he could eat while Nellie sat beside him shaking her gray head and muttering to herself.

"Mm-mm! This! Right here! Bress me but 'tain' right. You is one ob de family!"

And then, dashing in upon them had come young Donald followed by the small black-haired Susan, and behind them the Judge's wife.

She had been startled. He could see that. And in her startlement, angry. Where he come from? Who had let him in? Why hadn't she been told he was here? Her questions had rattled out like bullets from a machine gun, after which she had called to the children sharply and tried to get them to go out. Gerry could remember the unreasonable umph he had felt when they had refused and, eased by the fascination of the unknown, had merely come closer.

Yes, Elizabeth King had been afraid. She had looked at the dog —but Gerry had made friends with Skip by now who sat on the floor next his chair, quiet under his roughened hand, his red tail sweeping the floor in slow rhythmic sweeps.

She had lectured him, of course For running away. For showing such ingratitude to their kindness to Donald. For not telling them he'd come from him. And what was he going now? Or what did he plan to do? Had he come back to ask for help? If so,, how could he expect any?

He had answered none of her questions. Because he was afraid, too. The wrong word and he might be clapped into prison. He had simply sat there, his eyes blazing in his stony face, his heart filled to over-flowing with helpless humiliation and hate. All he could think of was "By God! Some day!"

"Fill him up, Nellie," Elizabeth had said finally, "I'll go telephone the Judge and tell him, Gerry's here."

But he was not to be caught so easily. Long before the Judge appeared, he was gone. Warmed, fed and with a five dollar bill Nellie had tucked into his hand and a pair of John's wool socks covering the holes in his shoes, he had slipped out into the darkness and started on his long trek north.

His memories had been broken into by Donald's voice beside him in the car.

"It's amazing! The way you looked then. Why, you were just a tramp. And now—" He lifted his hand in a salute. "Captain Barton, I think it's swell."

"I'm not sure your family will agree with you."

"Lookit." Donald's tone had held supreme assurance. "Don't worry about them. I'm bringing you. And now I'll tell you what you do. Walk in the front door as though you belonged there. And when I get the car put away I'll come in and back you up. What can they say?" He had been shocked and turned his face with its wide, engaging grin toward Gerry. "Snake'em up! Be a circus I'm for it. Search'em for I broke a leg."

So, Gerry thought, carefully closing the door on edge, he had come on Susan and Donald both, But for what, exactly?

It was at this moment that there came a sharp rap on his door and Susan spoke through it.

"Gerry! Are you dressed? Because if you are. I'm coming in." She hardly waited for his answer. As he turned, astounded, his corner still in her ruffle of lather still high on his cheeks, she entered. She was in black wool slacks, a short red woolly coat, red boots and mittens. Her blown dark hair was uncovered, her face, flushed yet calm, too, as if whatever she was feeling was completely under control. Carefully she closed the door and leaned against it and he heard her low husky voice with an accusing note in it.

"You went away last night with out seeing me again."

He nodded, all his senses alert from habit by what was coming, the coming might mean to him.

"Why? It wasn't nice of you. I was waiting in the conservatory. Saving all my dances the way I promised I would. And you never came."

He relaxed. "It was your grandfather's fault," he said, with the faint mockery she remembered. "He made me sing. So angry he had to get away before I broke up the furniture."

"Oh!" Then, "I'm sure you shouldn't have." She went up to him and put her red-mittened hands on his bare shoulders and shook him slightly. "I told you I was on your side! You ought not to make things so hard for me, so that I have to come down here."

Gerry caught the spicy fragrance of Susan's fresh, clean skin saw the lovely light of unselfishness in her lifted, mobile face; felt the flame of a slumbering passion trembling through her young body—and did what was for him a strange thing. He took her hands from his shoulders, backed her toward the door and pushed her out.

"We'll talk about it at breakfast. Go down and order it for both of us. I'll be with you in a moment.

Left alone he could not think what had made him behave like that. He was not here to sh- consideration toward any of the King household. He was here to wrest in any way possible whatever he could get from them in the way of help for himself. But in the instant that Susan had stood before him, he saw in a blinding flash that though she might well be the means toward this end, she could equally well be the reason for his failure. It was in a mood of confused annoyance that he went downstairs ten minutes later to join her.

He found her at the large round table which Herman, the proprietor, chef and waiter at the Inn had set up for them next to the window looking out onto the entrance drive. It was there that Donald's red roadster was parked. No one else was in the room.

"It makes you wonder," Susan said, glancing about "how this place keeps going. I guess it wouldn't if it weren't for the Rotary Club, Elks and the Tea Chers' Association meetings."

Gerry shook out his napkin, aware that for her there were no complications.

"Does your family know you're here?" he asked somewhat abruptly.

"It's none of their business."

The answer was a placid statement of fact. He glanced at her and tried again.

"Well, then is it your habit to hunt up your gentlemen friends alone in their bedrooms?"

Across her face flickered an expression of surprise and impudence, "or goodness sakes! Herman wasn't anywhere around. And I had to talk to you. I didn't think you'd be so stuffy."

He grinned suddenly. "That's the last thing I am."

"That's what I thought. It's the last thing I am too. Rectitude and decency, I have discovered, can be very rigid, very narrow, very unhelpful things."

Felt Rundown; Suffered Stomach Gas; Indigestion

Got Bilious Attacks, Dizzy Spells. Also Backache and Sore Muscles, Joints, Nerves on Edge. Couldn't Sleep. Says Syntona Helped Her.

MRS. CARRIE JAMES

"For several years I suffered with stomach trouble and constipation, but now I have obtained grand results by taking Syntona Herbal Compound," said Mrs. Carrie James, well known London, Ontario, woman, who resides at 59 Euclid Avenue.

"After my meals I would bloat with gas, sour risings came up in my throat and I'd get a dull, heavy feeling across my chest. Heartburn became very bad and I was subject to throbbing headaches. Bilious attacks would overcome me. It seemed that my entire system was run down, as I couldn't get my proper sleep at night, suffered from backache and pains set in my limbs, joints and muscles.

"It was only after several of my friends had told me about Syntona that I decided to try this medicine, and I am sorry I didn't start sooner. However, for the first time I can say positively that stomach gas never troubles me and I enjoy my meals once more. Dizziness, sour risings are cleared up and I can now free of heartburn, headache and dizzy feelings, also my nerves are calmed down as I sleep soundly and feel ever so much better in every way. The aches and pains in my back and elsewhere gradually went away.

"I am very grateful for this relief Syntona gave me and am pleased to recommend it to others suffering this same way."

Thousands of men and women rely on Syntona for relief from common disorders of the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels. Burning of Fiery Crosses Terrorizes Ontario Village

Bands of Vigilantes Warn Residents of Misconduct

Newington, May 5 (CP)—Terror gripped this tiny eastern Ontario village today as residents feared new outbreaks of cross-burning by a band of vigilantes calling themselves members of the Ku Klux Klan.

Residents, who asked that their identity be kept secret for fear of retribution, said three fiery crosses had been burned during the last month in Newington, a village of 300 in Stormont county 12 mile northwest of Cornwall.

Latest episode was Wednesday night when a blazing 25-foot cross flamed against a black sky, accompanied by overtones of chanted threats of vengeance.

80 In Band

Members of the Klan, said to number 80, claim to be the moral protectors of this sleepy little farming village. They said the crosses have been burned in front of homes where occupants have been guilty of questionable morals.

The cross-burning of the last month is said to similar weird rituals in the nearby village of Avonmore last fall.

In each case a band of men; unmasked, have issued threats of vengeance. The hooded figments of the house unless they change their ways.

Police are investigating the cross-burning which has taken place in front of homes the same hours each time.

A man who witnessed the burning but refused to be identified said the men, who came from all over Stormont County in cars, were dressed in ordinary clothing. It was impossible to tell who was leading the band.

Sees Flames

"I was just getting ready for bed when I heard sounds of loud voices," said the witness. "I thought it was a group of young fellows returning from a dance so I went upstairs."

"I started to close my back room window when I saw flames flickering in the sky. I looked and realized the cross burning. Men were marching around it chanting weird warnings about justice being done.

"All intervals one or more of the men broke ranks to build some kind of fluid at the burning cross. Each time I could hear the chanting of the Ku Klux Klan."

Police are investigating the crosses and the chanted threats of vengeance.

HOUSE DISCUSSES BUDGET MATTERS, APPROVES BILLS

Budget Provisions Will Aid Small Businesses

Ottawa, May 5—(CP)—Parliament knuckled down to business Thursday.

Much of the day was spent discussing budget matters. Then the House spent some time approving a few bills and finished with a discussion on legislation to aid veterans' allowances to British Britain.

Members from all sides of the Commons appealed to Veterans Minister Gregg to extend the provisions to widows of Imperial veterans. The minister said this could not be done, that it would create "inequities".

Given First Reading

The appeals were made during consideration of a resolution prior to an amending bill, to be introduced and given first reading. A fuller discussion of the subject is expected when the bill is discussed, possibly later in the week.

Earlier, Thursday, introduction of resolutions to bills to give legal effect to the tax changes proposed in the budget. Mr. Sinclair said greater small businesses throughout Canada will obtain tax relief under the budget provisions.

Mr. Fleming (Eglington, Toronto Eglinton) urged the government to compel private companies to distribute surpluses or undistributed profits next year if they do not comply with a provision in this year's budget. Mr. Sinclair said he doubted if such a law could be in the budget next year.

Tired of Talk

Mr. Fulton further charged the government was doing nothing to aid the country's self defence. He said he was getting tired of listening to Liberal talk of free trade and "socialistic" welfare state talk while "one of the best exponents of socialistic" was sitting in the cabinet.

Mr. Churchill said last year Canada imported $504,000,000 worth of goods from British countries. This year $521,000,000 worth had come into Canada duty free. British cars were one of the duty-free items.

Says It's a Prank

Villagers here were divided on the seriousness of the demonstrations.

A. W. Loverin, town councilman and general storekeeper, said "it's been a long time since it's all over now, and I believe the people concerned learned a lesson. All that was being done was just to scare the couple. All we want to do is forget about it. After all it was only a small cross."

Another man said he thought it was a prank for the first time it happened. But when the demonstrations continued he became concerned.

500,000 Germans Missing In U.S.S.R., Says Adenauer Demanding Kremlin Account

Frankfurt, Germany, May 5—(AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer charged today that 1,500,000 Germans are still missing in the Soviet Union. He demanded, in the name of humanity, that the Kremlin account of their fate.

Adenauer made a special appearance before the West German Parliament at Bonn after he learned of Thursday night's Soviet announcement that the repatriation of German war prisoners had been completed.

Hopes of Families Dashed

The Soviet statement dashed the hopes of families of hundreds of thousands of missing soldiers. It came as a great shock to the West German capital. Many politicians viewed it as a severe blow to the communist party in the west. When a communist deputy got up to answer Adenauer virtually the entire body of parliament left the chamber—all three communist deputies present and three others walked out.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the last group of war prisoners—17,538 of them—had been returned to Germany.

Adenauer said Soviet figures to support his claim that 1,500,000 Germans are still left in Russia. He said that in 1945 Tass reported 3,500,000 Germans held in Russia. Thursday night's announcement said 1,930,063 war prisoners had been repatriated. The Chancellor said that still leaves more than 1,500,000 unaccounted for.

Two months ago, when the Russians said virtually all captured German soldiers except war criminals had been freed, West German authorities claimed the Russians still held about 400,000. The United States and France April 25 accused the Russians of trying to hide the fate of hundreds of thousands of German prisoners still not accounted for. The West Berlin city council charged last Dec. 22 that Russia still held more than 1,000,000 German prisoners of war.

The Tass statement Thursday night said that since Germany's surrender in 1945 the Soviet Union had repatriated 1,930,163 prisoners.

Still left in the Soviet Union, Tass said, are 8,711 persons condemned for war crimes, 3,815 still held more than a year for alleged war crimes and 14 held temporarily until treatment for illness is completed.

RED RIVER FLOODS MASS FOR ATTACK ON WINNIPEG

Town of Morris Said Almost Inundated

Winnipeg, May 5. (CP)—The rampaging Red River, rapidly approaching legendary flood levels of more than a century ago, today threatened heavy inundation in this city of 300,000.

One town south of here has already been abandoned by everyone except a few soldiers working desperately to save a hospital. An aerial observer said the town, Morris, was "99 per cent under water."

As Winnipeg citizens watched and acted against the flood crest, expected tomorrow, two Canadian National Railways trains early today were stalled in 194 Morris residents, 75 railway workers and 20 members of the Morris Hospital staff. With them were 13 patients, four of them new-born babies, over the line here.

A week ago the river's present flood level would seem a peaceful nightmare. Today it is dark, fact.

At 5 a.m. C.D.T. the gauge here read 24.8 feet—17 inches above the previous record of 1948.

May Equal 1826 Flood

City engineers and historians turned back to 1852 for a parallel. Some predicted it would equal the legendary flood of 1826, when four feet of water washed sluggishly over the dyke on the corner of Portage and Main.

Since its start at Emerson, 60 miles, 60 miles south of the international border its three-week course has continued almost unchecked. Town after town reported modern records toppling. Damage would run into the millions.

The order to evacuate Morris came after a four-day struggle to keep the utter out of the last dry stronghold.

The sandbag dyke, watched on 24-hour basis, cracked Thursday night. An army duck and R.C.A.F. crew brought the hospital patients to the railway line.

In Winnipeg leaders skimped seven-tenths of an inch of rain and snow on flood-fighters of their own and their homes. The battle intensified in the suburbs and was beginning in the downtown business section.

Acheson to Seek Agreement to End W. German Control

Armed Force Will Remain To Maintain Defence Front

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, May 5 — (AP) — State Secretary Dean Acheson will seek British and French agreement in London next week for gradually reducing and eventually ending Allied occupation controls over Western Germany.

The end of the occupation — but actual withdrawal of British, French and American troops — in about 18 months is reported to be the United States objective.

Well - informed officials said today that while troops would not be pulled out under the American proposal they would be kept in Germany on a new basis, as western defence forces building a front line to meet any war rather than as occupation armies.

Acheson and his top policy advisers have exploded the German problem intensively for several weeks in preparation for his meeting with British Foreign Minister Bevin of Britain and Foreign Minister Schuman of France and for a session of the 12 countries of the North Atlantic Council in London.

In their policy considerations here, Acheson and his advisers have reported to be largely influenced by an estimate attributed to the U. S. High Commissioner in Germany, John J. McCloy. McCloy is said to have advised the State Department that the western powers have only about 18 months to two years to settle the future of Germany as far as they control it.

His views are described as being based partly on the idea that Russia is constantly growing stronger and therefore more able to make western Europe far more vast in the struggle for control of all Germany. Partly too, he is said to feel that the occupation continued for too long loses its effectiveness and begins to create strong resentment in the subject population.

U.S. Charges Russian Account Of Baltic Incident 'Erroneous'

Washington, May 5 — (AP)— The United States has charged Russia with flouting its international obligations in dealing with the Baltic plane incident.

In a new note to Moscow, the State Department said Russia had given Sinclair an "erroneous account" of the shooting down of the American plane April 8.

The note said:

"The government of the United States must warn the government of the Soviet Socialist Republics that its statement has not only failed to meet but has no intention of meeting the obligations which international law and practice impose on members of the family of nations.

"It is clear that his disregard of these obligations by one member of mankind constitutes a further obstacle to the establishment of harmonious relations among nations and cannot be reconciled with the Soviet government's continued protestations of its devotion to the cause of peace."

The note was delivered to Moscow by Ambassador Allan G. Kirk and was made public here by the state department.

The note made it plain that the dangers and hazards of flying over the loss of the unarmed navy privateer plane in the Baltic area with 10 men aboard have reached an impasse.

That is a statement from which further progress cannot be made, the United States said in effect, that "it is clearly impossible to reopen this issue so long as the Soviet government refuses in good base its position upon the facts of the case."

3,000 Evacuate Town, Return As Gas Leak Stopped

Oslo, Norway, May 5. (AP)—Fear of escaping poisonous chlorine gas from a leaking container caused doctors today to order the evacuation of 3,000 persons from a district around the Glomma river in Southern Norway.

Broadcast reports of the gas leak sent many residents hurrying to neighboring villages in terror.

Police said the leakage was stopped in the hills and the population was told it was safe to return to their homes.

An explosion in the electrolytic department of the plant was responsible for the leakage. Some workers are in hospital suffering gas and were ill. Doctors said their illness was not serious.

Sarpsborg is in the extreme southeast of Norway near the Swedish border.

Career Could Not be Halted By Prison Camp

Windsor, May 5—(CP)—A man whose singing career couldn't be halted by prison camp and service in a German prison camp will give a concert in Windsor tomorrow.

He is Ukrainian-born Petro Boyan-Bolotwinsky, who came to Canada a year ago after long hospitalization in Germany following his release from Ebensee internment camp.

A baritone, he will give a concert sponsored by the Windsor Ukrainian Relief Committee.

In an interview, he said he was forced from the German camp by United States paratroopers who stopped just as guards were preparing to throw dead fellow prisoners into a pit to die. His weight had dropped from 240 pounds to 90 pounds in the camp.

Before the war he studied at Milan, Italy, and Lowow, Poland, and had begun a career with the Munich Opera.

Two Youths Flee Motorboat Fire

North Bay, May 5. (CP)—Two youths escaped an engine Thursday night forced two North Bay youths to spend two minutes in the icy waters of Lake Nipissing a mile from shore.

Bob Rosborough, 15, and Dale Nelly, 17, plunged into the lake when a torrent of blazing gasoline poured from the engine and seemed about to fill the boat. They decided against trying to swim to shore, but kept themselves afloat near the motorboat until the flames died down.

Then they put the fire out and headed to the shore with an old board.

RETAIL COSTS UP COST OF LIVING HITS NEW PEAK

Ottawa, May 5 — (CP)—Retail prices for a wide range of family commodities edged upwards in March following a general pattern at the wholesale level.

With retail prices for beef, eggs, coffee and anthracite coal pointing the way, the March cost-of-living index moved up three-tenths of a point to set a new peak of 164.5. The index is calculated on the basis that 1935 - 39 prices equal 100.

Other price increases were noted by the Bureau of Statistics Thursday in drugs, cost of operating automobiles and floor coverings. Footwear and clothing dipped slightly.

As a result of the retail price changes, the basic index moved from August, 1939, to March 31, 1950, the cost-of-living index advanced 62.7 per cent.

Sub-Groups Up

Among the various sub-groups in which the index is divided, foods provided for one - half of the March advance by climbing from 204.9 to 206.3, just 4.7 points from the record 209.2 last July.

Price advances for anthracite coal in Ontario and Quebec provided the impetus for the other part of the index advances, sending the fuel and lighting sub - group to a record of 140.3 from 136.2.

In the housefurnishings group, the advance in floor-covering prices moved that column from 163.9 to 166.4 — a one-tenth of a point increase, bringing that group to within 1-7 points of the record of 168.1 touched last August.

Higher prices for drugs and for automobiles operations moved the miscellaneous sub - group two-tenths of a point upward to a record 122.9 from 122.7.

Continuing a downward trend which became evident earlier in the year, the clothing sub-index slipped two-tenths of a point from 214.4 to 214.2.

Rents were not surveyed and the sub-index remained unchanged at the record of 122.7, reached after an advance of 7.7 points in February.

On the wholesale side, the index for industrial material prices fell by one - tenth of April 21, compared with 153.1 for the week of March 31. Wholesale farm prices gained seven-tenths of a point between March 31 - April 28, from 147.9 to 148.6.

Minister Refuses to Baptize Infants, Ordered Not to Preach After Sunday

Bethany, Ont., May 5 (CP) — Rev. W. N. Crandall, a United Church minister whose refusal to baptize infants has stirred touched off a theological row, has been ordered not to preach from his pulpit after Sunday.

Following a meeting here Thursday night between a committee of the Peterborough Presbytery and the official board of Mr. Crandall's, Bethany-Velverton-Ebeneezer circuit, he was told that he may stay at his parsonage until the end of June.

Church members divided when the United Church minister refused to baptize infants because of his desire "to get back to the teachings of Christ."

He could find no justification in Scripture for the baptism, he told the 150 village 19 miles west of Peterborough. His congregation includes some 500 persons.

Mr. Crandall feels there if my congregations had been given a chance to express some opinion on the matter," Mr. Crandall said. "I always thought they should be given a chance to take any action."

The minister added:

"In my vows I said I'd preach nothing contrary to the Bible and there's nothing in the Bible about infant baptism." Because infants have not reached the "age of discretion," he believes they are incapable of accepting all that the church says baptism means.

Police Chief John Chisholm and Senior Police Commissioner Robert Browns said the charges, made by Harvey Andrew, former municipal police officer, will be investigated thoroughly.

Chief Chisholm said: "There are two sides to every story and if we are to be fair, we must not prejudice this situation until all the facts are ascertained."

Andrew, a merchant, said Thursday night that the policemen asked him as he passed them in their car. They stopped the car, said they pushed him around and struck him. He charged that flight he was kicked in the face and that most of his teeth, he said.

Andrew was arrested after the incident. He pleaded guilty the next morning to a charge of drunk and was fined $10.

He was treated and released in hospital in Brampton Thursday.

Tredway's counsel had been charged jointly following the death of Lorraine Hall, 20, and her niece, Barbara Jones, 5, of North Bathurst St.

Y's Men, Board Hear Address On World Trip

C. F. Basil Tippet, prominent Toronto business man and outstanding Y.M.C.A. leader was the speaker at the joint meeting of Y's Men's Club and the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. in the association auditorium Wednesday evening. The occasion was an international fellowship celebration. Representatives of various clubs of the association were also present.

In the interest of the Y.M.C.A., Mr. Tippet, completed recently a five months' world trip in which he travelled 37,000 miles and visited 16 countries on four continents and seven seas. He is also head of the association. His address was a recounting of the experiences when he met with citizen groups, Y.M.C.A. members and government officials under a variety of interesting circumstances. Festival celebrations, routine business or programs schedules and leisure time were among the occasions.

The speaker named as the outstanding features of his trip his ability to find what he termed oasis of Christian influences in Y.M.C.A. communities while work where there is a lack of value placed on Christian principles. In many of the places it was difficult for people to understand the idea of association individual need is not accepted as a concern such as it is known in Christian democratic societies.

Pioneering Movements

He saw in the various associations the results of pioneering which had been given by Canadian Y.M.C.A. people. Many of the programs now common in parts of Canada were pioneering movements by the Y.M.C.A. in countries he visited. Educational classes, health and medical services, residential buildings, child care, agriculture and a great number of similar activities were new ideas for the masses so that the associations included them in their programs along with the recreational activities, games, social activities, study groups and the other features known in Canada.

The speaker expressed the opinion that the support of this work was a safeguard against the impact of ideologies which break down the sacredness of personality and urged that it be continued.

A. J. Davis introduced the speaker and W. H. Finkle expressed the thanks of the meeting. John W. Deacon, president of the Y.M.C.A. Board, whose vocal selections were greatly appreciated, expressed thanks to the speaker on behalf of the association for the inspiration he had given. Gerry B. Hyde presided.

The famous dog will be taken on a visit to all the schools in the city where he will give an exhibition on traffic safety rules. "Knee-Hi" is being brought to the city through the effort of the Kinsmen Club.

A colorful welcome parade will be staged for the famous dog on Wednesday evening commencing at seven p.m., the parade to consist of bands, clowns, girl guides, the St. John Ambulance Brigade, decorated bicycles and motorcycles and the mayor's car. All dogs taking part in the parade will be required to be on a leash. The route of the parade will be from Front Street to Bridge; up Bridge to Pinnacle and then to Campbell and Bridge Streets.

At a point on Front Street between Campbell and Bridge Streets "Knee-Hi" will give a safety demonstration, the demonstration to be in charge of Dr. Bronson of the Ballard Dog Food Company.

"Knee-Hi" has given demonstrations of safety before literally thousands of Canadian citizens and school officials and his appearance in Belleville should attract wide attention.

Black Hawk Hockey Awards Arrive in City

Manager Bill Cook of the Belleville Rockets junior "B" hockey club beamed with pride this morning when the mail brought a handsome windbreaker bearing the crest and other insignia of the Chicago Black Hawks.

It was the gift of President Bill Tobin of the Hawks hockey club of the National League to the Rockets as the most valuable to the Rockets team during the past season.

And now a bit less proud was Don Hogan, starry centre of the team who was the winner of the windbreaker.

Accompanying the windbreaker was the handsome Black Hawk Trophy and medals, the gift of Tobin to the bantam and midget teams.

The trophy is awarded to the champions of the Belleville Hockey Association Bantam League which in its first season of operation are the Dan Cowley-coached Red Wings.

Medals topped with red-white and blue ribbons are also awarded to bantam champions and to the B.H.A. midget team as well.

The windbreakers, trophy and medals are now on display in the window of Jack McNab's "Sportsmen's Centre" on Front Street.

10,000 Persons Received Pamphlets At Belleville Booth During Show

At the Cleveland Sportsmen's Show held in Cleveland, Ohio, the Belleville and District Hotel Association in conjunction with the City of Belleville and Hastings County shared a double booth during the season for promoting the tourist attractions in this area.

The booth of this district offered a free vacation for two weeks for two persons, room, meals, golf, boat to the winner of the draw.

The Cleveland Show attracted over 100,000 persons and 10,000 of these registered and received pamphlets about the hotels and this district.

Canton Man Winner

The winning ticket was drawn on the closing night by Capt. Bob Giles, noted fisherman and casting judge. The winner was Ed. Auslon, 1325 Fifth N.W.St., Canton, Ohio. The winning ticket number was 8326.

Cleveland Sportmen's Show is one of the largest in the United States.

Horned Lunge

Centre of attraction for a large number of visitors to the booth was the mounted head of a 70-pound lunge. Visitors stared at a pair of deer horns which "grew" out of the side of the head which, as a lot of them did not know were placed there by a taxidermist. It was loaned to the booth by Tom Ziegler of Madoc, and named "Jumpin' Jehoshapat".

Pictures of Belleville, the northern lakes and hotels of the district along with a large framed map of the county against a green background made a very attractive booth.

Booth Attendants

The following manned the booth during the show; Hotelmen, B. Yanovcy, G. Hagin, Bastier Labarr, Belleville, D. Wark, Picton and L. Bird, Madoc. The city of Belleville was represented by Ald. C. Tice, Chairman of Tourist and Publicity, and Mayor Allin was represented by Reeve Jack Kincaid of Madoc.

Member hotels of this association are as follows; Belleville, Belvedere, Quinte, City, Crystal, Docters, Queens and Quinte, Trenton — Gilbert, Queensway, Quinte, Picton—Royal and Rickarton, Campbellford—Wayside, Richelieu, Queens and Napanee, Madoc—Blue's, Marmora—Royal, Maynooth—Maynooth, Bancroft—Northbrook, Stoco—Lake Stoco, Eldorado—Churchill; Lake, Marlbank—O.K. House, Tamworth—Tamworth, Marysville—Marysville and Shannonville — Wayside Inn, Tweed—Tweedsmuir.

It is felt that having a booth at the Cleveland show will bring many more tourists to Belleville and Hastings County and we know that 10,000 more people know about this district than before.

Kinsmen Estimate Swimming Pool Will Accommodate 4,000 Yearly

A season's total of approximately 40,000 children and adults enjoying the facilities of a modern and up-to-date swimming pool is the objective of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville in launching their current campaign to raise funds for their community swimming pool project.

The above is a conservative estimate as the number of Belleville persons who could be expected to use the pool during a season and at the same time contribute towards its support.

Because, contrary to general opinion a swimming pool, properly managed and operated, is a self-supporting venture and not a millstone around the neck of the committee or municipality operating it.

In fact there is every expectation that a swimming pool in Belleville would show a surplus at the end of each operating season.

Admission Charged

Although admissions would be charged during the afternoon and evening, there would be free swimming in the mornings for children under 12 years of age. It is expected that approximately 10,000 children would take advantage of morning swimming period. The charge for admission in afternoons would be 15 cents for children and 35 cents for adults, with fees extra additional on Sundays and holidays.

Admissions, together with subletting of the refreshment centre, could be expected to total nearly $7,000 for the season.

As against this there would be estimated expenditure of slightly over $5,000. This would include $4,035 for salaries and wages for supervisors, night cleaners, lifeguards and checkers. Power with materials and chemicals for a season's operation would cost $400; first aid equipment $50; water supply $100 and repairs and painting $300 or a total of $5,085.

An operating period of approximately 100 days (June 1st to September 8th is anticipated for the purpose with swimming pool with hours of operation from 2:00 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and from 1:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Sunday operation would be from 1:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m.

Under 15 free

Children under 15 years would be admitted free during the mornings with 15 cent fee prevailing for children on weekday afternoons and 20 cents for Sundays and holidays. The adult rate would be 35 cents, or 40 cents for Sundays and holidays. Admission would include changing of clothes. No admission would be charged for the pool.

Personnel required for operation of the swimming pool would be a pool manager, a pool captain, lifeguard; five lifeguards, arranged according to the number of persons using the pool; two men and two women checkers, and two night cleaners.

Dimensions of the pool will be 50 by 100 feet with a wading pool of 50 by 20 feet. Total cost of the pool, complete with wading pool, bath house, grounds and fencing is estimated at $50,000, broken down into $35,000 for the pool, $4,000 for the wading pool, $15,000 for the bathhouse and $6,000 for the grounds and fencing.

The advantages of the swimming pool, supervised operation with safeguard of lives and safeguarding of health through pure water, clean bath houses and fencing against "Water in the pool is filtered daily with the entire water in the pool being changed regularly.

It is to provide such a pool the members of the local Kinsmen Club this month are asking contributions from Belleville citizens. The objective is $50,000. Be generous when the Kinsmen canvasser calls.

Firecracker Sets House Roof Afire

A young boy playing with firecrackers in the yard responsible for a roof fire which Friday afternoon resulted in a call to firemen to 189 James Street the residence of G. W. Reid. Shingles on the roof of the house were discovered ablaze by a passerby who turned in the alarm.

A short time previous to the alarm a member of the household chanced to look out the window and saw a small boy toss a lighted firecracker into the air as he passed in front of the house. It is believed the firecracker dropped on the roof and set fire to the wooden shingles.

Boys Found Operating Tractor On Display Yard

Two teen-aged city youths with liking for farm machinery had a bit of fun at the Cockshutt farm implement display yard on Front Street last evening before Police Chief Walter Probert at the police station.

Between ten and eleven o'clock the two young lads were found to be operating one of the farm tractors on display in the yard. The owner was called by police but no damage to the machine or equipment was reported. The boys were asked to report to Police Chief Walter Probert at the police station.

Robt. Walsh, a 13-year-old Corbyville lad, was reported missing from his home since May 2nd. The lad, 4 ft. 6 in height and weighing 110 pounds was said to have been wearing a red sweat shirt, gray trousers and high leather boots.

Fined for Allowing Dogs Run at Large

When the family dog takes his exercise it is better and cheaper to have him take it on the end of a leash.

At least that is what two local residents discovered this week when they were called upon to pay $5.50 fine and costs for allowing their dogs run at large.

Last April 22rd the two city owned dogs had gone for a bit of a romp in Thurlow township and ended up by chasing a farmer's cows. Complaints were made with result that charges were preferred by County Constable Thomas Thorn.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 5 — (CP) — Prices pushed slowly higher in brisk trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. A handful of market leaders brightened quietly. Gains spread steadily over the big board.

Volume for the first three hours was 1,074,000 shares.

Base metals were strongest in early dealings but slipped slightly as the session progressed. A late burst of selling Thursday pushed the list down from new peak price levels. The group has moved narrowly despite price increases in silver, lead and zinc Thursday and increases in copper, lead and zinc last week.

Fractional advances were scattered among a handful of leading industrials. Papers moved narrowly on profit-taking on recent strong advances.

Golds brightened in mid-session from opening weakness. Junior producers chalked up gains ranging up to 10 cents. Newland Mines featured on a 10-cent gain at 81.40 in heavy trading.

Western oils also recovered early losses. Home Oil, Anglo-Canadian and Dentalta pushed into plus territory.

Fishing and Restful Accommodation Two Main Inquiries of Tourists

Inquiries about tourist accommodations and requests for general information regarding vacation facilities throughout Canada, many of them concerning Belleville and district, are pouring into the Dominion and Provincial tourists bureaus in ever increasing quantities, Freeman E. Burrows, chairman, Belleville Chamber of Commerce, reported today.

All of the requests for general information as to holiday and tourist facilities are forwarded to the Chamber of Commerce from government tourist bureaus in Ottawa and Toronto.

Well over 25 per cent of these inquiries are of direct interest in the city and surrounding towns. In addition to the inquiries that come through government bureaus, numerous letters asking about conditions in the local tourist and vacation region come directly from many parts of the United States.

All of these requests are answered immediately, Mr. Burrows emphasized.

A large amount of local tourist information recently has been sent to Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and the New England States.

Many holiday-seekers ask about fishing conditions. Others simply want to know "if there is some place in Canada where we can spend a quiet holiday?"

Particular attention is paid to these requests, Mr. Burrows said, for it is here that Belleville and region offer a natural advantage.

"The summer tourist season is just opening, and we should resolve now to offer visitors from the United States and other parts of Canada the best accommodations possible," he declared.

Sixardee Trims ANAF Veterans By 7-2 Count

6 R.D. took two points from the Army and Navy Vets in their Bay of Quinte Soccer League match at the fairgrounds last night. The game started off during the rain and consequently only a handful of supporters were on hand to cheer the players on. The vets were unfortunate in losing the services of Andrews in the first five minutes of the game when he pulled a thigh muscle, and had to play short handed until the second half when their sub R. Telford reported to the ground. But for this the score would not have been so one-sided.

6 R.D. ran out the eventual winners by seven goals to two. Rimmer scored the first goal for the airmen and this was equalled by a goal for the Vets by Ashton. Eatherly scored a picture goal for the Depot squad from about 40 yards, and this was followed up by goals from Law and Woodcock to make the first half score 4-1 in favor of 6 R.D.

Second half goals were netted by Eatherly and Bradley for the airmen and the best goal of the match was scored by Smith for the Vets when he was relieved in goal by R. Telford.

Teams: 6 R.D.—Law, Eatherley, Rimmer, McNeil, Fletcher, Chilton, Wright, Adcock, Batt, Land, Woodcock. Subs—Bradley, Harrison, Robinson.

Vets—Smith, Burns, Browning, Gallinger, Revoy, Reid, Ashton, F. Telford, Bayley, Ellis, Andrews. Sub. E. Telford.

Referee—Bob Murphy.

Taxmg Capital Gains Retards Investment Buying

Vancouver, May 5 — (CP) Fear of the federal government's taxation policy on capital gains has slowed investment buying in Canada, it was reported today in business circles.

Taxation authorities find a tendency to tax profits of certain transactions as capital gains, causing, it is claimed, slowness in the flow of risk capital.

Government officials are following tax laws to the letter, but it is reported the present act is not definite in showing the boundaries of income itself.

"Under the new law and by recent decisions of the courts, we are seeing what we used to consider capital gains, taxed unfer the guise of income," H. Howard Stikeman told a meeting of businessmen here.

Mr. Stikeman is a Canadian member of the International Association for Public Finance and Fiscal Law.

He says it now is technically possibly to tax all stock market trades where it can be established the shares were purchased with the intention they should be sold for a profit in a business way rather than held for an investment.

Finance Minister Abbott decided such an intention in his budget speech. But Mr. Stikeman said:

"Business and professional men alike are left to determine whether a transaction gives rise to taxable income or not as best they can.

"The whole taxation structure is so complex, that an accountant and lawyer now have to conduct preventive tax practices. He must also advise his client in advance of any transaction that the tax danger is minimized wherever legally possible under the law."

He said the uncertainty is a result of defective draftsmanship, or lack of foresight on the part of legislators.

Mr. Stikeman said such a levy will slow down investments, especially in Western Canada, where there are large capital expenditures either pending or under way.

"The lack of precession," he said, "leaves the business community in a state of increasing uncertainty and now is tending to inhibit the risking of capital by any venture which might possibly lead to the taxation of profits revived."

MOIRA FUELS SAYS

WE APOLOGIZE...

For our failure during recent months to give the service and the quality on which we pride ourselves. But really it was beyond our control. The long strike at the coal mines made it quite impossible for us to maintain our deliveries and we were forced to do the best that we could; and that was not quite enough. We are very sorry.

HOWEVER —

THIS IS ANOTHER COAL YEAR, AND WE HAVE A FEW SUGGESTIONS TO MAKE:

1. NOW IS THE TIME
For you to have your fuel bin filled. COAL IS CHEAPER than it is likely to be later, BECAUSE the suppliers have reduced the price during the Summer months, BUT, they are increasing it each month beginning the end of May.

2. NOW IS THE TIME
For you to have your fuel bin filled, BECAUSE, generally speaking, the quality of the coal received during the Summer months is better.

3. NOW IS THE TIME
For you to have your fuel bin filled, BECAUSE, we are better able to wash it and to treat it to reduce dust, and to deliver it to you in better condition than in later months.

4. NOW IS THE TIME
For you to have your fuel bin filled, BECAUSE, we are able to offer our BUDGET PLAN to you. By making arrangements now, you will be able to obtain your season's supply NOW when it is cheaper and better, and arrange your payments on a monthly basis at a very small cost. Think of the comfort you will have, with your fuel in and the payments arranged with a minimum of convenience and hardship.

5. NOW IS THE TIME
For you to have your furnace and pipes cleaned. A clean furnace reduces the deterioration to your equipment and also reduces your fuel costs, because clean equipment takes less fuel to heat. Our expert mechanics with their Vacuum Cleaner will do this for you at a very small cost and with no dirt in your home or any other inconvenience.

CANADIAN TOURIST SPENDS MOST

The head of the Canadian Travel Bureau has said something which throws a light on the Canadian when he goes abroad.

He spends more money than a citizen of any other country in the world.

Mr. Leo Dolan was testifying before the Senate Committee on Tourist Traffic on Thursday and he said if he could get expenditures of American tourists to within fifty per cent of what Canadians spend when they go abroad, he would solve in short order the U.S. dollar problems of the Canadian Minister of Finance.

The proof we have, Americans spent it is estimated $270,000,000 of the $288,000,000 left in Canada last year by a record number of visitors. But in the same period Canadians who went to the United States spent no less than $164,000,000.

For the future he said the tourist trade shows buoyancy and progress. Inquiries for tourist information are running about 19 per cent higher than in the first four months of 1949.

Canadian effort to bring in a record number of visitors is very thorough and Canadian Travel Bureau advertisements, he says, are spread clear across the United States.

The result should be a very large crop of tourists.

The nation is spending on advertising one cent of every dollar which flows into Canada by touring parties. One hundred for one is a good return.

AGAINST NATURE'S FORCES

When the will of man is pitted against the might of the forces of nature as in the present flooding by the Red River which has laid a rough hand on the fertile land and populated areas through which it flows, he somehow gets through as he has always done in history whatever the disaster may be. It is a long time since man cannot be conquered by the rampaging of rivers or by the violence of earthquakes.

Occupying a high spot in the news these days is the record of the trains which cross the continent and which have kept the country subsisting by the bringing in of food, including milk and supplies to the flood areas.

High praise is given the railroaders by the Winnipeg Tribune which says that when the forces of nature go on rampage the railways prove in dramatic fashion their dedication to community service and reliability. To railroaders flood, blizzard, fire and avalanche are challenges to be met and vanquished.

"When nature is smiling, other forms of transport function in high gear. But in times of emergency the iron horse comes into its own.

"The situation which has developed when the floods caused by the Red River is proof enough of this claim." The worst floods since 1897 isolated the towns of Rosenfeld and Somerdean. Sections of track between Morris and these communities were washed out. Tuesday evening a work train left Winnipeg carrying 70 men, ties and repair materials. By noon Wednesday a train went through to the isolated towns carrying milk and other supplies.

"In times of trouble the railways prove beyond doubt that they are the backbone of the country's transportation system."

Man has taken his stand in many precarious positions in the world and maintained his position, let the rampaging waters do what they will. He has thrown bridges, built on the principles of natural law which cross vast caverns, and he has learned to control the rivers and streams even when she is inclined to run wild. To see people sticking to their farms and houses with the rising water all around is just an instance of the brave front that man puts forth as he meets the calamities of flood, fire and other angry forces. He has harnessed streams and made them deliver electricity, that great force which must be credited with a great deal of the expansion and progress of the present age. In conquering a new continent, the people of Canada and the United States have had to overcome mighty obstacles. Problems yet remain but engineering moves on solid foundations. A great deal of the New World's progress has come from the use of science and engineering, a world has been made larger, its forces have been applied to issues that rise and are solved to make clear the way to continued advance.

HISTORICAL BROADSHEET

240 years ago (April 20th 1710) four Mohawk Chiefs travelled to London for an audience with Queen Anne. The occasion was celebrated the following day in a broadsheet reproducing the "Speech of the Four Indian Kings." The broadsheet will be auctioned at Sotheby's in May.

Majestic as a Canadian winter is, it lacks that inspiration and sense of life that a Canadian spring possesses with the balmy air, and the stirring in nature which is putting color into the grass again to clothe the earth in beauty, richness and suggestion.

TIME

It time be beauty's enemy
And of all strength the foe,
Why should our birthday wishes be
That old age friends may know?

Time is certain to destroy
The charm which youth allows,
Why do we wish our friends the joy
Of gray and furrowed brows?

I hold that time must be
A man's friend,
And age a joyous thing
With peace and pleasure at the end
That nothing else can bring.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

Dogs and horses are not the only creatures of habit. A well-trained dog or horse is one in which habit has been implanted and it likes a plaster cast.

Habit can become a plaster cast around human beings as well. And the time to realize it is when, in your fifties you have a couple of teeth out.

You come home from the dentist with say, the top left-hand side of your face still mildly frozen with novocaine, and your tongue trying to avoid exploring the large sanguinary gap in your insensible gums.

In two or three hours, the freezing is wearing off; a numb ache begins cautiously to assert itself; the gauze packing has been brought to under control that all the bleeding will cease the last little bit of a flick at the already closing crater in the jaw.

At supper, you manage very nicely, having been reminded by the family, to chew on the right side. By bedtime, the wound has almost ceased to irritate a little salty; it is swollen, smooth, lumpy, and with that "Cut go" feeling of feeling the whole incident is closed.

But you reckon without habit. Habit and your tooth brush. Up you get in the morning vaguely recollecting yesterday, with its fears and anxieties, its pains and surmountable ills, its reliefs and subsidings. Habit has you, as you reach for your pocket comb. Habit seizes you and hustles you to the bathroom. Habit lifts your hand and draws it on your tooth brush. And habit sends that prickly, spiney, new Lazy Lizzie into one awful and practised jab, far into the red-hot, tender crevasse.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

THE SAUCER THAT CHEERS

At the risk of being laughed out of court and countenance, I'd like to report that I've seen Flying Saucers.

It happened on a clear and moon-minus night two summers ago in Newtown, Conn., on the farm of the home belonging to Paul Osborne, the playwright. Among my fellow guests were Paul and his wife, Director Josh Logan and his missus, and author John Hersey and his. What's more, none of us was in his cups the night we sighted the flying saucery.

The show began about 10 p.m. while we were sitting outdoors, enjoying and admiring the moon and the first thing we noticed were several searchlights some miles away shooting their yellow fingers into the sky. A few minutes later, there was a celestial chinaware skittered into view, and from then until midnight they skipped and danced above us in bewildered heads.

Frankly say I could judge, there Whatsizes were at least 200 feet in diameter and flew at a cruising altitude of from 3,000 to 5,000 feet. Their edges gave off a ghostly glow, and from the bottom a long tubing seen through a heavy fog.

When the searchlights finally cut off and the discs got lost in the stars, we put what was left of our wits together and decided that what we had witnessed must have been some kind of hallucination. Mass daydream. We also decided that, if we ever saw them again, we'd fly net slipped over our heads, it would be smart to keep our lips zipped about the whole thing.

How come, then, that with my back to the barn, I'm telling it? Well, I'm spilling the story now! Well, until yesterday, the Osborne Sunday pancakes has been more loose than lucid—according to the testimony of those who've had my Martians two inches tall; that I've been on a Benzedrine binge, or that I've been seeing two droshkies wide. Recently, however, documentation has begun to come to Osborne, and it's becoming evident that the overgrown manchild never was not only real, but, despite all denials, one of the top secret weapons in our own Navy and Air Force.

The most convincing testimony was offered April 3rd by Henry J. Taylor on a General Motors broadcast over the ABC network. Taylor, after treking all around the country and talking to people who had been touched with it, even flown these credulity-cracking craft, made the following flat and unfrivolous statements about them:

One type of saucer is the "true" disc, which ranges anywhere from 6 inches to 200 feet in diameter, is unmanned and generally guided by some form of remote control. The other is a jet driven platter which carries a crew and is capable of such supersonic speeds that in flight it looks like a hundred-foot flaming cigar.

Furthermore, according to Henry J., a "true" disc was actually photographed near Wildwood, N.J., another was found in the vicinity of Galveston, Texas, and stenciled on its surface was the following:

MILITARY SECRET OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA Anyone disclosing the following description or whereabouts of this missile is subject to prosecution by the United States government. Call collect at once. (Then a long distance telephone number, and the address of a U. S. Air Force base.) I am convinced that the ambulant or injection treatment of hemorrhoids is not the method of choice and is permanent in its result.

"I know what these so-called flying saucers are used for," Taylor continued solemnly. "The military authorities are ready to reveal the secret to the world. It's a joy to tell you the whole story, for it is good news — wonderful news!

Well, I don't know what the wilks out there are hiding. Apart of this and other reports — plus the evidence of my own bugeyes — I am convinced they exist, and praise the Lord and pass the ammunition. Even the newspapers please copy.

As you may remember, I wrote a piece recently about the bureaucratic blabbermouths in our nation's capital who, at the drop of a dalquist, blurt out top military secrets to anyone who will listen. Well, I'm plenty happy to learn that — at least as regards our secret weapon — there are some folks in Washington who not only know how to keep their mouths shut, but are also capable of keeping them open.

Henry J. Taylor, in his broadcast, said that I am prepared to photograph and want until I can grasp the moment that it presents a living musical composition. I watch people when they are not being the great masterpiece of painting, the living musical composition that is the silent music that it stirs within their very souls, for I too am a musician, but of the silent scale!

Then, too, we can look into the glorious heavens at night, on a sky ravished with stars, and on the wonderful formations played among the blue, and feel that we are listening to the silent music spontaneously composed for our enjoyment and spiritual nourishment. Then we can look upon any one of the great paintings of Wagels, Mozarts, Beethovens, or Winslow Homer, without feeling that he is listening to divine music magically composed!

Moscow Silent On Lie's Visit To The Kremlin

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press News Analyst

Whatever one may believe about the question of secret growing out of the U.N. security council, Trygve Lie's visit to Moscow in search of peace, it is an adventure which is attracting world attention and it will be followed with many good wishes.

It's a good thing that there are those who are persistent in the search for peace. Maybe some of us are a bit too cynical.

Of course, there would be grave danger if the search for peace were mistaken in Moscow for appeasement. That would happen if a peace mission were sponsored by an individual country, or even by a group of the democracies.

But Lie's quest is an entirely different affair. His position as head of the United Nations makes it up to him to visit any part of the world. He is equally the representative of all countries. His job is to unite the U.N. work, and apparently it is on that universal basis that he has proceeded to Moscow next week.

The big point of interest is whether Lie will see Premier Prime Minister Stalin. The secretary-general hopes to meet Mr. Stalin. Obviously the big point Moscow thus far has been silent.

Saw Stalin In 1946

Lie did visit Marshal Stalin in November, 1946, a few months after he took office, when Foreign Minister, sat in on the conference. He called upon Stalin to call Stalin's attention to the Soviet Union's excessive use of the veto power. He also asked Stalin if this couldn't be stopped.

Molotov is said to have glowered in anger at Lie for raising that issue, but Stalin amiably replied that he would consider the matter. The only answer Lie ever received was when Andrei Gromyko, Soviet delegate to the U.N., walked up to him at organization headquarters and said with a grin:

"You may be interested in hearing that our policy is unchanged."

Western diplomats in Moscow take a dim view of Lie's chances of accomplishing much towards settling the cold war or any of the major issues. Still, there are those who feel that he may be able to lay the groundwork for something which would develop to-wards peace.

SPEAKING OF PILES —

It is to be expected that a doctor who has mastered a particular way or method of dealing with a disease, is loathe to change his method in favor of another which requires additional time and experience to learn.

In a text-book on surgery, I recently came across the statement that the injection method of treating hemorrhoids was "palliative". A palliative method is one which aims not at cure but at temporary relief or improvement.

A physician who has for twenty years employed outstanding success in the injection treatment of hemorrhoids, tells me that the injection treatment is not palliative—but curative. He states that he has often witnessed recurrences of hemorrhoids in patients upon whom he has previously operated, but has rarely ever seen a case recur following the injection treatment.

Of these two opposed statements, I have heretofore and intend hereafter to string along with the latter. I am convinced that the ambulant or injection treatment of hemorrhoids is the method of choice and is permanent in its result.

The ambulant treatment is given in the doctor's office. Each treatment requires but a few minutes. The treatment is practically painless and often no more than five or six treatments are necessary to complete cure. The patient walks out just as he walked after the treatment as he walks in. There is no time off and no disability. If the surgical treatment could match these two it would sign-away on the advantages of the ambulant method.

The surgical treatment of hemorrhoids requires time off for hospitalization. It requires ether and drugs in addition to the doctor's bill. It imposes disability on the patient a surgical procedure which always ends up with a wound pressure the matter of surgical hazard.

It is claimed by some surgeons that post-operative pain and disability can be greatly reduced by following certain procedures and techniques. I am not disposed to argue this point. I will say that the universal fear of pain incident to a hemorrhoid operation is not entirely dispelled upon imagination.

Some surgeons who do not, for various reasons, employ the ambulant method, often condemn the procedure by faint praise. This is not remarkable. Particularly any surgical procedure comes in for criticism, particularly by those who have been discouraged after a few trials, or by those who have no personal experience whatever with the method.

This applies to several modern operations, championed by experienced men, and criticised by others—such as the nerve-stitch operation in peptic ulcer and the nerve-cutting operation in hypertension.

A difference of opinion will always exist in things medical.

The ambulant treatment, like any other procedure, requires training and experience. As already stated, there is no more reason to think that a novice will perform it more proficient in his first few trials than he would at any academic study.

The ambulant treatment has stood the test of time. The statement that results are "temporary" cannot be supported by the experience of those who have had many years of experience in this field.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Cold Shots

Please give me your opinion of cold shots for children. My baby girl 2½ years old. — Mrs. R. T.

Answer—The virus causing the common cold has not yet been identified, although it is known for the purpose is a shot in the dark. Forget it.

Varicose Veins

Am doing the bicycle exercise hoping to clear up bunchy varicose veins. (Miss B. N.)

Answer—Such exercises are beneficial in limiting the development of varicosities but the condition has become "bunchy", only proper treatment will cure—injection or tying of veins.

Piles

Doctor told me he never heard of the injection treatment for piles. Is it tested by science? (D. W. M.)

Answer—A great many doctors have had no experience with the injection method. To operate is the easiest way out—but the safest, for the surgeon and others, or our own ultimate happiness, by doctoring up a case of alcohol with something to make it potable and then smacking our lips over the latter is to come.

If any considerable number of people decided for just thirty days to live their lives on the basis of reason, instead of habit, fear, prejudice, and custom, the results would be revolutionary.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MUSIC OF SILENCE

I have a friend who is a mail carrier in New Jersey. His name, for all anyone knows, is Mickey McDonnell. He has been on the job for twenty-five years, but outside of a career for Uncle Sam. He is a poet as well, and an expert in photography. He composes silent essays of great beauty with the camera, and I am going into all that he writes and photographs.

Here is a long talk with "Bucky" recently and he fascinated me with his theory of music that is silent. The painting or picture contained. He told me of a composition he made at a picture and take his violin, or piano, and improvise as the spirit moved him did not. Then he explained how he would watch for the opportunity to play, so carefully he got a composition that seemed to spell out the harmony of music through shadows cast by the sunlight, and through creepings into the shade of green and greens, so that a complete composition appeared as miracu-lously enacted.

I have felt the thrill in many a sunset, and at other times, when nature seemed to place before my eyes an inspired sonata. I have thought of music as silent — but I had not had it in mind as something to stir the imagination and spirit within me.

There is that soft music played as a beautiful poem is read. I have felt that I am a part of that music. I am prepared to photograph and want until I can grasp the moment that it presents a living musical composition. I watch people when they are not being the great masterpiece of painting, the living musical composition that is the silent music that it stirs within their very souls, for I too am a musician, but of the silent scale!

Then, too, we can look into the glorious heavens at night, on a sky ravished with stars, and on the wonderful formations played among the blue, and feel that we are listening to the silent music spontaneously composed for our enjoyment and spiritual nourishment. Then we can look upon any one of the great paintings of Wagels, Mozarts, Beethovens, or Winslow Homer, without feeling that he is listening to divine music magically composed!

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LET US USE OUR HEADS

The human race has known certain things long before it has actually used them to any extent. For instance, the Romans for centuries used a single letter of type to stamp initials on pieces of pottery, but it never occurred to them to put the type together into a line and print a book. There has always been about the same amount of water in the world that there is now, yet it has only been in recent centuries that the idea has occurred to people that they might well be using it for bathing the whole body.

We can be sure that today we are just as stupid mistakes as did our forebears. We are think-ing with our hearts and not with our heads. If we thought with our heads the false hope of escape-eagle patriotism which leads to war would disappear. If we used our heads, we would not govern ourselves as poorly as we do. If we used our heads instead of emotion, we would not endanger our safety, or the safety of others, or our own ultimate happiness, by doctoring up a case of alcohol with something to make it potable and then smacking our lips over the latter is to come.

If any considerable number of people decided for just thirty days to live their lives on the basis of reason, instead of habit, fear, prejudice, and custom, the results would be revolutionary.

Belleville Couple Honored on Golden Wedding Anniversary

Plainfield—On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Archie Wickens, of Fuller, were at home to about 100 relatives and friends in honor of Mrs. Wickens' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Cronkright, who celebrated their golden wedding on that day.

Mr. Wesley Cronkright and Miss Lizzie Vardy were united in marriage at Dungannan parsonage, on May 2, 1900. To this union were born five daughters, (Ella), Mrs. Archie Wickens; (Neala), Mrs. Albert Mitts, of Sloco; (Maude), Mrs. Dave Howard; (Hilda), Mrs. Frank Daly, of Belleville and (Adelia), Mrs. Jack Rose, of Frankford; three sons, Ernest and Frank, both of Trenton, and a son, Thomas, deceased some years ago.

There are eighteen grandchildren and four great grandchildren, all of whom were present.

About nine o'clock, Mr. Ernest Cronkright called the gathering to order and Mr. Arnold Cronkright, grandson, of Trenton, read an address and the grandchildren presented Mr. and Mrs. Cronkright with many lovely gifts and cards, including a lovely gold colored bedspread from the grandchildren.

Though taken by surprise, Mr. and Mrs. Cronkright made suitable replies thanking everyone for their kindness.

After a few short speeches, several songs were sung, with Miss Phyllis Wickens at the piano and Messrs. Wesley and Grant Mitts and Arnold Cronkright with guitar.

Dainty Tea Table

The guests were then invited to the dining room by Mrs. Wickens. The table was centred with a beautiful bouquet of roses and carnations and a lovely wedding cake adorned with a miniature bride and groom and yellow doves. The hostess and her helpers served the refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Cronkright are in good health, except Mrs. Cronkright who has not good eyesight, but is able to do her own housework.

Mr. Percy Cronkright of Niagara Falls, was the guest who came the farthest. Other guests were from Harmona, Trenton, Belleville, Holloway and Plainfield.

FRANKFORD
Lion Cooney Heldman Gives Fine Talk On 'Citizenship'

Frankford— The Frankford Lions Club held their bi-monthly meeting in the Community-Memorial Hall Wednesday night, with an excellent turnout. Following a bounteous repast, a number of business items were discussed, including the coming plans for boys softball in Frankford this year.

It is hoped that midget team can be entered in the Stirling District League, with a number of the games being played at Frankford. The coming Zone Convention in Kingston on May 15 was also discussed, and a number of Frankford Lions Plan to attend. The subject of a bowling green was brought up, and the Lions are going to thoroughly investigate all angles in connection with this project. If it is decided that a bowling green is practical, and possible, the Lions Club will undoubtedly go all out in bringing a bowling green to Frankford with the same prompt and efficient action taken in bringing a lighted ball park to the community.

Following the business discussion, Lion Cooney Heldman, introduced guest speaker Lion Art Spencer, during the operation of the Frankford Lions Club, the members had never had an opportunity of hearing Lion Art speak at one of their own meetings, although Lion Art has spoken at numerous other meetings of Lions Club, church organizations and other groups all over Ontario, Lion Art kept the gathering in stitches for some time with his immeasureable wealth of yarns and humorous incidents.

He then turned to a more serious subject, and brought to the Lions one of the finest talks on "Citizenship" that has been heard in Frankford. On conclusion, Lion Art was warmly applauded by his fellows Lions. Lion Arnold Stickle thanked the speaker on behalf of all.

Peterborough, May 5 — (CP) — Farmers will begin pitchforking suckers out of the River Otonabee near here next week in what is believed the only sucker hunt in Canada. Some use the suckers for fertilizer, others can them.

REFUSES APPROVAL

Kingston, May 5 — (CP) — The Ontario Highways Department has refused to approve the appointment of F. C. Brown as engineer of suburban and rural roads. It is understood that Brown, who expected to graduate from Queen's University this month, lacked sufficient experience under the Engineering Institute of Canada Regulations.

DEAR FRIENDS,—

By action of a Committee appointed by the City Council, the Board of Education and the Parks Board, a program of planned recreation under trained leadership, and supervised by the Y.M.C.A. has been authorized for this Summer. Seven Junior Playgrounds and three Senior Playgrounds in all parts of the city are to be operated.

The financing of this essential public service for the community is the responsibility of all public bodies and private citizens. A minimum budget for leadership and equipment has been estimated at $7300 of which $4500 must be raised by public subscription.

The need for such a program must be evident to every thinking citizen of this community.

The numerous and worthy demands for public funds and private contributions are well recognized by those who have given leadership to this project in recent months. The committee, in making this appeal to you, the public, has confidence that you will recognize the great need and importance of providing recreational facilities for all children and young people of this community.

Your generous contribution or pledge for this worthy project will be gratefully accepted at the Bank of Montreal or the office of The Ontario Intelligencer, Box No. 54. Authorization for income tax purposes.

WEDDINGS

LOCKYER—FLINTOFF

Before a background of red and white snapdragon and ferns, a lovely wedding was solemnized in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, on Saturday, April 29, at 4 p.m., by the Rev. C. A. Perkins, pastor of Holloway Street United Church, when Dorothy Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Flintoff, Belleville, became the bride of David Carleton Lockyer, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Lockyer, Belleville.

Miss Dorothy Dobbs, of Belleville, was guest pianist and rendered the wedding music before the ceremony and during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in her bridal gown of white satin fashioned on princess lines, the graceful skirt ending in a circular train. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was caught by a headdress of lily-of-the-valley, and she carried a cascade bouquet of Dream roses with white ribbons.

Miss Jean Flintoff, and Miss Mary Flintoff, sisters of Belleville, and sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids, gowned alike in apple green taffeta with matching mitts and headdresses. They carried "Colonial" bouquets of Talisman and Rapture roses, respectively.

Mr. Eric Toms, of Ottawa, was groomsman, and Mr. Donald Lockyer, of Belleville, and brother of the bridegroom, was usher.

At the reception, which was held at the home of the bride's parents. The guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore a powder blue gown with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore a gown of blue lace over-taffeta, with navy accessories, and corsage of red Betterbilt roses.

For the wedding trip to New York City, the bride chose a suit of navy gabardine with matching accessories, and corsage of Dream roses. After receiving gifts, Mr. and Mrs. Lockyer will reside at 190 Ann Street, Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from Oshawa, Picton and Ottawa. The bride's grandfather, Mr. James Gregory, of Oshawa, who is in his 98th year, was also present, and proposed the toast to the happy couple.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was entertained to a miscellaneous shower by Miss Betty Holway, and to a cup and saucer shower by Miss Gemma Farrell, and Miss Eva Gilmour.

ELLIOTT—McCAW

On Friday, April 28, a quiet, but pretty evening marriage was solemnized at 6:30 when Lois Mildred McCaw, of Tweed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCaw, of Tweed, became the bride of Milton David Elliott, of Tweed, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Elliott. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. L. Sloan, in the parsonage of Tweed United Church.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a chestnut colored suit, with beige accessories, and corsage of cream roses and carnations.

Miss June Sills, of Roslin, attended the bride, wearing a navy blue suit with grey accessories, and corsage of pink roses and carnations.

Mr. Raymond Holmes, of Tweed, was groomsman.

After the reception, which was held at Golden Acres, Belleville, the young couple left on a honeymoon trip to Hamilton and Toronto. For travelling the bride wore her wedding suit. Upon their return, they will reside at the bridegroom's farm, in Tweed.

SHANNONVILLE

Teachers' Assoc. Holds Final Term Meeting

Shannonville—The final meeting of the term of the South Tyendinaga Teachers' Association was held last Monday afternoon, at Mrs. Lally's school. There was a perfect attendance, with the exception of one teacher, who had to attend council meeting.

The president, Mrs. Helen Shetler presided over the meeting.

The guest speaker was Inspector Macklem who had just returned from an inspection tour of the eastern part of Bay. He gave an interesting talk as regards to the inspection and also explained the new regulations as regards to the entrance examinations.

Mrs. Irene Phillips discussed the banquet for the Federation of South Hastings' Teachers. This banquet is to be held in the Y.M.C.A., Belleville, on May 31st. The speaker will be the Women's Association of Shannonville United Church.

Flower Contest

Mrs. McAuliffe presented a "Flower contest" and Mr. Joe Mickleborough read a review of cities of Canada in the form of a contest. Both contests were much enjoyed.

Refreshments were served, bringing a successful year's meetings to a close.

Operation of Pipe Organ Talk Given

Mr. Alec Gordon was a guest of the Bridge Street Young People's Union this week when Miss Felicity Bennett and her group officiated. During a worship service held in the church, Miss Loretta MacDougall sang "The Lord's Prayer".

Some interesting facts about the organ were explained by Mr. Gordon. Dating back to early Bible times, the organ has numerous pipes which produce tones of great depths, both high and low. Sounds such as the human voice can be obtained by the use of various stops. Mr. Gordon played several pieces, including "The Flight of the Bumble Bee", he favored everyone with one of his own compositions, "Black-eyed Susans", a lilting description of that flower.

Returning to the parlor, a singsong was enjoyed, after which refreshments were served. Miss Bennett, on behalf of the Young People, expressed her appreciation, for the musical evening provided by the guest.

RAWDON

Bride, Bridegroom Honored by Relatives And Friends

On Friday evening last, almost 150 friends from Mount Pleasant and Carmel communities, and relatives, gathered at the church hall at Mount Pleasant-Rawdon to extend best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Merrick on their recent marriage and to extend a hearty welcome to the bride.

Fine Program

The pastor, Rev. H. C. Vaclavik, was master of ceremonies, and spoke briefly.

Mrs. Marguerite McMullen, with Miss Betty McConnell, as accompanist led in community singing. Master David Potts sang "Wedding Bells", with his mother as accompanist; Mrs. Herbert Smith read a selection entitled, "How Much of the Family Income is the Wife Entitled to?"

Misses Ina Scott and Betty McConnell each contributed a piano solo; Mr. Norman McConnell delighted with two vocal selections, with guitar accompaniment, "I'm in Love With You" and "Nobody's Darling". Mrs. Percy Mac-Mullen recited a "Word of Encouragement", and Mr. John Mullen sang, "Glasgow Belongs To Me" followed by an address of appreciation read by Mr. Eric Summers to Bob and Frances. This welcomed the bride to Mount Pleasant and spoke of the sterling qualities of the groom. This was signed by Messrs. Harvey Couch, Frank Spencer Jr., Norman McConnell, John Morgan, Eric Summers and Robert Hoard.

Presentation Made

Mr. Frank Spencer, Jr., made the presentation of a rose brocaded lounge chair with matching hassock to Mr. Merrick, on behalf of the assembled group. There were also gifts from relatives.

Bob and Frances both suitably replied and thanked their friends for the lovely gifts and invited one and all to visit them.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed before the group departed homewards wishing the young couple every happiness on their voyage through life.

Mrs. F. R. Harback Addresses Christ Church Parish Guild

The Parish Guild of Christ Church met on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Hickey, the president, in the chair. The ladies of St. George's Guild were guests, and their president, Mrs. Percy Welsh, gave the scripture reading.

The meeting was especially favored in having Mrs. Harback as guest speaker. Mrs. Harback spoke on the book by Leslie Weatherhead "It Happened in Palestine". She said the hillside where Christ was crucified afterwards christened as a garden—"So we, who bear a cross solely now are cultivating our garden for eternity."

The various committees reported and much work was planned. Mrs. J. Grant Sparling was welcomed back after her illness and she pronounced the benediction.

Tea was served by Mrs. Horace Wright and her committee.

Club Activities

FRANKFORD

Frankford — The bi-monthly meeting of Branch 397 Canadian Legion was held in the club room Wednesday night. A good turnout was recorded. Following the period of silence in tribute to the fallen comrades, president Holt Madill, took charge of the business session. A few final wrinkles were ironed out in the building project. Plans for raising funds for the building were discussed, and an important project will be launched shortly. Watch this paper for further details.

It was unanimously decided to enter a Legion softball team in the Sidney Softball League, the team to be entirely Legion members.

Several other items were discussed. Jack Rose was the winner of a contest which followed. Cards were enjoyed for the balance of the evening.

Mrs. Fred Stuckey is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's the bigger nagger—wife or husband?

A few weeks ago I commented on a letter written me by a husband who complained that his wife was a confirmed nagger, and that as a result his home was a place of turmoil and not the haven of happiness he would like to be.

After reading this, several wives have written me to point out that men be can just as successful naggers as any woman. They should any man have so much to say about a nagging wife, they want to know, when men are such naggers themselves?

Admittedly, nagging is not the exclusive characteristic of either sex any more than any other bad quality can be. But it certainly does not follow that tell-tale of desperate husband that men are naggers, too, makes his own problem any easier to solve, advice versa.

One of these women correspondents wants to express the opinion that a husband may be entirely mistaken when he considers his wife a nagger. For example, she cites her case:

"My husband says that I quarrel; she writes, "in other words, his eyes I am a nagging wife." Her version of the situation, however, is something else again. She says that her husband is continually unfaithful to her; that has told her to go her way and let him go his and that he does not care what she does. He just doesn't treat his wife like husband", she declares. Her protests against his behavior, according to her, are what he considers nagging. Her general idea seems to be that when a wife is said to be usually only making legitimate objection to misconduct of some sort on her husband's part.

According to the dictionary, to nag is to "find fault or scold continually", and whether there is room for fault-finding in her wife, or husband either, ever she his made over to scold continually". This is the pole point that I would like

Accessories for summer
By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

FABRIC gloves grow smarter by the season. Double wear cotton is the material of a handstitched glove with a scalloped cuff and stitched scallop effect on the back. The street shoe is of dark red calf piped in white. It has a pearl button on the vamp and a medium heel. The capacious binocular-type handbag is made of dark red leather. It has self-piping, a mirror under the flap, a rigid base and a strap that is adjustable. Blonde tones and dark brown is the color combination of the kidskin pump with a double strap.

every wife or husband who reads this column to consider carefully when the question of nagging comes up in their homes.

It is certainly in order to enter definite protest against serious misbehavior on the part of either wife or husband. But having made one's position perfectly clear, it will do no good whatever to keep on reiterating your anger, concern or hurt every day thereafter. If the one who is in the wrong is going to change his ways at all, it is far more likely to be brought about by being treated as a human being than by constant charging that he is not acting like one.

So, whether you're wife or husband, if you take "Never nag" for your motto, and really make an effort to live by it, you're going to be surprised and delighted to find what a difference it will make in your home life. Granted that it's easier to say than to do. You can try, can't you?

When you are packing your vacation bags, remember that sweaters take up less space and get less wrinkled if they are rolled instead of folded.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

"How do you do". . . .Never "Pleased to meet you"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For some time several everyday questions of etiquette have been bothering me, and now I've collected some of them and am sending them to you for your helpful answers. (And please may I send others soon?)

1. I hear people making such a variety of responses to an introduction. Is there any really correct one? Is "Pleased to meet you" ever correct?

2. I heard someone say recently, "It is never correct to 'give orders' when making an introduction." He didn't go on to say what he meant. . .and I didn't want to show my ignorance by asking him to explain. But his statement intrigued me. Can you tell me what he meant by this?

3. Two people are walking together on the street. They meet a friend or acquaintance of one, who stops to talk. Is an introduction necessary?

4. My husband and I argue about the correct way for him to sign a hotel register. He signs "Henry B. Blake and wife". Haven't I a right to my opinion that this is incorrect, that the signature should be "Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Blake?" Also please tell me if one ever writes the street address when signing a hotel register?

Sallie B.

1. "How do you do" is always the correct acknowledgment to an introduction. It's such a comfort and reassurance to know that "How do you do" is always the right reply to an introduction that I'm so often wonder why people don't learn this. And replies we do hear. And it's an inspiration to observe how graciously gracious people say these everyday words! It's a pleasant habit to form—to very attentively so that we "catch" the name of the person being introduced, then add the name to the "How do you do". Everyone loves to hear his or her name!

"Pleased to meet you" is definitely incorrect as a response to an introduction.

2. This man was referring to such incorrect forms as these "orders": "Meet my friend" . . . "Shake hands with" . . . or "Let me make you acquainted with"—and so forth.

3. Not necessarily. The person whom the greeting doesn't concern should walk ahead slowly while the greetings are exchanged. However, if the conversation is to last for more than a minute or two, the two people not known to each other should be introduced.

4. You are right about the correct form of name for a hotel register. A man, registering for his wife and himself, should sign, "Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Blake" . . . never "Henry B. Blake and wife".

When the hotel registry is a book, usually it provides space only for the name, the city and the state. In most hotels today, however, we are given individual registration cards, with space also for the street-address. This is practical, of course, for the forwarding of mail or telegrams or forwarding any possessions left in the hotel room.

(Interesting questions, these, Mrs. B. And now please send any others that are bothering you, and let's talk them over!)

Notes or messages on Informals

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When I write little notes on the inside pages of my informals, is it correct to use a salutation . . . "Dear Flo" . . . and a complimentary close. . . "Devotedly" or "Cordially," for example as when I write a letter on paper?

M. D.

Yes, this is correct if you are writing a real note . . . or you may write a message of a few words, with no salutation or complimentary close.

No college degree initials on visiting cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle a discussion will you please answer this question: Is it correct to use the initials of a college degree after the name on personal visiting-cards.

Elizabeth Taylor To Wed Heir To Hotel Fortune

Hollywood, May 5 — (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor tomorrow weds Conrad Nicholson (Nicky) Hilton, Jr., an heir to one of the world's biggest hotel fortunes.

It's Hollywood's wedding of the year.

Her wedding gown, which probably will set the style for June brides the country over, is described by its designer as simple, with a high neckline, narrow waist, and billows below. The guest list numbers 600, but at least 10 times that many may tie up traffic outside.

It's the first marriage both for 18-year-old Elizabeth and for her 22-year-old, husky, dark-haired bridegroom. His father's 13 hotels, including the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City and the world's largest, the 3,000-room Stevens in Chicago, have been estimated to be worth $125,-000,000.

The ceremony is scheduled for the Roman Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd.

REPATRIATION COMPLETE

Frankfurt, May 5 (AP)—Russia announced Thursday night that repatriation of German war prisoners has been completed. The news chilled hundreds of thousands of Germans. It's killed the last hope of family after family that a missing father, husband or son might return from the war.

Chicken Always A Favorite With The Family

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 5 — (CP) — Chicken may sound like a rich man's dish but actually it costs no more than a good-sized roast. In addition it's a treat the whole family will enjoy.

Roast chicken is the favorite method of preparation. The cook will find that 30 minutes roasting time should be allowed for each pound, with chickens weighing four to eight pounds. Oven temperature should be between 300 and 325 degrees Fahrenheit.

Pre-cooked fried chicken is a special treat.

Birds may be pre-cooked by steaming or simmering in a tightly-covered pan for 20 minutes before frying. No salt should be added to the water in pre-cooking since this tends to dry the flesh.

The pre-cooked chicken can be dipped in batter and deep-fried for 10 minutes or else dipped in egg and crumbs and pan or deep-fat fried for five minutes.

Batter for fried chicken: Sift one heaping cup and three-quarters cup milk into one cup sifted all-purpose flour which has been seasoned with 1½ teaspoons salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper.

Deep-Fat Fried Chicken: Prepare chicken for frying (steam or simmer). Dip in thin batter or in egg and crumbs. Heat fat in deep kettle to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. There should be sufficient fat to cover the chicken without overflowing the kettle. If possible use a deep-fat thermometer to keep the temperature even.

Fry until a golden brown and thoroughly done — about five to 10 minutes.

Chicken loaf with mushroom sauce is an ideal way of using up any leftover chicken.

Ingredients: two cups cooked chicken; one cup peas; one-half cup cooked carrots; one cup soft bread crumbs; one-half cup milk; one egg; one teaspoon salt; two teaspoons onion juice; two teaspoons chopped parsley.

Put cold cooked chicken and vegetables through food chopper. Mix with crumbs, milk, beaten egg, salt, onion juice and parsley and pack in greased loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit for about 40 minutes. Unmould, slice and serve with mushroom sauce which can be made from condensed mushroom soup if fresh mushrooms are not available. Serves six.

Chicken Casserole — Ingredients: two tablespoons flour, two tablespoons fat, one cup milk; one cup chicken stock; salt and pepper to taste; two cups diced cooked chicken; two cups sliced cooked potatoes; bread crumbs; dash of celery salt.

Melt fat, blend in flour and add milk and chicken stock. Cook until slightly thickened. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt. Arrange cooked baking — dish with alternate layers of bread crumbs, chicken, and potatoes. Pour over sauce and dot with butter. Top with crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit for about 30 minutes. Serves from five to six persons.

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

Kraut manufacturers have always been proud of the fact that the great wall of China was reputedly built on sauerkraut.

Just as Egyptian workmen built the pyramids while living on a diet of bread and onions, so, it is claimed, Chinese laborers derived their strength from eating sauerkraut.

No doubt the Chinese supplemented their menu with some cool besides salted cabbage. As a dish to be eaten alone, sauerkraut has little to recommend it. Only when it has been simmered slowly with ham, spareribs, sausage cakes or some other rich meat does it require its best-flavor.

Fatty poultry like duck is an excellent combination with sauerkraut. This is a classical German dish in which the duck is first browned in the oven and then cooked with the sauerkraut until tender.

Use a 5 pound duck for 4 portions or a 6 pound duck for 5 portions. The neck, back, wing tips, gizzard and liver may be used to make a giblet soup. The duck should be cut up by the butcher into quarters, or into pieces in the same way as a stewing chicken.

Braised Duck with Sauerkraut.
Serves 4 to 5.

Hold each piece of duck over an open flame for several seconds to singe. Use a pair of tweezers or strawberry huller to remove pin feathers. Wash duck thoroughly. Wipe with a clean coarse towel. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Place pieces of duck, skin side up, on a wire rack in a roasting pan. Roast at 325 degrees for 1 hour or until duck is a light golden brown. It will not be completely cooked at this point.

While duck is roasting, place 1 1-2 pounds of sauerkraut in a saucepan or Dutch oven with 1 cup of water, 2 medium size apples, pared, cored and chopped fine and 1 small grated onion. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-3 teaspoon pepper.

Remove duck from oven and place in saucepan with sauerkraut. Cover with tight lid.

Simmer slowly 30-45 minutes or until duck is tender. Be sure flame is low to prevent burning. Stir sauerkraut several times during cooking.

Remove pieces of duck when tender. Drain excess juice from sauerkraut.

To make duck skin crisp, place under a medium broiler flame until brown. Arrange pieces of duck over sauerkraut on serving platter or dishes.

Blue Cross REPORTS.. TO EVERY THIRD ONTARIAN!

Ontario Hospital Association
Toronto 5, Ont.

TO 1,350,000 BLUE CROSS PARTICIPANTS IN ONTARIO:

One in every three Ontarians—every third person who reads this letter—has voluntarily selected the same non-profit Blue Cross hospital-care protection you enjoy.

In 1949, 91 cents of every subscription dollar was put into immediate action to provide payment for hospitalization on behalf of Plan participants. Of this amount, 82 cents was paid to hospitals, 6 cents for wages and 3 cents covered office space, station-ery and all other expenses. Hospital bills alone amounted to $10,273,251.86 for the year — — almost one Million dollars per month.

The 9 cents, over and above the 91 cents used to provide hospitalization, was held in a "rainy day" fund as directed by the Ontario Department of Health to protect your Blue Cross investment.

Blue Cross is an extension of hospital service. It is strictly non-profit and has only one purpose to provide a means whereby the people of this province can budget against the cost of unexpected hospital expense.

9th YEAR OF PROGRESS IN ONTARIO

Over 10 million dollars — 82% of subscription income paid in hospital benefits.

Low operating costs — only 9% of each subscription dollar.

Blue Cross is sound. Reserve position strong in case of unexpected increase in cost.

Total of hospital bills paid since 1941 exceeded 28 million dollars at end of 1949.

Model City Built by Egyptian Company to House Its Workers

By HAIG NICHOLSON

Mehalla El Kubra, Lower Egypt — (Reuters) — A social experiment unparalled in the Middle East is being made here, the centre of Egypt's textile industry.

The Misr Spinning and Weaving Company whose 30,000 workers keep the great cotton mills here in production day and night six days every week, runs a workers' city which spells defeat in that area, for Egypt's three main enemies—poverty, ignorance and disease.

One of the biggest welfare schemes in the world promoted by a private business firm, the orderliness of this workers' city is in striking contrast to the tumbledown huddle of mud houses which occupy other parts of the town.

The houses in the model city are built in rows along which run broad avenues with some of the best road surfaces in Egypt. A worker earning $1.00 a day can rent a two-roomed flat there for $2.25 a month or a three-roomed one for $3.35.

In all, there are homes in the city for 550 families and accomodation for 1,500 bachelor workers who can have a bed and dormitor for as little as $1.10 a month each.

There is a huge communal restaurant where the worker can obtain a substantial meal for two piastres (five cents.) The actual cost to the company of these meals is four times the prices it charges the workers.

The city has a mosque, theatre an open air movie, cafes where the workers can talk when their work is done, shops where commodities are sold at government-controlled prices, a market for food-stuffs, schools, and an immaculate hospital.

There are adequate facilities for all sports—football, basketball, volley ball, tennis, boxing and wrestling. There are fourteen football teams composed of workers, and the best are coached by up-to-date methods.

The mills at Mehalla are still expanding and the company is now constructing a second, bigger and better, workers' city where there will be accommodation for 2,000 workers and their families.

Relations between company and workers are good.

Workers' problems are not shelved but brought as quickly as possible into the open for solution. The company has provided the workers' syndicate, or trade union, with a handsome pavilion where members and officials meet to discuss their affairs.

The employers are readily approachable regarding grievances and complaints which, with goodwill on both sides, are usually quickly disposed of.

The cotton mills at Mehalla are of moderate size. Begun in 1938, they have been growing ever since until today they produce in the course of a year 100,000,000 yards of cotton textiles and 30,700,000 pounds of cotton yarn, 1,368,000 yards of woollen textiles and 1,300,000 pounds of woollen yarn.

The factories used 2,200,000 pounds of raw cotton in 1931. Today, they use 47,500,000 pounds of Egyptian cotton.

It is true that Egypt is the Nile and the Nile is Egypt, it is equally true that Mehalla is cotton and cotton is Mehalla. The town has a total population of 120,000.

Salvation Army is Still Faithful to Blue Bonnet

Vancouver — (CP) — The Salvation Army's first lady would not trade her straw bonnet for the smartest spring chapeau from Paris fashion salons.

"We ladies just love our bonnets," said Mrs. General Albert Orsborn, wife of the international leader of the Salvation Army, on a recent visit to Vancouver. "We hold them as something sacred."

General and Mrs. Orsborn, who share leadership of the world-wide Army organization, were here prior to leaving for tours of Australia, New Zealand and Indonesia.

History of the 'Sally Ann' bonnet, known and respected by Canadian soldiers in two world wars, was outlined by Mrs. Orsborn in an interview. She said that the devotion of the Army's women to their beribboned headpiece is proved by the fact that its style hasn't changed since the Army uniform was introduced in 1878.

Mrs. Catherine Booth, wife of the movement's founder, designed a small bonnet with the idea of a universal headwear which would take the mind of Salvation women from fashions and frills. After that it grew until it was almost the size of a coal-scuttle.

Now the straw bonnet is back to a size more easily managed on windy street corners. But the design hasn't changed, nor has the devotion of its wearers altered.

Mrs. Orsborn's viewpoint is the same as that of General Evangeline Booth, daughter of the founder and leader of the movement in the 1930s, who said, "My uniform is the prettiest dress I could want."

From a practical point of view, the trusty blue bonnets stand up to travel wear better than a frills-and-flowers chapeau.

Endurance is a must in any article of clothing worn by a Salvation Army worker and for that, General and Mrs. Orsborn are thankful. Their past travels have taken them to almost every country in the world. They plan six weeks in Australia, a month in New Zealand and a tour of Indonesia.

"We'll visit several of our leper colonies in the latter stop," said the general's wife. Persons afflicted with this disease receive special attention from the Army in many countries.

"The most moving sight I have ever seen was in India. One of our Australian girls was working in a leper colony and when we visited it 16 youngsters sang for us 'God is Good to Me' which the Army girl had taught them."

Mrs. Orsborn has grown up in the Salvation Army. Her father was General Edward Higgins, who led the movement from 1929 to 1934. Today she is president of the Home League of the Army, and leader of more than 1,000 Home Leagues in Canada.

She meets people of widely differing nationalities and speech in her world travels, but she doesn't have too much trouble with language.

"We just say 'Hallelujah' and we understand each other."

IRON HORSE POPULAR

Pretoria, South Africa — (CP) — Natives have become the biggest users of the Union's railways according to statistics recently published here. Supply of sufficient coaches is a major problem for The South African Railways.

Mail Hodge-Podge Keeps PM Busy

Ottawa — (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent's mail is varied and heavy with requests for everything from one of his old ties to a job as senator.

Recently he was asked to donate a tie or some other discarded article of his wearing apparel for auction at a church social. The answer was a polite note of regret — Canada's prime minister dislikes anything that hints of ostentation.

At present there is a steady trickle of letters giving reasons for and against establishment of diplomatic relations with the Vatican; urging removal of the means test and lowering of the eligible age for old age pensions and suggesting new designs for a Canadian flag.

There also are people who want jobs in the government service. These include those who would like to become judges, senators, or to obtain some other federal appointment.

Invitations constitute a sizable portion of the prime minister's mail. Many are to attend social functions in Ottawa and others are to give speeches in various parts of Canada and the United States.

He accepts only a few of these invitations since otherwise he would have little time left in which to attend to government matters.

Most of the correspondence is answered by secretaries but he handles a considerable amount personally. Sometimes when the letter is from Ottawa he doesn't even bother to dictate a reply — instead he picks up his telephone.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

Good Religion Knows No Monopoly

By ROY L. SMITH

In all the life of the ancients told among all the nations of those times past, no other group of individuals is to be found who will compare with the Old Testament prophets.

Search the religious writings of the other great world religions as you will, and compare the sacred books of the great systems of faith, and you will discover that the character of such men as Amos, Hosea, Micah, Jeremiah, Isaiah, Ezekiel, Elijah and Habakkuk stands out unique and unrivalled.

They Were All Laymen

With the possible exception of Nehum, the Old Testament phrophets were without exception laymen. Jeremiah was the son of a priest who never himself entered the priesthood. All others were completely outside all ecclesiastical ranks.

They were laymen of a profoundly religious mind who had meditated long and carefully on the subject of God, life, the nation's fate and the morality of their times. Out of such thinking they had come with definite convictions and beliefs for which they could find but one explanation: God had revealed himself to them. They knew because they knew the mind of God!

The Sunday School lesson for May 7: "Hosea, the Man and His Message" Hosea (4:1-9; 6:1-3; 10:12-13).

The average person reading the Old Testament is very apt to think he is perusing the words of a man who was professionally religious. Such is not the case. Every one of them (again with the possible exception of Nehum who seems to have been connected in some way with the Temple) earned his living by some private means, and dedicated himself to religion as a matter of deep personal conviction.

Hosea Was a Young Aristocrat

The prophet Hosea who has left to us one of the most beautiful books in the entire Bible, was a young rural aristocrat when he began his career as a preacher. The fact that he gives his father's name indicates that he was one of the landed gentry. The further fact that he married a woman, whose father's name is given, indicates that he lived his life very largely inside the circle of the prosperous well-to-do. The still further fact that he seems to have had sufficient funds for any enterprise in which he cared to embark, and that he was able to give his time so largely through so many years to preaching, indicates that he was financially independent.

It is highly significant, then, that such a message as Hosea's should have come from one who occupied such a social position.

Hosea Was Alarmed

The question most frequently upon the lips of modern men is, "What does Stalin think? or "What is Russia up to?"

The question uppermost in the mind of Hosea was, "What Does God think?" and "What is He getting ready to do?"

The young prophet was unable to convince himself that bad times were not ahead for the kingdom. He did not believe in disaster because he had lost faith in the times, but because he was convinced that the people had forsaken the ways of righteousness, and he was firmly convinced that there is no more hope for a nation that ignores God's laws than there is for a chemist who ignores the laws of the laboratory. Imagine if you can, an engineer planning to span a chasm with a bridge, and never taking the law of gravity into account.

Hosea believed the nation had been doing something just as foolish.

His Indictment of Israel

The young prophet was convinced that all the nation's woes were a result of its own lack of basic morality. He was perfectly sure that a moral God could not fail to punish a people so dissolute. Perhaps it might be more accurate to say that he believed the nation was like a man who was walking across a stream on a bridge that would not support him. A later Psalmist said, "But the way of the ungodly shall perish", and of course carry all who walked on that way to their destruction.

The one hope of the nation lay in a genuine and profound repentance; nothing easy or superficial would be sufficient. Her leaders were so engrossed in futility that they could not be trusted; Israel's hope must lie in the confidence that God would work a miracle.

He called for a moral and spiritual revival of the people. It would not be enough that the leaders must reform. That, of course, would be necessary, but every individual must be touched by the new sense of moral responsibility.

There is no other way even to this day.

Great Blue Heron Enjoys Home Life

Brantford, May 5 — (CP) — After living indoors for the last four months, Jimmy, a great Blue Heron, isn't anxious to return to the free — but hazardous — life of a wild creature.

Mrs. Stanley Matthews has been caring for him since neighbors on a hunting trip found him with an injured leg that kept him from migrating. The leg is all right now.

Mrs. Matthews let Jimmy out in the sunshine Wednesday. He didn't budge out of the yard. At nightfall he returned to his favorite corner in the Matthews' kitchen.

Pearson Forced To Suspect Faith Of Peace Congress

Ottawa, May 5 — (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson Thursday told delegates representing the Canadian Peace Congress that he was forced to "suspect the good faith of this movement" because it "viciously misrepresented" Canada's stand on atomic warfare.

The eight-member delegation, headed by Dr. James G. Endicott of Toronto, Congress chairman, presented Mr. Pearson with a petition asking that the atomic bomb be banned. The delegates said the petition was signed by 128,000 persons.

Mr. Pearson saw the delegation for about 20 minutes.

Newspaper reporters were not allowed to enter Mr. Pearson's office while he received the delegation, but both the minister and Dr. Endicott spoke with reporters separately following the hearing.

Mr. Pearson said the Congress had circulated a pamphlet with its petition claiming Canada had voted against banning the atom bomb and therefore had voted to "continue the threat of mass murder."

That statement, said Mr. Pearson, "was a complete and vicious misrepresentation of our position."

"The Canadian government, with the unanimous support of parliament, has always favored banning the A-bomb. But we are determined that proper controls will be set up to ensure that the ban can be made to work."

Dr. Endicott, who described the interview as "very pleasant," said Mr. Pearson maintained the government is in favor of banning the A-bomb and that the minister had questioned the good faith of the Congress.

On the latter point, Dr. Endicott said the Congress had "many members strongly opposed to communism and Russia."

Rural Hydro Rate Increased $1.14 Monthly to Offset Cost Labor, Material, Says Saunders

Toronto, May 5 — (CP)—An upward revision of rural hydro rates averaging about $1.14 per month increase for the majority of consumers was announced Thursday by Robert Saunders, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission. The increase is expected to bring almost $3,000,000 additional revenue.

Mr. Saunders said the increase, effective on May 1 and subsequent bills, is necessary for the proper safeguarding of the rural financial structure. He said that tremendous increases in cost of labor and materials, along with the necessity of maintaining efficient service, caused the decision to increase rates.

The Ontario Hydro Commission last December increased the wholesale rates for power supplies to municipalities and a large percentage of municipalities subsequently were granted permission to increase rates to consumers. The Commission now has increased the rates to rural customers.

There are 257,000 rural customers, including 100,000 farmers. The over-all increase is about 25 per cent, Mr. Saunders estimated.

He said one sample of the increase is where a rural hydro customer uses 100 kilowatt hours per month. He now pays $3.13 instead of $2.47, an increase of 66 cents. Almost 80 per cent of rural consumers are in the 244 kilowatt hours class, and will pay $5.10 instead of $3.96, an increase of $1.14.

Entrance Grade Will Move Into H.S. When Ready

Toronto, May 5 — (CP) — Dr. J. G. Althouse, chief director of education for Ontario, said Thursday night that entrance grade elementary school pupils will move on to high school "when they are considered ready, the same as in any other grade."

He commented on a report that, in Toronto, 15-year-old elementary school pupils will be promoted to high school this year no matter what their standing, if they have spent one year in grade 8.

Dr. Althouse said the revised curriculum which gives local school boards the right to abolish entrance examinations sets no age limitations.

Toronto this year is trying the no-entrance-examination system in the first Special consideration will be given to pupils who have reached 15 by Dec. 31 of their grade 8 year.

Driver Trapped in Damaged Car

Brampton, May 5 — (CP) — Ernest Hunter of Brampton was trapped for two hours Thursday night in the wreckage of his car following a head-on collision.

Hunter, 39, said he fell asleep at the wheel of his car, swerved from the road and struck a hydro pole. He was pinned behind the wheel. Motorists passed him for two hours. One driver stopped and looked at him and drove on. He was finally rescued by two truck drivers.

The drivers took him to hospital where he was treated for a cut arm, leg injuries, face cuts and shock. Ontario Provincial Police said he will be charged for careless driving.

Brothers Stand Trial on Charges Robbery, Violence

Cobourg, Ont., May 5 (CP) — Joseph Ellis of Campbellford Thursday was committed for trial on charges of robbery with violence of George Stollery, 82-year-old Seymour township farmer.

His brother Charles pleaded guilty to the same charge and was remanded until Monday for sentence.

Stollery suffered a fractured jaw in the attack and has been in hospital since the robbery March 31.

Mrs. Charles Ellis told the court the two brothers went out together the night of the robbery and Joseph returned with his clothes covered with blood. She said he had an old wallet containing cheques, one of them for $700 made out to Stollery.

Frenchman Flies With 'Wings' Real 'Bat Man'

Paris, May 5 — (Reuters)— Annoyed by skeptics who refused to believe that he had "flown with wings" last Sunday, France's 30-year-old "bat man," Leo Valentin, did it again Thursday.

Valentin, a sergeant-major in the French Air Force, leaped from a plane 8,000 feet above this airfield, spread his bat-like canvas wings and glided down to 2,000 feet before opening his parachute.

Some 500 onlookers saw the "birdman" make two or three spirals, then fly on his back, before he opened his parachute.

Valentin was pleased that the crowd had seen his performance. Last Sunday, at Villacoublay, near Versailles, he leaped from 12,000 feet but a glaring sun prevented most of the 300,000 onlookers from seeing him glide.

9-Tiered Crown Placed on Head Of King Rama IX

Bangkok, May 5 — (AP) — Phumiphin Aduldet lifted a nine-tiered crown onto his head today and became Rama IX, King of Thailand (Siam).

The coronation was performer with all the mystic pomp and ceremony of the Chakri dynasty.

The booming of 101 guns and weird eastern music peeling from trumpets told Thailand's 18,000,000 subjects their 22-year-old monarch had ascended his royal station.

The ceremony began with the traditional sacred bath.

Then he blew out the 22 candles of worship.

While Phumiphon donned his coronation garments, the royal astrologers worshipped his majesty's guiding stars.

The student-king lighted a silver joss-stick and a candle of gold.

Then he mounted his eight-pointed throne facing the east.

A court astrologer proclaimed that the moment was auspicious. A Brahmin high priest handed Phumiphon the nine-tiered crown. The slight, boyish king placed it on his head.

Later he read a command raising his bride of one week, Sirikit, to Queen of Thailand. He poured purification water over the beautiful 17-year-old queen and decorated her with the insignia of rank.

WILL TRY TO SEVER SIAMESE TWINS

An operation to separate Siamese twin girls Brenda and Beverley Townsend of Tofield, Alta., scheduled May 14, is believed to have a reasonable chance for success, Dr. Eardly S. Allin, Edmonton surgeon, declared Thursday. The children, born last November, are joined from third rib to the navel by a common section. Each has separate organs, except for one large liver in common. The liver must be divided during the operation. Dr. Allin will be assisted in the operation by six other doctors. The operation is not expected to take more than two hours, but complete results will not be certain until two weeks later, said the doctor. — Central Press Canadian.

Lonely "Joes" To Stay Lonely

Toronto, May 5—(CP)—The police commission Thursday turned thumbs down on a date bureau for lonely men.

"A little while ago it was rent a car, now it's rent a woman," said Magistrate R. J. Browne. "This is too dangerous."

Samuel Stirling and Leon Klimt made the unsuccessful application. They said girls from modelling schools would be engaged at $10 a night.

CHILD DISCOVERS FIRE ON ORPHANAGE TOP FLOOR

Cornwall, May 5 — (CP) — Cornwall firemen at noon Thursday were battling a serious fire which broke out on the top floor of Nazareth Orphanage, in the heart of the city.

All staff members and the 26 children lodged at the orphanage had no difficulty in leaving the burning building. The fire was discovered by one of the children just as lunch was about to be served.

Barbara Ann Wows Hollywood In Ice Debut

Hollywood, May 5 (AP)—Figure-skating star Barbara Ann Scott made her debut with "Ice Capades of 1950" Thursday night and did it with the same graceful precision that won her world acclaim and the 1948 Olympic crown.

The petite blonde from Ottawa was featured in two numbers and was easily the hit of a hilfilled show—her first paid appearance in an ice extravaganza of this type since she turned professional last year.

She skated before a packed house of 6,500, including scores of Hollywood personalities.

As to whether she has any immediate screen aspirations, Barbara Ann merely smiled and said, "I am here to skate in the Ice Capades. My agent will tell me what to do after that."

She was the only performer who was called on for encores, and she also took five curtain bows. Her first number was the Olympic routine and her second was skating ballet interpretation to the strains of "Rosamunde."

In reviewing the show, The Los Angeles Times said:

"The real top note is the appearance of Barbara Ann Scott, whose skating has attained power and whose personal charm is persuasive to the ultimate degree. What she accomplishes seems not so difficult in essence but it is done with great ease and simplicity, concentrated in a final glide completely across the rink. Its fine artistry distinguishes this young champion's work."

The Los Angeles Examiner referred to Barbara Ann as "dazzling."

Canada's 1950 Tourist Traffic May Break Even 1949 Record, Inquiries Pour Into Bureau

Ottawa, May 5 — (CP) — Inquiries sent to the Canadian Travel Bureau for tourist information indicate that 1950 tourist traffic may break the record set in 1949.

Leo Dolan, director of the Travel Bureau, Thursday told the Senate Committee on tourist traffic that a total of 188,210 inquiries — most of them from the United States — have been received. In April the number of letters asking for information about Canadian tourist attractions averaged 3,100 daily.

He said competition from the travel dollar is increasing and as a result the government is considering the establishment of elaborate travel bureau information offices in New York and Chicago. One in Los Angeles may be added later.

Mr. Dolan told Senator W. Rupert Davies (L — Ontario) that the travel bureau spreads its advertisement right across the U. S. As a result Quebec, for instance, which concentrates on advertisements in New England and the mid-Atlantic states, gets tourists from as far west as California.

Senator Davies said he knew that advertising rates had gone up considerably in the United States. Mr. Dolan said that was correct and as a result the bureau was using smalled ads in magazines where it once bought full-page advertisements.

Labor Party Ups Working Majority To Six Seats

Brighouse, Yorkshire, England, May 5 — (AP) — Labor's working majority in the House of Commons increased to six Thursday with the narrow victory of a Labor candidate in a by-election here.

It was the third by-election victory for Prime Minister Attlee's Labor party since the general election which returned it to power Feb. 23.

The by-election, in the Brighouse and Spenborough division, gave Labor candidate, L. J. Edwards a majority of 437 over his National Liberal opponent, William E. Woolley, who allied himself with the Conservatives.

The returns were issued today after Woolley had demanded a recount. Edwards got 24,004 votes to Woolley's 23,567.

This by-election brings the Commons up to its full strength of 625 members, although some of those elected have not yet been officially sworn in.

Labor now has 315 seats. The combined opposition, led by Winston Churchill's Conservative party, has 309. The additional member is the Speaker.

Mulish Japanese Antagonize United States Business Firms

Tokyo — (AP)— Japanese government officials are doing a good job of antagonizing many of the foreign business men upon whom they have to depend for the country's revival.

In some respects, the Japanese are more arrogant than in 1940, when they started telling foreigners they no longer needed them.

The big current issues is over proposed tax rates on personal income, but this is merely symbolic of numerous unanswered questions on how the Japanese intend to treat foreigners when they get full autonomy.

The proposed tax legislation provides some exemptions for foreigners "contributing to Japan's economy," but it still would take up to 55 per cent of earned income, with the heaviest load falling on low-salaried foreigners.

Key Japanese officials rather sternly have refused further changes, in response to protests by the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan. The Japanese have the authority to suggest concessions, even though occupation headquarters must approve the final program.

The foreign business men have expressed willingness to pay equitable taxes. But they object to rates higher than those in their own countries, because they say these unusually high rates were set for reasons that should not involve foreigners.

Japanese taxes always have been high on paper because the Japanese assume nobody will report accurately. Japanese business concerns keep double and triple sets of books to avoid paying full taxes. The Japanese also are taxed heavily to try to pay for the war they lost and for the costs of occupation and rehabilitation.

Foreign businessmen contend neither of these reasons for high taxes should apply to them.

Neither of these points was mentioned in a tax-reform blueprint prepared some time ago by a special mission under Carl S. Shoup of Columbia University.

The Japanese seized on the Shoup mission's proposal to apply full rates to foreigners while ducking its recommendation that the entire tax reorganization program should be adopted at once. The Shoup report itself stated no foreigner would be taxed if his home office would increase his salary by 35 per cent to meet taxes.

Both Japanese and occupation thinking has been pretty generally dominated by the attitude that all foreign businessmen in Japan are making fortunes. This idea has been encouraged by the relatively high, but by no means unusual, living standard of representatives of major foreign companies. They obviously are making money — but there is no evidence of a gold rush.

From the beginning, the occupation has placed what it calls "commercial entrants" in a separate category from military and civilian members of the occupation.

Foreign businessmen have taken beatings on such things as housing. They live in second-rate hotels at first-rate prices, or have had to buy inadequate houses at inflated costs. They pay what amounts to exorbitant taxes at the legal rate for the yen on imported cigarets and some foods.

In business matters they report they find the Japanese governments choked with red tape and staffed with unco-operative bureaucrats who like to show authority.

Govt. Sued in Rare Legal Case

Ottawa — (CP) — A case believed to be unprecedented in court history anywhere in the world will be unfolded in the Exchequer Court next month.

It is an intriguing patchwork of modern history, war, and their complexities, and the unfortunate fate of a French civil servant who has been forced to change his nationality three times.

The case is that of Jean Kieffer, a retired post office worker in Strasbourg, France, against the secretary of state for Canada. Evidence is expected to show a startling succession of events dating from the Franco - Prussian War through two world wars to the present day.

It will revolve around the purchase of 100 shares of Canadian Pacific Railway stock by Mr. Kieffer back in September, 1918, just before the end of the First World War.

Mr. Kieffer was residing in Strasbourg at the time, which made him an enemy alien as far as the secretary of state's department was concerned. Later the stock was registered through the H. W. Schneider Banking Corporation at New York and turned in on a C. P. R. refinancing scheme. This resulted in Mr. Kieffer receiving 760 shares for his original 190 shares.

It was then that the secretary of state's office seized the stocks because they were on a Canadian company and in the possession of an enemy alien.

Became French Citizen

However, by this time Mr. Kieffer had become a citizen of France in good standing. This came about through the directions of the Versailles Treaty, which returned the Alsace - Lorraine region — in which Mr. Kieffer was born and lived — to France.

Apparently Mr. Kieffer received no satisfaction from authorities in Ottawa, so in 1932 he started court action in the Exchequer Court against the secretary of state. But the distance and technicalities involved stalled off any action until just before the Second World War.

During the Second World War the Germans took over Mr. Kieffer's home town and again he became an enemy alien in the eyes of Ottawa officials.

After the war, Mr. Kieffer again started proceedings.

Last November the British consul-general's office sent its representative to the now - retired civil servant to sign on to record his evidence. Mr. Kieffer's sworn statement will be read in to the evidence this June.

Mr. Kieffer figures the custodian of enemy alien property owes him $80,000 on dividends and interest declared on 760 shares of stock since its purchase.

Tighten Rules For Occupancy Of N.Z. Homes

Wellington, N. Z. — (CP) — The New Zealand government has ruled that only families whose annual income is less than £600 may occupy state-owned houses in future.

Rents for the 32,500 houses have been raised by about $1 to $2 a week.

The National Party government had previously announced that tenants will be permitted to buy the houses. Under the former Labor government which built the houses, tenants were not permitted to purchase their homes.

New rentals will be about $5 to $5.50 a week for four - room houses and $5.75 for five-room homes. Rents for privately-constructed homes of the same standard are about twice these figures.

The $1,600 top income figure for tenants does not eliminate as many families as it would in Canada, as incomes — and living costs — are considerably lower in this country.

The houses, which have been built throughout the country under a scheme inaugurated by the Labor government in 1937, were financed by loans from the Reserve Bank at an extremely low rate of interest.

Although the houses occupy whole suburbs in some cases, they were built of different designs so that no two in the same vicinity are exactly alike.

Modern in design and equipped with the latest labor-saving devices, they compare favorably with the latest small homes built by private interests. Each is set on an individual lot.

Despite a large increase in building costs, the rents set for the houses at the inception of the scheme have never previously been increased. There has therefore been a steadily-mounting loss on state-built houses. The present government estimated that if rents were not raised the loss would amount to $750,000 annually in future.

The rent increases will not apply to tenants now living in the government-owned houses, nor will tenants whose incomes are above the $1,600 limit be required to leave.

In New Zealand most laborers, tradesmen, artisans, shop assistants and clerks earn less than $1,600 a year.

The government is making it clear that it would prefer the tenants to purchase their own homes. In order to encourage purchases, it is offering to loan the tenants money at unusually-low rates of interest.

Put Teeth in Mouth Government Pleads

Bristol, England — (CP) — People who carelessly carry their false teeth in pocket and handbag are costing the British government too much money, says Col. T. W. Lennard, chairman of Bristol Health Service executive committee.

"Lots of people prefer to park their false teeth rather than persevere with them," Lennard said.

They must learn that if they do so the risk is theirs and not the state's if the teeth are lost."

Citing an example, the colonel said that one man lost his bottom set through illness and had them replaced. He then broke them and had them repaired.

Now he has written to say that in pulling toffee out of his mouth, he pulled the teeth out too and trod on them in the dark.

"That man cost the nation well over £20 ($62)," said Lennard. He mentioned a further abuse of the dental service by people deliberately trying to get spare sets of teeth because they are free.

"Whenever we get definite evidence of that, we shall prosecute," he said.

Regina Pats Overcome Canadien Lead to Win by 7-4 Count

Montreal, May 5 — (CP) — Regina Pats today have a new lease on life—at least until tomorrow night when they have another go at keeping their heads above water in the 1950-50 Memorial Cup series.

However, Thursday night's victory over Montreal Canadiens, their first in four starts, may have been the needed shot in the arm to keep them going on the never-to-be-taken-for-granted cup trail. The Cups downed the Montrealers 7-4.

The over-confident Canadiens, playing before a hometown crowd of 8,100 fans, sported a 4-1 lead midway through the second period. Everything was set to retain the cup won last year by Montreal's Junior Royals but then it happened.

The Pats connected for six straight markers with defenceman Lorne Davis, the big gun scoring three goals and assisting on two others.

Captain Morley McNeil, Doug Gortle Cowan and Merv Accomilot for the other tallies.

For the losers it was Art Rose, with two, and Jaques Nadon and Don Marshall with one apiece.

The opposing goalies — Roger Morrissette for Montreal and Bob Tyler for Regina—stopped 27 shots each but the Pats held a wide margin at play in the second half of the game.

Cape Go To Town

Canadiens jumped into an early one-goal lead with Rose scoring but Davis tied it up four minutes later. In the middle frame, Nadon Rose and Marshall tallied in order to give the Montrealers a sizeable lead and, apparently, the series.

The Caps then went to town. Davis, McNeil and Bregg rammed home counters in that order to deadlock the score at 4-4.

Cowan scored what proved to be the winning goal after six minutes of play in the finals and Davis tied up six minutes later to bring the count to 6-4.

Morrissette was taken from the Montreal nets in the dying moments of the game but Davis scooped up a loose puck to round out the scoring.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, May 5 — (AP) — Johnny Ostrowski, who became Yankee "property" — or did he? — in the oh-again, off-again Dick Wakefield deal, was called upon to pinch-hit for the White Sox against the Yankees Wednesday . . . A few days before he had been used similarly against the Tigers . . . This could provide grounds for a couple of protests, if there were any point in protesting a White Sox game. But Johnny avoided trouble neatly by striking out each time and leaving a total of five runners stranded.

Sports Before Your Eyes

The United States Golf Association National Junior Golf championship has grown so fast in three years that a 55 - man committee has been named to handle this year's event at Denver . . . Georgia Tech's spring football roster lists seven boys from Coach Bobby Dodd's home town, Kingsport, Tenn. . . . Abe Lamotta gave out a list of prospective opponents for his middleweight title defence George Kanter, Robert Villemain manager, wired the Commission: "Consider it outrage Villemain not considered challenger for Lamotta. Villemain Meets Ray Robinson On June 5th

By The Canadian Press

A revision of tournament dates and strong emphasis on junior development will be features of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association's 1950 plans. The word came from Jim McAvity of Montreal, C.L.T.A. president, Thursday night at Vancouver. McAvity said dates of the junior championships have been pushed back as far as possible so young players will have incentive to practise all summer. The junior final will be at Ottawa again this year, starting Aug. 28. The C.L.T.A. will distribute $3,000 to member associations promoting junior events.

European countries begin full-scale Davis Cup play this weekend with Italy favourite to repeat as zone champion. Four first-round engagements are on schedule. The Italians meet a weak British team at Eastbourne, England, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Belgium will be host to Finland at Brussels for the same three days. Austria plays Yugoslavia at Zagreb Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Sweden faces the Netherlands at Scheveningen Friday Saturday and Sunday.

At White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., bantam Ben Hogan, still after his first comeback triumph, Thursday grabbed the first-round lead in the $10,000 Greenbrier open golf tournament with a six-under-par 64. He took a two-stroke edge over hot pro Sammy Snead and Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill., each of whom had a 66.

Welterweight champion Ray (Sugar) Robinson and Robert Villemain, French middleweight king, will clash at Philadelphia June 5 in a 15-round fight, promotor Phil Glassman announced Thursday. Glassman billed the bout as "the greatest middleweight match since Rocky Graziano's memorable battle with Tony Zale in Chicago three years ago."

Members of the major-minor league executive council held a long, drawn-out meeting at Cincinnati Thursday but Walter Mulby, secretary of baseball, said "nothing was done that could be put in the form of announcement." Mulby said there was discussion of the complaint by officials of the Mexican League that American clubs were enticing their better ball players to the United States.

At Long Last Judd Back With Home Town Team

By JIM BASTABLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Oscar Judd comes back home Saturday.

When the husky, six-foot southpaw, still the nonchalant control hurler but with not quite the zip he had in the majors, curves the ball over the plate at Guelph Saturday against Galt Terriers he'll be back where he started 20 years ago—back in the Intercounty Senior Baseball League, starting the 1950 season.

It also will be a preview of things to expect for the other six clubs—Brantford Red Sox, Kitchener Legionaires, St. Thomas Legion, London Majors, Waterloo Tigers and Stratford Nationals. It will be opening day for all clubs and they're all boasting revamped squads for the 26-game schedule.

His Big Job

But it will mean a little more to Judd. The 40-year-old Hamiltonian, Ont., star has a king-sized job of helping to keep the Leafs out of the league cellar where they've been for the last two seasons.

Judd should have no trouble up in batting whatever he has lost in his pitching arm. He made a name for himself as a pinch-hitter last season with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League. In his last season with Guelph two decades ago he won the league batting championship.

When Judd left the Intercounty League he did a brief stint in the Pacific Coast League and eventually moved up to Boston Red Sox of the American League for the '42 and '43 seasons. Then he put in several years with Philadelphia Phillies of the National League before moving to Toronto.

Hockey Stars Play

While the former big-leaguer makes his first bid for victory in the new Intercounty season, several National Hockey League stars will be making their first appearance of the baseball season.

Howie Meeker, rugged winger with Toronto Maple Leafs, has taken over as playing-coach with Kitchener and will play as a shortstop. Pat Boshmer, net-minder for the Allan-Cup-Hunting Toronto Marlboros, also will be with Kitchener and will relieve on the mound. Boshmer now is in Calgary playing hockey against the Stampeders.

Another is right-fielder Clare Martin of Detroit Red Wings who signed with Waterloo. He played with the Tigers two years ago but sat out the 1949 campaign to rest an injured knee.

The big question today is where former N.H.L. star Don Gallinger will play. Playing-manager with Waterloo for the last two seasons, he has signed up with Kitchener. However, officials said he hasn't yet received a release from the Tigers—and can't play elsewhere until he gets one.

The defending champion Brantford Red Sox appear to be the strongest team. They have several new stars plus most of last year's squad.

Backbone of the team will be its three top hurlers of last season—southpaw Alf Gavey and righthanders Nig Parker and Billy Gibbons. Their late-season drive last year gave the Red Sox the title.

Doctor Performed 20,000 Operations

London — (CP) — Gerald Mullally, senior surgeon at Westminster Hospital, has retired after performing 20,000 operations in 30 years.

Thousands of young doctors remember him as a medical examiner at Oxford and Cambridge.

"They were pretty terrified of me," he recalled.

Mullally, 65, is leaving for Ireland. His ambition is to do some fishing.

BIG 'UN vs LITTLE 'UN

An outstanding wrestling feature will headline tonight's main bout at the Memorial Arena, with Wild Bill Longson, of Salt Lake City, the rugged, ructious former world champion, clashing with Rapid Ray Villmer, the perpetual-motion, human buzz-saw, from St. Louis. Both men are established favorites of heavyweight grapplers, but the larruping Longson has always favored rough, punishing tactics to aid his purposes.

* * *

However, the vivacious Villmer, while not a mean, illegal stylist, is something of a vest - pocket Hercules with his well-muscled frame, but where the talented Villmer has a big edge over most of his opponents, includuing, in this case, Wild Bill Longson, is in the department of speed and never-ceasing drive. It is this continuous, constant aggressiveness of Villmer's that wears down his opposition.

Bob Strangler Wagner, the Portland Cement-Mixer, will oppose Earl McCready, the popular Canadian star, in the semi-final, which promises exciting action. Wee Willie Davis, the towering Hollywood villain of film and mat, will get a severe test from Bobby Nelson, in the first match.

In his 39 years on the turf Richards has collected at least £200,000 in prizes for himself.

A WORTHY PROJECT

The City Council has authorized the organization of what is known as the Belleville Recreation Commission. The Commission's purpose is to provide wholesome recreation for children and adults of the city. It is planned to operate seven junior playgrounds and three senior playgrounds in the various parts of the city, which will be under trained leadership and expert supervision. The overall cost of the Commission's plan for the year is $7,350 of which $4,500 must be raised by public subscription.

* * *

Healthy outdoor recreation under proper leadership and supervision has been conspicuous by its absence in this city for a number of years, with the exception of perhaps an isolated spot financed and supervised by private citizens. Industrial growth of the city with its consequent increase in child population makes supervised outdoor recreation more necessary than ever. It has now reached the point of urgency.

Supervised recreation, especially for the children removes that parents' bugbear, worry. It eliminates the accident hazard. The knowledge that their children are enjoying themselves at play under the watchful guidance of experts, gives parents a feeling of satisfaction, and freedom from mental strain. They will be able to perform their daily tasks and social activities safe in the knowledge that all is well with Junior and Jane. The health benefits to be derived cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

As was mentioned before, $4,500 must be raised by public subscription. And it is felt by officials of the Commission that parents and others will recognize the fact that in subscribing to this amount, they will not only be ensuring the safety of the city's children, but investing in their physical future as well.

It will be money well spent. Better, far better, as a famous radio musician says, "to build a boy than mend a man." Contributions to the Recreation Commission Fund will be received now at either the Bank of Montreal branch here or the offices of the Ontario Intelligencer. Mailed donations to the latter should be earmarked, "Box 34." If you value the health and general well-being of your children and young people, send your contribution in immediately. It is not taxable.

AND SHE "AINT" A REDHEAD!

"Red" Carson dropped in the office this morning wearing a big smile — but carrying no cigars. Yup, you guessed it, it's a cute little bundle of Carson pulchritude which arrived in the world last Monday tipping the scales at six pounds three ounces. Both have individual records, "Red" is the only carrot-top in the Carson clan and this little bundle of joy is the only gal to arrive, thus far. That's the "hull family." The new arrival is Number One in "Red's" menage. Both mamma and baby are doing well, thank you, while "Red" questioned as to what the next one will be, answered with a dreamy look "Yep, the Diesels will be in there fighting next year".

Three-Year-Olds Ready To Go In Turf Classic

Louisville, Ky., May 5—(AP)—Churchill Downs today prepared to close the rainy box on a field of around 14 top three-year-olds for the 70th running of the Kentucky Derby.

Opinions were a dime a dozen on who will win the tough 1¼-mile $100,000 turf classic as a star-studded field headed by Calumet Farm's Four Host prepared for the battle charge at 5:30 p.m. EDT tomorrow. Most everyone qualifies his guesswork on the condition of the track, and whether more rain falls before post time.

The entry box — prematurely opened Thursday "long enough for the names of six challengers to slip through"—will close at 11 a.m. EDT this morning.

Four Hosts Entered

You Host, who has been figured the speediest to step out the pace and try to roll all the way for the big pot and garland of roses, already has been entered.

He was the second name through the box Thursday, as soon as Calumet Farm affirmed the usually colorful entry ceremonies. The chestnut Alibhai colt owned by prominent William Goetz was the second one in the box. Trainer Ray Barbee sent submitted the name of Black George, winner of Tuesday's derby trial, at the No. 1 entry in the derby. Harry Daniels, Your Host's trainer, was next in line.

Several other of the big name hotels got in on Thursday's entry affair. The biggest name aside from Your Host is the Virginia dandy—Hill Prince.

"Hill Prince" Good

Chris Chenery, a strapping bay charger is figured the one to beat Your Host, if anything can do the job. He's a slow starter, but when Eddie Arcaro steps on the throttle, Hill Prince can mow 'em down. Johnny Longden is slated to ride Your Host.

Others already named were Hal Price Headley's Lotowhite, surprise winner over Hill Prince in the second experimental handicap; the tough little flamingo winner, Tom Gray's Oil Capitol; and the long shot Stranded owned by H. H. Abercrombie and W. H. Smith, Houston oilmen.

The last event of horse noses at the Downs' rambling barns showed that barring a broken leg or some other vital mishap, Middleground, On the Mark, Mr. Trouble, Hoarding, Greek Ship, Halleboy, and Hawley were sure to come in at the $1,000 starting fee.

No, Not Again, Louis May Stage Comeback

Chicago, May 5 — (AP) — The spectre of Joe Louis haunted the heavyweight picture today as aides of boxing's National Boxing Association champion Ezzard Charles sidelined for at least 90 days by an ailing heart.

Louis, currently on an exhibition tour of Brazil, says Charles' possible retirement from the ring because of his health "is going to change my plans."

The Brown Bomber's partner in the International Boxing Club, Jim Norris, says he believes Louis "would like to be the first heavyweight champion to win back the title."

The 35-year-old Louis popped back into the already complex heavyweight picture Thursday when Charles flunked a rigorous three-hour physical examination by the Illinois Athletic Commission and they entered "not fit to fight at the present."

Charles was adjudged to have "a vascular condition of the heart."

"It is our suggestion that Charles be re-examined in three months to determine whether he is fit for fighting," the report of two commission physicians said.

One physician's findings rated as a surprise to most observers. Charles was speechless.

He refused comment on the doctors' report. Previous to the examination he told reporters he was in "perfect shape" and ready to take on Freddie Beshore June 7 in a twice-postponed title scrap in Buffalo.

RESCUES DRIVER TRAPPED IN CAB OF SUBMERGED TRUCK
Russell Yard, 25, of Vancouver, B.C., frees man after repeated dives into icy harbour waters

1. After visiting friends on a tanker, William Hagsted climbed into and started the truck which had been parked on the refinery wharf. When the wheels accidentally hit the side of the wharf, the vehicle was thrown 30 feet down into the chilly 39 degrees abovezero water.

2. Russell Yard, a refinery employee, waited only long enough to see that others had gone for ropes and to phone the inhalator squad. Then, without removing his clothes, he plunged into the frigid water. The harbour was 12 feet deep and Yard had to make several dives before he was able to grapple with the truck door.

3. Getting the door open under water was no easy task . . . but Yard persevered, finally dragging the driver free and bringing him to the surface. At the wharf, both men were pulled up to safety. We proudly add the name of this Vancouver hero to the list of those who have won THE DOW AWARD.

THE DOW AWARD is a citation presented for acts of outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. Japs Crash Baseball Game, Three Die

Tokyo, May 5 —(AP)— Three Japanese gate crashers were trampled to death and 23 others were injured today in a rush on a baseball park at Sendai, northern Japan, the newspaper Asahi reported.

The newspaper said 10,000 fans were waiting for the gates to open. About 50 decided to follow several small boys who had climbed the fence. The fence collapsed.

Thousands of fans then surged through the break, trampling those who fell.

Champs Resemble Chumps When Rookie Southpaw Buries Yanks Under 15-0 Avalanche

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

So Chicago White Sox raised cain with New York Yankees.

Bob Cain a skinny lefthander making his first big-league start Thursday made the world champs look like prize chumps in a 15-0 rout.

Nobody ever treated the Yankees like that. And right at home too. Good thing for the front office, only 8,764 were on hand. Last time anybody blanked the Yanks at home was April 23, 1946.

Jack Onslow, Sox manager, gave Cain his first start because he wanted to throw a steady diet of southpaws at the Yanks.

While Cain puzzled New York with five hits, three of them by Phil Rizzuto, the Sox fog into Eddie Lopat and Don Johnson for a jackpot total of 23. The-Yanks contributed four juicy errors.

Gus Zernial hoisted a tremendous 450-foot smash for the Sox, a double and two singles. Little Jim Busby, also had four hits Hank Majeski had three, including a two-run homer.

Cleveland Wins

While the slaughter in the Bronx continued, Cleveland broke Boston's six-game Fenway Park win streak 5-4.

Detroit rolled out of the heavy power to riddle Connie Mack's battered pitching staff. The Tigers collected 15 hits to trim Philadelphia 8-3 on Art Houtteman's five-hitter.

Vic Wertz and Hoot Evers drove in seven runs, enough to ruin the A's by themselves. Dick Kryhoski hit a homer off southpaw Lou Brissie in-the second.

Mike Guerra kept the A's in the game with a three-run homer and double, driving in all five runs.

Joe Ostrowski of St. Louis Browns pitched a five-hitter against Washington to cop his second straight 5-1. Rookie Ken Wood led the Browns with two singles and a double.

Slaier Beats Cards

Revenge was sweet for Dick Slaier, a former St. Louis Card, who came home to haunt his old mates with five hits, driving in five runs in the Phillies' 8-6 night game victory. One of Slaier's blows was his third homer off loser Gerry Staley in the second.

Brooklyn came up with another sore arm case—Dan Bankhead—while smothering Chicago Cubs 10-2. Bankhead riding easy on a 10-1 lead, complained about a pain in his right shoulder and left the game in the sixth. Erv Palica finished. Later it was reported Dan tore a muscle in his shoulder and would be out indefinitely.

A few minutes before Bankhead's trouble the Dodgers announced Don Newcombe was being sent home to rest up his sore arm.

Soon they'll be calling the Boston Braves the new "murders' row." They cut loose for 11 runs in the ninth inning Wednesday Thursday they hit four homers in 12-6 romp over Cincinnati. The Braves now lead the majors with 15 home runs.

The big blows were homers by Earl Torgeson, Sam Jethroe, Willard Marshall and Connie Ryan.

New York Giants walked Ralph Kiner Thursday night to get out of trouble in the ninth. Instead Nanny Fernandez followed with a game-winnng home run to give Pittsburgh a 3-1 victory.

Clean Sweep For Bagotville In 'A' Series

By ERWIN FRICKE

Rouyn, Que., May 5. (CP)—Bagotville Allies made a clean sweep of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association Eastern Canada Intermediate 'A' final series Thursday night by defeating Rouyn flashes 6-2 in the third game of a best-of-five series Bagotville won the other games 6-3 and 6-4.

Bagotville, with a strong back checking team of fast skaters, went in front in the opening period, when Vic Kyryluk fired the first counter past Harper from a scramble in front of the Rouyn net. From that point on, there was never any doubt in the minds of the 4,100 spectators coggerning the eventual outcome.

At a late hour Thursday night the Bagotville Players still were undecided as to whether they would play an unofficial series against Port Colborne for the Eastern Canada title. Port Colborne previously withdrew from the competition.

Lineups:

Bagotville—goal, Menard; defence, R. Leger, Federonick; centre, Baudoin; wings, G. Leger, Archibald. Subs: R. Laroche, Lacette, Tremblay, Bilodeau, Kyryluk, Gilbert, Lacasse, Levesque.

Rouyn—Goal, Harper; defence, Fortin, Talion; centre, Bendo; wings, Lajoie, G. Baril. Subs: Taylor, Hunter, Guimond, Germain, Milosovich, R. Baril, N. Connelly.

Marlies, Stamps All Happy At One Game Each

Calgary, May 5 — (CP) — Toronto Marlboros and Calgary Stampeders appear to be going all out to retain the friendly sporting bond that has developed between the two cities in the last - two years.

There is none of the bickering in this year's Allan Cup final that went last year when Regina Caps went east to meet Ottawa Senators in the Dominion Senior Hockey playoff.

Club officials recall the Toronto-Calgary camaraderie that has sprung up since Calgary's footballing Stampeders and their supporters took the Ontario Capital by storm.

Here are some typical after-the-heat-of-battle comments:

Toronto defenceman Hugh Holmes: "Those Stampeders are the cleanest-playing team we've played this year."

Harold Ballard, Marlboro's president: "Calgary has the fastest-skating team we've come across this season."

Lloyd Turner, Stampeder manager: "Toronto has a fine, fast-skating club that is going to make us work hard to win."

Myron (Butch) McDonald, Calgary coach: "They are a good clean club. It will be a team that gets the breaks that will win the series."

Things are palsy-walsy now. And the best-of-seven series is tied at a game apiece. Maybe fast-talking

Hollywood, May 5 — (AP) — Ann Raines looks like a mess and loves it.

Her make-up men worked for two weeks to make her homely after role in "The Second Face." And they did a good job. Her hair looks bumped and broken, her hairline comes to the middle of her forehead and her lips are slight-lined.

"I've been waiting for a chance like this," she enthused. "I want to be a dramatic actress and this is certainly a dramatic part . . . Not that I want to go through my picture disfigured, but the homeless role gives you a chance to really act."

"The Second Face" is a story of how prejudice a homely girl has in a world educated to favor beauty.

"Every magazine you pick up," Miss Raines said, "is filled with pictures of beautiful women and tells us how to become beautiful. Once, they say, comes to the beautiful. It makes the homely girl the world's forgotten women."

Unfunny Comics

Billy DeWolfe says comedians aren't funny in real life.

The wry - faced comic cited himself as an example. "I'm very quiet," he declared. "I don't even like parties. I'm very moody."

"Once in a while I do venture to a social gathering," he admitted. "But you'll usually find me off in a corner. Of course, I cut up just like anyone else when I'm with a small group.

"People usually think when they invite a comedian to a party that he will 'put on a show for them. I don't like to do that. I just want to do my acting on a stage."

The Kibitzer

No doubt you know. A kibitzer must always wait until you err to show he is a white. He pops up when mistakes occur to act as if superior by giving you the biz.

Some partners always seem to know what you should not have done. But only after what you did turned out wrong. Chances are they would do as you did in the same circumstances.

Against a three no-trump contract, west held this hand:

♥J 9 6 2
♦A Q 10 8
♣Q 8 5

Opponents had bid hearts before finding their no-trump game bid. The opening lead from west was the spade nine. When leading from a short suit it is correct to lead the highest.

Game at no-trump could have been made against any opening lead. But the spade lead permitted the south declarer to take ten tricks instead of nine. It happened to be that way.

The lead of a diamond would have held south to nine tricks. Came then a beef from east. His claim was that the diamond lead was not only best but also the correct lead.

In this he had some backing. Because it is permissable by rule to make such a lead in no-trump. Only against a suit contract is it unwise to lead away from an ace or a ten ace headed by ace or king.

However, the lead of spade nine would be preferred with such a holding by most advanced players, I believe. More tricks can be taken in the diamond suit if led from some other hand.

The lead of a nine indicates it is from a short and worthless suit. Therefore, it is a signal that some other suit return is very much preferred. This information is valuable to a knowing partner.

Why would a player lead a worthless suit? Because he does not lead a suit bid by opponents. And his other suits will take more if led by partner. Second guessers are awful messers.

Butcher Awarded $12,260 Damages For Loss of Smell

Toronto, May 4 (CP) — An Assize Court jury Wednesday night awarded David Sterling, Sr., a Peterborough butcher, $12,260 for loss of sense of smell and other injuries suffered in an automobile collision near Newtonville, Ont., Oct. 23.

After deliberating five hours the jury awarded Sterling's son, David, Jr., $286 for minor injuries. Defendants in the action were Stanley L. Davis and John Walker, both of Toronto, and Cecil White of Port Hope.

The jury found Davis 63 per cent responsible in the three-car collision, and White 32 per cent. Walker was owner of one of the cars.

Sterling said he could smell "absolutely nothing" since the accident. His sense of taste was "pretty well lost" and his left eye injured.

Lock Company Strike Called

Peterborough, May 3 (CP) — Local 1927, United Electrical Workers (Ind.) Thur. called a strike against the Peterborough Lock Company after 1-2 hour work week with the same take home pay.

About 180 production workers are involved. At present a 45-hour week is in force.

Other issues in the contract dispute are the raising of base rates for men from 85 cents an hour to $1 and for women from 82 cents to 87 cents; a revised time schedule and seniority protection.

Mass picketing by about 120 union members, some carrying placards, began shortly before 7 a.m. The plant is deserted apart from a maintenance man. Management is conducting business from a suite in the Empress Hotel, where some 30 office workers are working.

Robert Maybee, managing director, said the company is willing to negotiate with the union on the basis of a recent conciliation board report. One of the recommendations of the board was no reduction in hours and no wage increase.

Driver Not Found, Judgments Will be Paid From Fund

Hamilton, May 3 — (CP)—Because the motorist responsible for a collision near Ancaster a year ago has not been found Mr. Justice A. M. Lebel Wednesday handed down six judgments totalling $6,100—to be paid out of the unsatisfied judgment fund.

The plaintiffs in both actions were all from Hamilton. Awards were as follows: Francis Gaffney, $4,500; Gaffney's wife Mrs. Marie Gaffney, $1,196; his mother, Mrs. Annie Gaffney, $600; his sister, $200; Kenneth Stewart, $1,900, his wife, $1,013.

At the time of the accident, Gaffney was driving west along No. 2 highway when the unknown motorist proceeded to pass his car forcing him part-way into the ditch. He lost control of his car and crashed into Stewart's auto.

Stewart sued both the registrar motor vehicles and Gaffney for damages, but the action against Gaffney was dismissed with costs. Actions of Gaffney and Stewart against the registrar were allowed with costs.

Blind Man Builds Racing Sailboat

Victoria — (CP) — A blind man with only one hand who won international recognition by building an eight - foot yacht tender unassisted, says he's all set to get started on a new and bigger project — a racing sailboat.

Arthur Barnes, who has taken up boatbuilding as a hobby and operates a confectionary store for a living, says the "Sloka" class sailboat will be started in April and he hopes to complete it in October.

Plans for the boat were drawn by Peter Clement, a navy draftsman and friend of Barnes.

Barnes says the boat will be "deep and V-bottomed for stability."

Glasgow Tea-Rooms Remain as Monument

Glasgow — (CP) — Tea-rooms known to generations of Glasgow-bound are to be preserved as a monument to Charles Rennie Mackintosh, is described by the Glasgow Herald as the city's greatest architect.

Glasgow Corporation's general finance committee has recommended that the city purchase the premises on Ingram Street formerly known as Miss Cranston's tea-rooms.

After 50 years they are much the same as when Mackintosh designed them: a Chinese room with a maze of grills and flamboyant ornaments, a panelled smokeroom and fireplaces with wrought-iron grates.

The original high-backed chairs are still there, as well as the solidly-designed cutlery and decorative umbrella stands.

Mural decorations by Margaret Macdonald Mackintosh, the architect's wife, reflect the influence of Aubrey Beardsley and the pre-Raphaelite school.

By Alice Ross Colver

He stared. Then he gave a short laugh. "Where in the world did you learn all that?"

"At school."

"It must be a rather remarkable school."

"It is."

Herman appeared now, lumbering and puffing, beaming and beheaded, a heavy tray borne off on one podgy hand. Inquiries solicitously and with a thick German accent as to Captain Barr's comfort during the night, he set out the dishes before them—eggs, griddle cakes, syrup, bacon, and toast. When he had gone again through the swinging doors, Brian said anxiously "I hope it's what you want? I didn't know."

"It's perfect," he sniffed at the griddlecakes appreciatively, his irritation vanished before the simplicity of her manner. "Now tell me about your remarkable school."

"Well . . . Oh! I never thought about eggs! Do you want eggs?"

"No thank you."

"Or cereal?"

"This is plenty, really."

She took a big bite of a griddlecake. "Mm. This is good. Well what makes it remarkable is that they have all kinds of boys and girls there. And we're taught that they all have a right to the same things."

"What things?"

"Well, a fair chance first. No snap judgments just because their clothes or looks or clothes or way of talking is different from ours. Then trust. And, you know, love, of course.

"On the theory that you can command the heart?"

"That's the point. You don't have to command it. You just have to let it follow its own course. It's been commanded too much."

He stopped eating for a moment, somewhat puzzled. She went on, her violet-black eyes darkening in her earnestness.

"Take children for instance," she said. "They don't know the difference between black skin and white skin and yellow skin. They don't care. They all just play together without thinking anything about it until they're commanded by older people."

"I see what you mean. But don't tell me you have any black skinned or yellow-skinned students at your school."

She nodded. "Of course, Japanese and Chinese and Germans and Negroes. Also English and Czechs and a whole lot of others. Not many of any one nationality, maybe only a couple of each, but they're all there. Except Russians of course."

He laid down his fork. "Do your parents know that? But they must!"

She nodded again. "Mother chose it for me. She thinks it's a wonderful experiment in living 'The truth is," a smile glimmered now in the depths of her eyes, "she wants to confine the experiment to school. She doesn't want me to bring it home and practice it."

"Naturally."

Susan concluded. "So now she's on the horns of a dilemma."

"You mean. . ."

"You, yes. How can she stop my seeing you, no matter what your background is, when she sent me to school to learn to mix with people who have all kinds of backgrounds?"

He stirred his coffee slowly, his eyes on her face.

"What kind of backgrounds have they, for instance?"

"Oh goodness! You'd never believe. Why, there's a girl there, only fifteen, who's had a baby already. She's a refugee. It was born over there. She couldn't help it. And there's a boy straight out of a reform school."

Her words filled him with a curious, cool and expanding excitement. Up to now he had felt that she must be protected from knowing altogether what he had been. Now he realized that the reaches of her mind and heart were greater than he would ever have guessed and probably nothing he could tell her would really shock her. It was amazing. It was incredible.

He said, "all those boys and girls must present some problems and difficulties."

"Oh, they do, of course. That's the fascinating part. How to work them out. And that's what I mean. You can't be too upright yourself or you get nowhere. You can't be afraid."

"So that's why you dared to come up to my bedroom!"

"Dont you see? It was nothing. I wanted to talk to you. I had to talk to you. And I couldn't find Herman to call you." She had finished her breakfast and now pushed her plate away and leaned toward him, both elbows on the table. "Gerry, what are you going to do?"

"That my dear is the sixty-four dollar question."

"Please be serious. You've got to be serious."

"Why?"

"Because you don't know."

"No I don't."

"Haven't you any job waiting?"

He gave her a wry smile, "I'm not that kind of veteran."

"But what did you do before you got into service?"

"Anything. Everything. Nothing."

"I'd really like to know."

Suddenly against his volition, against his desire, against all his rigid training of himself to a tight-lipped silence, Gerry began to talk. He heard himself as if he were someone else, not mincing words, not wanting to. In a way, it was decent, a part of his mind told him, because he wasn't deceiving her. Whatever happened between them now, he'd played it clean. Nothing was held back, Nothing. And, assured by some quality of her listening that no matter what he said, it would be safe with her, talking became easy. It was even a relief. For as he talked, with passion sounding in his voice, of his squalid and neglected childhood, of his roving lawless adolescence, and, finally, of his groping uphill fight to win for himself the decencies of living which the accident of birth had denied him, he felt released for the first time from the rigid strictures that had always bound him. He felt almost free.

But when he had finished, he fell silent, already filled with regret and wishing he could call back every word. What had happened to him, anyway? What had come over him? Never in all his long struggle had he been anything but secretive and cautious. Now he felt weakened. He felt unmanned.

PICTON

Stresses Value Of Tourist Trade To Canadians

Picton—The importance of the tourist trade was stressed by Dr. L. Mackie, president of Quinte's Isle Tourist Association, at the dinner meeting of Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, Wednesday night recently organized under sponsorship the Chamber. The new association has 50 members. Chief project this year will be established of an information bureau, he said. Dr. Mackie pointed out that everyone benefits from the tourist industry.

There were 270 million United States dollars spent by visitors in Canada last year. A breakdown of the dollar shows that 25 cents went to retail and department stores; 22c to restaurants and food stores; 17c to resorts, hotels and tourist camps; 12c to service stations and garages; 9c for movies and entertainment; 7c for travel on trains, steamships and motor coach; 5c for refreshments and roadside purchases and 3c for novelties. Dr. Mackie revealed.

"We must be more aggressive and widen our campaign to secure tourists," stated L. B. Callnan, chairman of the tourist promotion committee. He reported prospects for a good season this year. More courtesy is needed, stated John Arnaud and Dr. C. S. Fishing Hall of Fame shield.

Slack who stated that they had been impressed with the courtesy shown them on trips to the south.

A report by the secretary, Phil Dodds, revealed more than 300 communications in four months, covering a very wide variety of requests.

Bruce Martin stressed the need of good roads and Beath Morden outlined regulations governing roadside signs. Mayor William Henley said that town streets would be improved, and he predicted that parking meters would be installed to help take care of the traffic problem.

Support of local sports was urged by James deC. Hepburn. A. S. Horsey felt that many farmers would become members of the Chamber as they too were interested in developing the county In a discussion a variety of topics was debated.

President C. S. Slack was in the chair. A. Benvie and W. Hicks gave piano duets.

The Chamber is continuing the fishing competition started last year. Rods and reels have been donated for the largest pickerel, pike, small and large mouth bass and muskie caught in Prince Edward waters during the year. In addition, prizes are given for the biggest fish caught each month. A grand prize of an outboard motor, donated by George Pubow will be awarded. This will be awarded by a panel of judges with size of fish, age and experience of the angler, and unusual circumstances entering into the catch, being considered. Names of winners will be placed on a plaque which is placed on the fish shield.

Seven Killed, Heavy Damage By Tornadic Winds

Nine-State Midwest Area Lashed by Winds, Rain

Kansas City, Mo., (CP) — An early May storm, powered by tornadic winds, slashed a path of destruction across the midwestern United States Friday. Seven persons were killed and score were injured.

Property damage across a nine-state area was expected to mount into the millions of dollars.

The violent winds which reached gusts of 10 miles an hour some areas—battered the west-central south central states all day and into the night. Tornadoes struck at two areas in Minnesota.

There was snow, rain, hail and blinding dust. Flood waters plagued some sections.

The intense storm was over northern Minnesota early today. High winds "combed over much of the midwest but the U.S. weather bureau said they would diminish during the day. The storm moderated as it moved northeastward into Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

Three persons lost their lives in the storm which swept over Iowa. Two were killed in Wisconsin and one each in Nebraska and Texas. Two traffice deaths in Illinois were attributed to the storm.

The strong winds whipped freshly fallen snow across the western prairie lands of the Dakotas and Nebraska, some silos blanketing central and eastern Nebraska, early in the day.

Trees Uprooted

The winds of hurricane force extended through the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Texas and Oklahoma were "about back to normal" after Thursday night's tornadoes which killed one person and injured several others. Tornadic winds also struck Kansas Thursday night, injuring 52.

The wind storm truck with violent fury at the twin ports of Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., on Lake Superior.

There was much damage to buildings. Trees were uprooted, power lines snapped and plate glass windows caved in. At least two homes in Duluth were destroyed. The damage in Superior alone was estimated at several million dollars.

The winds, accompanied by heavy rain, reached velocities of 56 M.P.H. The main business district and residential areas in Superior were hardest hit by the storm, which lasted only one minute. Four were injured in Superior and 13 in Duluth.

Flood waters threatened Crookston, Minn., and Grand Forks, N.D. The Red Cross evacuated scores of families at Crookston as the Red River rose to 22.2 feet, nearly six-feet above flood stage.

HEAVY BUSINESS SCHEDULE MAY DELAY CLOSING

Score of Bills On Order Paper

Ottawa, May 6—(CP)—Judging by the progress parliament has been making lately, it's going to be a long, hard pull to prorogation this summer.

Friday the Commons ranged from discussion of railway crossing safety at one, then from Maritime policy to the necessity of a Canadian coast guard. And that old bugbear to legislative progress—western oil pipe lines—came up again.

Most of the discussion came as the House began consideration of transport department estimates totalling $82,000,000. After five hours of talk it passed the first item—that for departmental administration totalling $1,012,000. Estimates for all other departments under transport remain to be considered.

More than a score of bills already are on the order paper. And more are on the way. Prime Minister St. Laurent outlined to the House a new list of legislation the government proposes to introduce this session.

Will Amend Act

One of the major items is an amendment to the official secrets act under which 20 persons were prosecuted in closed-door trials of 1946. Contents of the bill were not officially disclosed, but it was suggested it may include a provision to allow prosecution of Canadians who break the act's security regulations while abroad. At present only those who break it while in Canada can be prosecuted.

At the House opening Mr. St. Laurent said it is get planned to hold meetings with representatives of various Indian tribes prior to introduction of a bill to amend the Indian Act. The individuals to be interested—including the Indians—would be asked to look over the bill after it is introduced.

In the Senate Senator A. W. Roebuck (L—Ontario criticized the government's sales tax structure as "odious and oppressive."

The Commons gave first reading to a bill to increase from $500,000 to $1,000,000 the annual grant to the trade recruiting fund which provides money for safety

Scotland Famous for Kilted Men But American Women Wear Trousers

London, May 6 — (Reuters) — Scotland's crack kilted regiments today were flung into the sartorial war now raging between American columnist Robert Rark and Britain's men's fashions arbiter, the Journal Tailor and Cutter.

Ruark, columnist for the New York World-Telegram and the Sun, returning to his assault upon British male dress styles, made what the Journal calls his most dangerous squawk by saying "a kilt is a dress. Dresses are worn by girls."

"Even a dangling sporran doesn't discount the fact that a kilt is a skirt and a man looks very peculiar in a frock," he said.

Tell that to the Black Watch—and the white trousers was (in effect) the Tailor and Cutter's grim answer.

It said: "Whilst Scotland is famous as a land where men wear kilts, America is equally notorious as the land where the women wear the trousers."

And it added darkly: "There are five kilted regiments in the British army, and Ruark should approach their members individually and inform them 'kilts are skirts and girls wear skirts'."

"We would like to see the immediate consequences," the Journal commenta.

Blindfolded Nightwatchman Traps Three Men, Gets Them To Ring Burglar Alarm

Hamilton, May 6—(CP)— A quick-thinking night watchman early today foiled a daring safe-blowing attempt in the Palace Theatre and landed three men in police custody.

Bound and blind-folded, 64-year-old Alex Davidson instructed two masked intruders to ring in his watchman's clocks in the wrong order.

The error from routine, flashed in alarm sheets of the Dominion Electric Protection Company, brought police and detectives to surround the theatre.

Arrested on charges of breaking and entering with intent were Bruce Rogers, 22; James Martin, 19 and Donald McLeod, 22.

$2.35 in Safe Is Untouched

About $2,500 in cash in the safe was untouched.

Davidson standing near the office door, saw two men midway between him and the entrance to the theatre. Their faces were masked with silk stockings.

In an attempt to warn police, he fled down the stairway to turn in an alarm.

On the landing, he turned his ankle, and tripped, the two men pounced on him.

The men placed a blindfold over his face, tied his hands behind his back and led him back to the upstairs office. He was forced to lie on the floor behind a chesterfield, with an open umbrella over his head.

The two discovered Davidson's keys. He told them the keys were used to ring in his watchman's round of clocks. The clocks are connected with the alarm system of the Dominion Electric Protection Company.

Although he knew he had already rung two of the clocks in the main floor, he directed the men to them, and to a third one, in the lobby. The first two should not have been rung a second time, and the third was rung out of order.

Police called by the protection service surrounded the theatre, whose back door faces the police station. Three men were arrested near the office door, and a third man was discovered hiding behind curtains on the stage.

'Transfusion' With Planes, Parts, Munitions May Save Nationalists if Given Quickly

By SPENCER MOOSA

Taipei, Formosa, May 6 (AP)— A "blood transfusion" in the form of planes, spare parts, ammunition and other war equipment might save the Chinese Nationalists, but it must come quickly.

Because of Russian aid to the Chinese Communists, time is pressing and the issue of Nationalist survival is in serious doubt.

This represents the best possible consensus of foreign and Chinese sources in this island capital of the Nationalists.

The Nationalist situation is dark, and the only optimistic outlook—and not much of one at that—is that in China events do not always follow logical courses.

At present it looks as if the Reds will attack and conquer the outpost island of Chushan, then invade Formosa, throwing in an impressive armada of motorized craft and their new air force.

Two things could prevent this: a successful Nationalist resistance on Chusan, or a consequent upset in the Red timetable which would give Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalists a breathing spell until next spring.

The Nationalists say they can hold out if given aid, that they can fight their own battles but that the sinews of war—lacking all previous setbacks, they consider themselves the best bet against communism east of the Suez.

With recent loss fo Hainan Island, the Nationalist holdings have been reduced to less than 14,500 square miles. Besides Formosa, the only bastions of any consequence are Quemoy, 150 miles southeast of Shanghai and Hoemoy (Chinmen), just off Amoy.

Apart from these three islands, the Nationalists still hold a few of other tiny ones. The greatest is the 50-square-mile barren, wind-swept headland, 100 miles Formosa and the mainland.

The Nationalists officially say they have about 1,500,000 guerillas on the mainland. Independent analysts think that figure may be exaggerated, but not exhaustively so. They conceivably could be welded into a powerful factor in the struggle.

The Nationalists, however, it is considered doubtful if the mainland forces opposing the Reds ever could become strong enough to stage an overthrow.

Battle Between Indians, Officers Breaks up Dance

Orillia, May 6 (CP)— The Indian and the paleface at peace in Canada for many moons, dug up the hatchet Friday night—on a small scale.

A wild battle between Indians and police officers broke up a wedding dance at the nearby Rama Indian reserve and resulted in the arrest of nine men on charges of being drunk and illegal possession of liquor.

Constables J. Sy Mills of the R.C.M.P. and Harry Kift of the Ontario Provincial Police said a mob rushed them when they tried to arrest two men during a routine inspection of the reservation.

"Unarmed as such, our mission we arrest one or two for possession of cheap wine," said Constable Mills.

The melee broke out after the two men had been taken to the cruisers around, Mills said.

"Half the reserve came after us. A lot of them had been drinking and were hard to handle."

Five other officers were called and managed to bring the battle under control.

The constables said they were hurled to the ground by Indians drunk on cheap wine and were kicked and held down while the original pair escaped into the woods. The two were not arrested.

When the fighting broke out in front of the dance hall, the band continued to play although only three couples were dancing.

Favor Lessening Internal Control Of W. Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, May 6 (AP)— Both British and American delegations to the London Foreign Ministers' meeting will present proposals for lessening German internal security and internal affairs, authoritative sources said today.

The French are expected to be the most reluctant to make any changes in the powers of the occupation statute. There also are minor disagreements on methods between British and American officials, but not in principle.

All three powers agree, however, to keep a tight control on military and other security matters.

The situation is simply this:

The West created the Bonn government to bulwark against Russia and to start the Germans back in the family of European states.

If they destroy this government they will be pushing Germany right back to the chaotic post-war days and interference with Germans cannot be allowed to happen without a disaster for the West in the cold war.

Meanwhile, the greatest political danger to the Bonn government is to become labelled as an occupation puppet regime.

Therefore, Bonn politicians strongly resent and protest any interference in their governing of West Germany.

Britons and Americans feel that the very controls exercised over the Bonn government the more creating a crisis which would bring its downfall.

Armed Services Take Over Control of Flood Relief In Red River Valley

Greater Winnipeg Area Prepares for Emergencies

Winnipeg, May 6 — (CP) — The armed forces took over control of flood control work through the Red River Valley today.

Premier Douglas L. Campbell announced that Brig. R. E. A. Morton, General Officer Commanding for Prairie Command, has been appointed "directing officer of flood relief."

The services assumed charge following a night of near-disaster proportions through the Greater Winnipeg area with its population of more than 300,000.

Three Dikes Burst

At least three dikes burst.

Davidson's Corner, Manitoba, had to evacuate their homes along the swift-running Red River.

More than 200 patients were moved from two flood-threatened municipal hospitals.

The first life was lost in the greater Winnipeg area when a volunteer was drowned.

Placing flood relief under military command does not mean martial law. Responsibility for law and order is still vested with civil authority.

Authorization of the move was obtained from Federal Defence Minister Claxton after a three-hour meeting attended by federal, provincial and municipal authorities and top armed forces officers and police officials.

Flood-Fighter Drowned

Police in the Winnipeg suburb of St. Vital said an unidentified volunteer flood - fighter was drowned when a wall of water smashed into a house on Kingston Crescent in the Elm Park area.

The man had been working inside the house when the barricaded back door collapsed under the force of the water. He was hurled into the basement. A diver was to try to find the body.

It was the second fatality in three weeks of severe flooding that has swept the Red River valley.

Winnipeg City Council called an emergency meeting for 11 a.m. this morning.

Situation Deteriorates

Premier Campbell said in his statement that it was unanimously agreed at the meeting, which began at 11:30 p.m. and ended at 2:30 a.m., that "the situation had so suddenly and so seriously deteriorated that the direction of all flood-relief efforts should be centralized forthwith."

Almost 200 patients were driven from two civic hospitals in Winnipeg's low-lying Riverview district.

Residents were ordered from their homes in part of north St. Boniface. Fifteen Army reached were provided as emergency housing.

Four streets were under water in a river-bordering area in north Winnipeg near the Canadian Pacific railway station.

Scores of families in the threatened Wildwood housing development in Fort Garry municipality to the south of the provincial city. Community Club officials said four-fifths planned to leave.

The Henderson highway, last paved road into Winnipeg from the East, was flooded and closed to traffic.

ON WAY TO MOSCOW TALKS

Prague, May 6 — (Reuters) — Professor Gunnar Myrdal of Sweden, executive secretary of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, arrived in Prague by air from Zurich Friday on his way to Moscow talks on the east-west trade deadlock.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—Synopsis: Warm air from the Mississippi Valley which invaded the southern part of Ontario yesterday afternoon and during the night has been gradually pushed eastward by cooler, drier air from the central states. Friday's maximum was 70s in the east (notably south of Timagami) will be replaced by afternoon readings in the more seasonable 60s today.

The prospect is for continuing mild weather over most of the province during the weekend. The gale warnings displayed on all the lakes today will be lowered on Sunday as the winds diminish during the night.

BIG THREE WILL SKETCH DESIGN TO HALT REDISM

London — May 6 — (AP) — The big three try next week to sketch a master design against communist unrest.

The foreign ministers of Britain, United States and France will meet in London. The ideal outcome, it is felt here, would be a "western" foreign policy to replace those of individual powers — but that degree of unanimity is not altogether likely.

Preliminary talks in London in the last two weeks have made it plain, however, that the three countries feel they must move closer together if they are to win the cold war.

A western source expressed the view that no spectacular project would come out of the meeting of Ernest Bevin, Dean Acheson and Robert Schuman. But policies set by the western allies as recently as a year ago are outdated. A new policy must be set in motion.

A feeling of this was expressed by Acheson in speeches and echoed by British diplomatic informants—but it was useless to even attempt negotiation of the cold war until Russia can be shown further aggression if possible.

May Go Without Russia

In previous big three sessions, policies were chosen with one ear cocked for a Russian knock at the door and the view that no course should be taken which might irritate the Russians.

This time a course will be set to let the Russians know firmly that the west is determined to protect its freedom.

Opponents of this developing policy charge it as dividing the world into two armed camps and say it will make a shooting war inevitable instead of preventing it.

Secretary-general Trygve Lie of the United Nations may have had this in mind when he said "a permanent split of the world into two camps" could lead only to a Third World War.

Delicate Operation Will Save Siamese Twins to Lead Normal Lives

Edmonton, May 6 — (CP) — Two baby babies, who have thrived although bound together by nature, today are being nourished in hospitals here of delivery, they will be surgically separated.

The twins are described as more difficult than the birth of the Dionne quintuplets.

The Townsend babies are bright and healthy, said Dr. Allin.

Naturally they get in each other's way, but they appear to get along well together — although one may be sleeping while the other is crying."

The twins are identical in appearance although Brenda is slightly smaller than Beverley.

Doctors expect to find that one "enjoys" the other's heart, the heart of one will be on the left, the other's on the right, with similar variations for other organs.

Tests to determine the extent of the union were begun last December by Dr. Fred Brewerton who discovered that material swallowed by one child did not go through the intestines of the other. It is believed that the only vital organs shared by the twins is their liver. It will be divided.

Mrs. R. Townsend of Vermilion, Alta., gave birth to the girls at her home on Dec. 31. Mrs. Townsend is the mother of two other children.

Dr. Allin also praised the work of his personal friend, Dr. William Freebury, a general practice doctor "who delivered the babies."

"There was a very severe problem of delivery," Dr. Allin said. "Mrs. Townsend's pelvis was unusually die at birth."

Need for Increasing Scope Of Community Chest Discussed at Special Meeting

Support of a strong sponsoring group representative of all major welfare and social interests in the community was sought at a meeting for view of formation of a Community Chest committee in this city, it was decided at a special meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. during the week.

To work toward this end a small nominating committee of A. L. Davis of the Y.M.C.A.; Jack Bennett, chairman of the civic committee of the Chamber of Commerce and Freeman Burrows secretary-manager of the Chamber was named.

Would Reduce Drives

The meeting, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, was attended by representatives of social and welfare organizations in the city. As chairman for the meeting was Jack Bennett, chairman of the civic committee of the Chamber said the object of the meeting was to explore the possibilities of increasing the scope of the organization and thus reduce the number of conflicting drives for funds in the city.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Stanton Lee, associate director of the community chest and council division of the Canadian Welfare Council. Mr. Stubbins reviewed the growth of Community Chest movement in Canada, noting that the Canadian Welfare Council was supported by management, private subscription and community chest organizations. His chief purpose was to assist in the organization and operation of community chests.

His Council exercised no control over local organizations but assisted only where help is needed. He said that in organizing a local community chest as many as possible of the local agencies should be included so that all overlapping services and activities could be minimized.

Special Direction

He said the activities of the Chest should be directed by people who represent social agencies as well as other organizations and capable citizens who would plan, advise and direct the budget committee. The budget committee would determine the share each agency would receive from the proceeds of the annual campaign.

Mr. Stubbins said in a small community the community chest needs a substantial portion of the local agencies to succeed. If the most approved agencies were included in the Chest, one drive or campaign would provide for the needs of all. This would make it easier to attract capable campaign workers and to train them so the success of the campaign would be assured.

Those present at attending the meeting were as follows:

Mr. H. Ackerman—Community Chest.

Douglas Bews—Canadian National Institute for the Blind

A. J. Davis—Y.M.C.A.

W. Lockyer—The Children's Aid Society

A. R. Thompson—V.O.N. and Navy League, Belleville

C. N. Nicholson—Boy Scouts of America, local association

Colored movies of the last field day at Brighton were shown by Al Bakyta, following which the meeting was thrown open for discussion and swapping or bartering by owners of ham equipment.

The hobby show proved to be the big event of the evening with ten exhibits on display. These exhibits were of radio ham equipment constructed by the members. By popular vote Gene Hitchon received first prize, the award being his choice of many pieces of ham equipment. Jack Warner took second prize with C. C. Young taking third. Prizes were also awarded to Ken Calnan Les Sonter, Al Martin, W. Thompson, A. Bakyta, Ray Heath and H. Carruthers. The door prize of a complete electric clock was won by Albert Bakyta.

Expresses Appreciation

Chairman Hitchon Carruthers commented on the success of the club during the year and thanked members for their co-operation and enthusiasm. He also expressed the club's appreciation to organizations and companies who had donated merchandise or otherwise contributed to the success of the club.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Jack Warner, Mrs. G. Hitchon, Mrs. A. Smith and Mrs. G. Byers at the conclusion of the meeting.

It was stated.

Installation of two-hour meters on Pinnacle Street has been beneficial both from the standpoint of maintenance and of convenience on the part of the motorists.

The two-hour parking limit available to motorists by inserting two nickels in the slot affords double the parking time of the meters on Front and Bridge Streets, while collections from the meters and other maintenance is also simplified.

Members of the local traffic committee on Thursday evening were authorized by city council at their regular committee meeting to make application to the Canadian National Railways to have the railroad bridge on North Front Street widened.

Council members felt that the overhead bridge is too narrow for safe operation of today's vehicles. The recommendation was that the traffic committee contact the railway with the view of having the bridge widened. When all other branches die
Our love for him will still keep green
And never fade away.

DAYLILIES—A MOST ADAPTABLE AND LOVELY PERENNIAL CULTURE

Modern Hybrid Daylilies are a vast improvement on the yellow and orange kinds. The new varieties have a wide colour range from pale yellow to dark red and many are in bicolour forms. From these lovely flowers springs a world of beauty and fragrance. They deserve an important place in the perennial garden and are a horticultural triumph.

By careful selection it is possible to have bloom from May until September. The graceful foliage is attractive at all times and is an effective background for low perennials or annuals. The botanical name "Hemerocallis" means "Beautiful for a day." While individual blooms last but a day, each stem bears seven buds which come out on successive days. Set plants out in spring about 2 to 3 feet apart. Divide established clumps every three to four years. Any good garden soil will suit Daylilies, but an occasional top dressing of well rotted manure will improve the quality and quantity of bloom.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

WINIFRED E. WILSON

REPETITIOUS

"Drop it, drop it; cover it up, cover it up; give it to him, give it to him."

Thus sings the brown thrasher from the top branches of a tree or bush. Anyone not exceptionally well acquainted with the voice of a catbird might take this to be the musical efforts of that familiar, grey bird. However, the thrasher's song is more brilliant, and longer sustained—sometimes as much as fifteen minutes without stopping. Besides, the main characteristic should always be remembered: that repetition of every phrase. Both are mimics, but whoever listened to a catbird for such a length of time without hearing the discordant "meouw"? The note is replaced by the brown thrasher's "chack."

If it is possible to get a glimpse of the musician, even a silhouette identification is simplified. The thrasher's singing posture is always the same: head raised, long pointed, down-curving bill practically wide open, tail (which is almost half the length of the whole bird) hanging straight down. And, by the way, it is this same tail which has provided the name, because it is "thrashed" about incessantly.

A good view of the musician is often possible, because though secretive and furtive in all else, this Canadian representative of the mockingbird perches on the conspicuous singing perch. Then we can see that it is comparable in coloring to the thrushes, but unlike any one of them, the entire upper side is a bright, red brown. Closer inspection reveals that the creamy white breast is marked with streaks rather than spots. These are a very dark brown. Two white wing-bars are very distinct, and the eyes are a pale, glassy yellow.

A concert finished, the singer quickly vanishes into the shrubbery, where it scratches about on the ground in an effort to find its favorite food: injurious insects, beetles, grasshoppers, and caterpillars. Any farmer in its vicinity should be pleased, because the clumps of bushes on his property and the hedges between fields make perfect hunting grounds for a thrasher. If there are trees in an orchard or garden as does the catbird, and few of the thirty kinds of fruit which constitute the remainder of its

Every Man Spy Against Rats, Purpose of New English Law, Pied Piper is Ex-Railroader

(By GLENN WILLIAMS)

London, May 5. (AP)—Britain aims to make every man a spy against rats—a fifth column of food saboteurs.

That's the main idea of a revised rats and mice bill that became law this spring.

The battle against hordes of rats has been backed by a country-wide law since 1919. But until this year every occupant of a building was supposed to do his own ratting. Now his city will do it for him, whether he wants it to or not.

The law also demands that every citizen inform officials at once if his place is infested with the rodents. He can be fined if he doesn't.

Cats, traps and such exotic remedies as the Pied Piper whose tunes lured Hamelin's rats into the river Weser are passe as weapons in the anti-rat arsenal.

The thing that gets the rat is a scientific donation of free grub, mixed with a lethal Mickey Finn.

Britain's city and national officials began their hardest drive against rats during the war to save food. With the country blockaded by Hitler's submarines and the people closely rationed, every grain of food was precious. Every warehouse-raiding rat was a fifth columnist.

For a time, the rat brigade tried to safeguard food stores by warning against its pests in the immediate neighborhood.

Then W. McAuley Gracie—a one-time railroader who has the psychology of the rat down pat—took over. He's still running the show from London.

Rats Just Suckers For Free Food

Gracie disagrees with a long standing idea that a rat is intelligent. He believes it's just a sucker for a free feed.

"The ordinary rat is a very orthodox creature," he adds. "Like the person who lives in a suburb, he likes to live in the same place all his life, eat at the same "restaurant' and follow the same path."

This orthodoxy is his downfall. Trained rat killers find his paths from home to food.

During the war Gracies operates poisoned every bit of London 3,500 miles of sewers at the same time. They estimated they killed 1,000,000 rats.

Gracie says there's no way of telling how many rats Britain has but his best estimate is nearly 50,000,000—with one rats or spoils about 170 pounds of food a year. The loss is estimated as high as £25,000,000 ($77,500,000) a year.

SALVATION ARMY'S CAMPAIGN

The Red Shield Campaign of the Salvation Army in its drive for $1,500,000 across Canada is on in many communities of the Dominion.

The "Army" has been established in Canada for many years and has a record which proves the magnificent work which this religious body has been doing down the years. Year in and year out, the Salvation Army carries on its work of religion and philanthropy, supported by the fine record of the institution and its members in every part of Canada and other parts of the world.

Everywhere are now engaged in meeting the people of Canada who thoroughly know the nature of the work this religious body is accomplishing for God and man. Its members, its bands, its War Cry and its Life Saving organizations are performing day in and day out a labor of love for the people the rescue of human lives and the blessing of other lives through the Army teaching and example of good living.

It is one of the supremely great organizations of history whose genius for service to mankind is unsurpassed. Its great organizing genius has not dwarfed its spiritual mission. It stands supreme across the world as an agency for the redemption of man.

It is no wonder that its appeal for modest gifts in order to carry on its service of rescue is met with glad hearts everywhere for the world knows its devotion and sincerity which have never been in doubt.

The Red Shield Army bears the plain message of redemption, which has saved countless lives to useful service.

The past two thousand years have shown the expansive power of Christianity to suit all races and all climes. Among the great Christian forces at work today on the globe the Salvation Army occupies a unique place. The genius humanity and loving service of its members, their devotion to the cause of helping others in the Name of their Master stand out before the world. What it has done in moulding human lives is one of the great triumphs of faith and Christian love of mankind.

The Salvation Army is a world brotherhood. It is known across the earth and where its message is heard there is felt beating the great heart of humanity throbbing with the spirit of the children of the Father.

It is an agency of hope and bears the message of Christ in its gentle manner, with its hymns and music. Its bands are familiar on the streets of small towns and great cities and the voices of men and women and the sounds of the instruments in their mission on the streets have wrought a work for good which can never be measured.

It is a message of cheer and hope for mankind the Army bears. Without the music of its band instruments and the blended voices of the singers life in countless villages, towns, cities and many of the great metropolitan cities would be so different. The Army and its band are the one enduring characteristic of street life. Times and customs change but the Army music and the words which are sung present a glorious service to Heaven and bring a touch of that heavenly state to the streets heavy with traffic.

It is a message of radiant Christianity which works its way through these devoted people to reach untold thousands. The music of the band instruments and the voices of the singers blend in harmonies as they gather at a street corner. The scene is like no other in the world.

This is a grateful organization, for it is grateful in the name of Him Whom it serves so well.

There should be and there will be a generous response to the cause this great religious organization represents.

ANTIDOTE TO REDS

Count Leo Tolstoy, one of the greatest novelists of any language, was famous for his characterizations of the Russian people. Though of the nobility, he had a deep understanding of the peasants and other classes in his native land, as illustrated in such works as War and Peace, and Anna Karenina.

His daughter, Countess Alexandra L. Tolstoy, now a citizen of the United States, also has this understanding of the human race and she knows the communist system and what it means. To the Economic Club of Detroit, she explains how it keeps the Russians in subjection, and its dangers to the world.

Among the many interesting points in her address, she emphasized the value to this continent of "displaced persons," especially those who had their origin behind the Iron Curtain. They are the best possible antidote to communism in Canada and the United States.—Windsor Star.

THE CHILDREN

It must have been some cynic mean
Who spoke the word
That little children should be seen
But seldom heard.

When I get home at close of day
I want them near
To see them, and the things they say
I'm apt to hear.

The talk of grown-ups may be wise,
But laughter gay
Is in the things, with twinkling eyes,
The children say.

To see them happy every one
Is good to do.
But I have found it splendid fun
To hear them, too.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

From this week on, every south wind whether with a westerly or an easterly bias, wafts literally millions of birds over the border and into our midst. The day following a southerly breeze a stroll in thicket and field will be in the company of pilgrims full of that spirit of exploring which characterizes pilgrims anywhere who have come thousands of miles to their shrine. Here is their shrine.

For a great many of the birds have been back for weeks; the hermit thrush, robin, red-wing and many of the sparrows. But what we might call jewelry is about to come cascading in from the south; the warblers, the indigo bunting, rose breasted grosbeak, the tanagers. With them, they bring the first music of any volume. The morning after the next very southerly wind will be the occasion of the opening symphony concert of the year.

These are the birds that have come the farthest. Among them, the tanagers offer the weirdest problem. Western Tanagers winter from Mexico to Costa Rica. They are supposed to be familiar in the east, winters from Bolivia to Peru—deep into South America. They are characteristic tropical birds, at the tropics and even leaving the tropics for some hundred and more different species of tanagers. We have three tropical birds, the scarlet, the summer and the western. These leave Peru and Bolivia and, after crossing the tropics, head thousands of miles north to rest in Canada! Why does not one of their numerous kin remain behind come? Do any of these travelling members of the large family remain at this time of year in the tropics? Apparently not. The tanagers are wanderers of a respectable distance whenever you see one. For the bright bird you are gazing upon probably left last fall and travelled, on his own, to Peru when he was four months old, bring down into the compass of our life's knowledge and understand perfectly would never save our souls or give us support in time of trouble.

The one thing common to all religions is a belief in the supernatural, and belief in the supernatural always involves mystery. Thousands of volumes have been written trying to explain the mysteries. Of course these works have proved futile. But even if they could have explained the mysteries, that would have done the cause of religion no good. We become religious not when we understand the acts of God, but when we acknowledge faith and allow them, mysterious though they be, to begin influencing our lives.

TRYING TO OVER-SIMPLIFY RELIGION

Many quite intelligent people believe that the way to make religion more appealing is to divest it of its mystery and make it so simple that everyone can readily understand it.

Experience proves the opposite. In the first place, it is impossible to make religion so simple that anyone can understand it fully. A religion perfectly understood would cease to be a religion. The very heart of religion is the supernatural, and the reason why we call certain powers supernatural is because they are above and beyond the working of powers with which we are familiar. The religion that we can live,

Controversy -- Was Shakespeare Really Shakespeare -- Still Continues

London, May 6 — (CP)—The old controversy — was Shakespeare really Shakespeare — goes merrily on its way.

This year as traditional Shakespeare birthday celebrations took place at Stratford - Upon - Avon, Warwickshire, April 22 to mark the 386th anniversary of the birth of the "Swan of Avon", an anti-Avon party was holding dinner here to mark the 400th anniversary of the birth of Edward de Vere, 17th Earl of Oxford.

The Oxfordists explained that although the calendar date of their favorite was April 12, the change from the Julian to the Gregorian calendar made April 22 the "solar anniversary" of his birth.

William Kent, an authority on the Stratford Oxford wrote the Shakespeare plays, can muster only about 100 followers in this country, including novelist Marjorie Bowen. But, he says, the movement is growing in North America where more than 1,000 are convinced.

"Both his (the Earl's) father and his grandfather had companies of players," said Kent, "and it would have been natural for Oxford to write plays for their performance.

"But it would have been very infradig (beneath one's dignity) for a great nobleman to be known as a playwright. We think he may have had some arrangement with the Stratford man."

Other evidence for Oxford was that his second title, Viscount Bolebec, had as heraldic cognizance a lion shaking a spear.

"We think that this is where he got his pseudonym," said Kent.

The spelling of the name in contemporary documents sometimes was given as Shake-Speare although none of William Shakespeare's known signatures contained a hyphen, further strengthening the theory of a non - de - plume.

Supporters of Francis Bacon, Shakespeare's other leading rival, hold their anniversary luncheon annually Jan. 22.

The Manchester Guardian, tongue in cheek, suggested:

"Shakespeare's birthday might then become a sort of three choirs festival, with the supporters of all three candidates hymning their various flights of praise.

"The affair would bring even more visitors to Stratford and it couldn't possibly make any difference in the continued appeal of Shakespeare's play."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

A BOOK LOANED

It is almost proverbial that a book loaned is a book departed forever from one's private domain. I rarely loan books, but I like to give them away to appreciative and mutual spirits, whenever I am able to do so. Books and umbrellas are two of our most persistent wanderers who seem to invite no affection for home ties.

Once in a while, however, the book that you have loaned comes back all covered with glory, in better shape than when loaned. It may even come back accompanied by a little friend in kind, as has happed for me several times.

Dr. Arthur H. Merritt, the eminent dentist in my home town, is also my neighbor, and being a brother collector—he being the greater and bigger collector—we have many artistic and literary talk betimes. To go into his home is to be immersed in the riches of beauty, among his treasures of paintings, buildings, books, and textiles. It is thrilling to exchange mutual discoveries, especially about textiles. To him, one day, I loaned a copy of one of my pet authors.

Not only did that book come back whole, but enlarged! Throughout it were placed beautiful, neatly printed extracts from other books, and an outline of the philosophy of the lover of books and beauty. And to my delight book sense was enriched for my enrichment. A gentle tip to other book friends to appreciative spirits! To such a person we could well wish that the loaned book might come back, though, in a measure, we might miss it.

Recently I gave a book away to a friend, and he sent back three emissaries to replace it! Like having a friend who puts one in contact with many others. But that's the way it works. Give away and you never lose. You gain. I am of the opinion that all great books should become happy wanderers, visitors, and consultors, among us worshipers of their kind and sort.

We never know what a loaned book is doing on its journey away from us. Maybe it is, and then take a long nap in their new visiting friends' library. Many start working at once. Many of them have been the means of inspiring a new community of their kind! To you who may be squeamish about loaning a book, I say this to say: Loan it and keep it alive!

NUTRITIONAL DEFICIENCY AND WEAK HEART

One who has nutritional deficiency may get enough to eat and get the finest kind of food, from your point of view, stupid. Another term for nutritional deficiency is malnutrition. This does not imply that the victim has been deprived of good food. There are at least as many cases of malnutrition or nutritional deficiency among the well-to-do as among the poor. It is time to get this fact clear in mind. Malnutrition is not due to deprivation or starvation except in rare instances.

Even the old timers in the profession now know that certain diseases are due to nutritional deficiency: especially scurvy, due to vitamin C deficiency; beri beri, due to vitamin B deficiency; pellagra, due to niacin (nicotinic acid) deficiency together with deficiencies of other B-complex components; and rickets, due to calcium, Phosphorus and vitamin D deficiency.

Some of the old timers have learned in the past ten years that some minor complaints in everyday life are due to nutritional deficiency—space here will not permit mention of these less striking manifestations of nutritional deficiency or malnutrition.

It is my belief that nutritional deficiency, malnutrition is an important factor, perhaps the chief cause of C-V-D—cardiovascular degeneration.

Cardiovascular degeneration is the gradual wearing out of heart (cardia) and arteries (vascular, small vessel). When the cells of the heart muscle wear out or are destroyed they are replaced by new and functionally active cells when we are properly nourished. If we are not well nourished the damaged or dead cells are not replaced by healthy young cells but by inactive, inert scar tissue —fibrous, fatty or calcareous deposits. So, in brief, arteriosclerosis and cardiac insufficiency, myocardial degeneration, heart weakness develop.

It is my belief that at least 90% of mature C-V-D comes about largely in consequence of prolonged moderate deficiencies —through many years—of three vitamins, thiamine, riboflavin and B. and three minerals, calcium, phosphorus and iodine.

Another name for C-V-D is senility, old age, or premature old age.

All this is merely my belief. You may take it or leave it.

If you like, I send me a stamped self-addressed envelope and ask in writing (do not use a clipping please) for the pamphlet Young Folks and Old Folks which tells you how to correct the deficiencies mentioned. It's just essential food, you must try to realize, not medicine. So it can't do any harm to try it for a few months— by the same token it won't do a bit good to try it for less than six months. It takes that long to grow new cells.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Anxiety Neurosis

Would anxiety neurosis, psychoneurosis or neurasthenia have a direct bearing or tend to aggravate a colitis condition? (W.M.A.)

Answer —The near-medical days sometimes you repeat all as meaningless or vague as "leak nerves" "dyspepsia" or "run down condition." In the booklet The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene and twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope—I give the plain language to the principles of treatment by which you should know. "Colitis" is nine times out of ten, a wiseacre's morbid notion conceived under the influence of the neurotic chemical medical charlatans, colon filling station operators and come-on literature.

On Being A Family

(From the Monthly Letter of the Royal Bank of Canada)

Getting married is really little more than signing a contract to build a marriage. The real building is done over the years that follow, and the resulting structure is called a family. Planning and energy and skill are needed by the 243,000 men and women who were married in Canada last year, and by the quarter million who will be married this year.

Making it as easy as possible for these young people to find the right way to build sturdy family life is the business of all of us, because the success with which they pair off in this generation determines the fate of the nation.

These young people really have taken on a big job. The responsibilities facing them are literally unprecedented. They are called upon to make decisions which seem to demand all the wisdom of the ages.

Of Married Life

Both the form of the family and the nature of married relationships have started parallel to the course of human history, and never were they more exacting than they today. Poets to the contrary notwithstanding, marriage does not overnight change character and personality so as to fit everyone miraculously for founding a family.

There is more to family life than feelings and romance and the economics of family support. Understanding appreciation of each other's good qualities is necessary, and it must be made known. Many a marriage breaks up in sorrow because one of the parties basks in the sunshine of appreciation expressed by workshop or social friends, while at home everything able and good is taken for granted.

What shall we set up as motto of the honest? One man, puzzled to find a decoration for over his living-room fireplace, discarded pictures and wrote up two Greek words meaning The Healing Place of the Soul.

Home is the unit of spiritual, emotional and physical security. The home shapes personalities, educates in living, and fits us to take our place in society. It is here that children grow into men and women who find within the family the fulfillment of their needs and desires, the release from worry and the encouragement they need to face the heavy responsibilities of life.

Religious belief is a vital part of family life. It is worthy of note that not only does the family instil religious influences, but the various forms of religious confession emphasize the family as a vital part of our civilization.

The Christian Church carried over a high evaluation of the family from Judaism. The people of Israel laid stress upon the beauty and unity of home life. The family pattern became the symbol of the Kingdom of God. Our hope for the future of the human race in no small part rests upon carrying into the wide world the concept of the Christian family.

The Good Family

Good families do not just happen, but are the result of unselfishness, good temper, forgiveness and humor. A family needs two parents, qualified to make a home that will meet the minimum demands of normal life; community surroundings that make it possible for parents to do their parental duty; and a vital alliance between the home and the church, the school, the political system, and all cultural opportunities.

No other institution can take the place of the family. It is said to see parental power yielding in some countries to the broadened functions of the state. Spontaneous co-operation of natural human association breaks up and finds precarious replacement by the external and artificial bonds of social management and compulsion. Practically all the major religious and social study groups are agreed that for any true security, national or international, the rights and obligations of the home must be safeguarded.

We have seen the other side of the picture in recent years, when totalitarian states encroached upon the sanctity of the home and imposed pagan ideas upon their people. This is one of the dangers in a too-socialized world: that by interfering in family life the state may weaken the nation in two important ways, by raising a race of dependent people, unable to think or do for themselves, and by breaking up the cohesion of the family unit, which is the basis of national unity.

Some Mistakes

Some families break up of their own accord. «We see mistakes made in marriage and we are inclined to ask: "Is this necessary?"

Divorce, desertion, and separation are merely the external evidence of dissatisfaction and conflict within families. In the last year of record there were 7,683 divorces in Canada. In that same year there were 134,068 marriages and there were 3,042,000 families in Canada. For every broken home of which we hear, there are hundreds which stand as stable structures.

Parents can do a great deal to avert the danger of family disruption. A major mistake, made by husband and wife alike, is taking the mate for granted. When each of two persons living together becomes so absorbed in his own affairs that he has no imagination about those of his mate, that is inevitably a symptom of the breakdown of what could have been two happy lives.

Respect is needed in families, all along the line, respect of husband for wife and of wife for husband, respect of children for parents and of parents for children; and respect of children for their brothers and sisters.

On a mundane level, trouble sometimes starts because of money matters. These are great anxieties in homes which are not economically secure, but it is not always true that they raise difficulties which end in family disunion.

Sometimes these very stresses and strains have made better relationships more meaningful in constructive ways, in the families of even the very poor one may find solidarity, a willingness to stand by and a readiness to live beyond narrow self-absorption on the part of both parents and children. It seems as if the very dearth of material things leads in the family to use its natural talent to make living beautiful.

On Family Ritual

Family ritual means the little formal things done in the family, things which acquire a sense of rightness as a result of their continuing history. Ritual centres chiefly around going to church, observing birthdays and other anniversaries, family meals and cooperative ways of using leisure time.

One must be interested in his family, want to make a go of it, and think of it as a unit of relationship, to look forward to the establishment of family rituals and traditions.

It will not do to make up something like ritual overnight together before going to bed, and call that worthwhile ritual. What is significant is that the family gathers every night, engages in a common experience, relaxes together and sometimes commends. The cocoa is incidental.

The Parents' Contribution

Parents are responsible for giving their children security and protection, but this is not enough. There needs to be harmony in the home, affection and a sense of beauty. Children do not love parents because they are parents, but because they are lovable. Children do not learn religion by precept, but by example. They absorb the standards we live by, rather than those we talk about.

The mother of a family has special responsibilities. Homemaking is a vastly bigger technical task than housekeeping. The ideal mother is not afraid to include in her make-up these virtues: She would be a versatile and helpful manager, looking upon her home duties as part of a full life; she would be a wise and loving conversation, games, excursions and shopping; she would be an appeal court in family disturbances, the expert adviser in problems, and the kindly friend of all the family. She would find time to keep a spirit of play and fellowship in the home. She would be a good listener.

And she need not keep all these virtues exclusively for her children Clarence Day, in his delightful Life With Father, showed how mother used effective technique in dealing with the other senior partner.

As to father's place in the family, there are two ideas. One recalls the strange habit of the Victorians of referring her father by baby marmoset, the mother hands it over to be taken care of by the nurse and thereafter on it is his responsibility. The other extreme is seen in Benjamin's family life. He is kind, dutiful, diligent, well-meaning; but he has no time for and even up any claim to authority that the family would risk break-up and disaster if it were not for mother's wit.

True Place of Fathers

Somewhere in between these extremes is the true place of fathers. They are necessary. If children are to grow up to be well-balanced adults. Out of the power and wisdom father possesses in their eyes, children bolster up their feeling of being small and weak and helpless. It is from fathers that children obtain their ideals about the "rules of the game."

No father is expected to carry the whole weight of the family problems. By coming between his children and all suffering a father makes them infantile. His job is not to be a buffer between the family and trouble, but to help his family command it. He has an important job outside the family, to be a good citizen bearing his share of social responsibility.

Father's should not use the family as an excuse for not doing the things they would like to do, or feel they should do. A quip by Francis Bacon is often quoted by men in need of such an excuse: "He that hath a wife and children hath given hostages to fortune; for they are impediments to great enterprises."

This generalization must be accepted with caution. Countless men who would otherwise have led ordinary lives have been inspired into greatness by their wives and children. And, by the way, Bacon was merely repeating what was said by the melancholy Greek philosopher Lucian in the second century. It takes a handy man to make use of cliches.

If that is going too far in the interests of self-expression, make a survey. Can you set up a hobby corner in the attic, the basement, the den, or some other corner? What can you do with your spare time?—a workbench (a packing case or several small boxes nailed together will do), a game table, a stand for the boy's microscope or for the girl's sewing?

Are you doing the most that is possible with what you have? Home-everything is the fad, but everyone encouraged to become interested in what everyone else does? Can what one does be made to contribute to the hobby of another?

In the Community

Most communities provide, either naturally or by co-operative enterprise, resources to supplement those found or made around the home. No family can create all the apparatus and opportunities for a wholesome balanced and satisfactory program of recreation. The ideal situation is where the community bands together to make recreation available to all citizens at the lowest possible cost.

Some cities in Canada have gone in for the lighted schoolhouse idea with great success. They make available for both children and adults in classes devoted to every sort of hobby, music, shopwork, science, study, drama, physical recreation, literature, public speaking, and a host of other activities.

If the school houses in your community are not opened in the evening, look for the reason. They are usually maintained at great cost to the community, and fullest use should be made of them. Traditional objections such as possibility of damage, increased janitor service, extra supplies and maintenance, and lack of efficient supervision, are being overcome in scores of communities by co-operation between the officials and the citizens.

There are certain organizations which seem to be the logical centres for the growth of a community recreation programs. Home and School Associations, Citizens' Associations, Homemakers' Clubs, and so on. If there are no such organizations in your town, or not function then a voluntary society of wide-awake citizens can fill the gap.

What Can Be Done

The way to go about it is to survey the recreational and cultural facilities your neighborhood offers its people. What is adequate? Are there activities for the teen-agers. Do pre-school groups, the young married couples, and for parents? Is there a playing field with facilities for tennis, badminton, bowling, archery, and such games as softball and hockey? Is there an indoor recreation place, not closed to ordinary amateur groups, that does not expense, giving everyone a fair chance to play? Have you a library?

One of the oldest-settled communities on the St. Lawrence river hasn't a library, but it will have one by the end of this year. Citizens found a building that could be bought for a few dollars, obtained permission to use it rent-free on a corner of a park, and are fixing it up into a presentable place. Boy Scouts and Girl Guides are collecting books in a house-to-house campaign to form the nucleus of a collection. This is something that can be done anywhere, and it is an effort not to be despised.

Many communities keep their fingers in the recreation pie they are acting wisely. It does not do to leave everything to community activity wholly to experts. Recreation together is one way of helping to keep the family together. It is a creative experience not only in regard to music and mind, but of sympathy and heart.

The dangers of parents' abdication is vividly portrayed by George Orwell in his unhappy prediction of what recreation might bring by the year Nineteen Eighty-four. Here is his picture "This was the second week in three weeks that he had missed an evening at the Community Centre: a rash act. In principle a party member had no spare time, and was not even alone except in bed. It was assumed that when he was not working, eating or sleeping he would be taking part in some kind of communal recreation."

Besides taking part in home and community recreation, parents need to show an interest in the commercial activities which cater to their children's appetite for amusement. Children need to be shown how to discriminate, how to avoid mental indigestion through a surfeit of any one kind of fare, and how to arrive at their own standards of selection.

It is interesting to watch the evolution of children's tastes, and it is not wise to become alarmed when they seem to go overboard about the one new program. You can listen with them to the radio and enjoy, go with them to movies they fancy and then invite them to join with us in our listening and seeing. In this matter taste is contagious.

It is the privilege of parents to listen in the problems which crowd children's minds. What they see on the screen and hear on the radio and both see and hear on television confuses them. We need to understand conflicting standards of behavior.

On Being Mature

The task laid upon parents is not easy. From marriage through all the years that follow, the family there are thousands of decisions to be arrived at, things to be done and choices to be made. Every one of them is pregnant with meaning for Canada's next half century. It is no exaggeration to say that what Canada is to be depends upon the mothers and fathers of today and tomorrow.

That responsibility demands maturity of outlook. What does "maturity" mean? A person cannot be mature if he is dependent on others, or if, contrariwise, he is puffed up with pride in his independence. None of us can get along without others, without affection, without being looked after in situations where we cannot look after ourselves. But that must not lure us into leaning on others, neighbors, the community or the state.

Maturity means not playing at being flighty because we are afraid of being looked upon as old fogies. It means not thinking of adulthood as merely a time of glory departed. It means not being afraid to be grown-up. It does mean having a buoyant and courageous impulse to seek ways of achieving a new significance in adulthood.

For sure, there are several things a family must be if it is to keep its pre-eminent place in our civilization. It must be permanent, companionable, and cooperative. It must provide its partners and their children with a major opportunity for self-development. It must be a spiritual centre. It needs to be unified, democratic and adaptable. It must work inclusively with the church, school and community.

Dr. Duvall has stated four basic principles of life which are rooted odd with approval by the United Church of Canada's publication on marriage and the home:

1. The religious principle of the absolute value of every human soul in the sight of God.

2. The moral principle of respect for human personality.

3. The social principle of individual worth.

4. The domestic principle of the unity and solidarity of the family.

Dismiss Rumors Of Rift Between Rita and Ali Khan

Paris, May 6. (AP)—umors of impending divorce proceedings between actress Rita Hayworth and Prince Aly Khan were dismissed as ridiculous today by both friends and legal advisers of the couple.

Aly Khan's lawyer, Charles Gilmont, just laughed when told about the report published in the same newspaper.

"There were such reports a year ago," he said, "just after they were married."

At Cannes, where the couple has, Mrs. George Catroux, an intimate friend of Rita and Aly, denied the reports.

"They are an extremely close couple," said, Mrs. Catroux, who is a municipal councillor for the city of Cannes. Her husband was one of the witnesses at the wedding, a year ago.

Onion—from the late latin Unio, meaning unity or a single large pearl.

Since pearls and onions are both built up in concentric circles, the latin language combined both meanings in one word.

In a kitchen, onions are not as rare as pearls, but their value is inestimable in making soups, stews, sauces, casseroles and even some forms of bread. Few cooks will deny the fact that they were the most indispensable of all flavoring vegetables.

At the present time onions are flooding the vegetable markets, in vases of pink snapdragons.

The accessories were Miss Mimsi Jean Henderson, Kingston, and Sheila Kearns, Kingston, Mrs. Fred Kerr, and Mrs. Hugh Folkins, Picton.

Onion Soup, Cheese Croutons, Serves 4

Melt 2 tablespoons butter or margarine in a soup pot. Add 3 cups of onions sliced very thin and 3 cloves of garlic chopped very fine. Simmer over a slow flame until onions turn a deep yellow color. Stir onions frequently to prevent them from turning black.

Add 1 quart water or chicken broth. If water is used, add 4 bouillon cubes or 4 packets of bouillon powder—chicken type.

Add 6 crushed peppercorns (whole pepper.) Crush peppercorns with a heavy frying pan on one side with grated Parmesan cheese and a dusting of paprika. Sprinkle cheese lightly with salad oil and place under a broiler flame for cheese to melt.

Pour soup into plates or individual tureens. Add toast, cheese side up. The slices will float on top. Serve onion soup mad hot.

Old Latin Cookbook Gems Tickle 20th Century Palates

(By The Associated Press)

Rome — Julius Caesar must have had a cast iron stomach.

Added food, peppery little Italian restaurateur, proved it with an old Latin cookbook and a bright idea. Why not, reasoned Signor Necci, translate the ancient recipes into a modern banquet for his customers?

Signor Necci has a musty old copy of the cookbook of Apicius, a favorite of Caesar. Faithfully reproduced from the original Latin by some unknown monk many hundreds of years ago, Signor Necci says it's the only authentic manual of ancient Roman culinary art. Vergil and Horace sang praises to Apicius' garlic-laden sauces 2,000 years ago.

Signor Necci weeded out about 15 of Apicius' specialties, and with a keen eye to accuracy, practiced making the sauces and dishes in the kitchen of his Rome restaurant.

Tough on Waiters

"It was sure tough on my waiters and friends when I made me taste the stuff," Signor Necci said today. However, he was that Apicius never had bothered to list quantities and portions in his 900 or more recipes. He just mentioned throwing in a bit of this and a dash of that.

Specifications for such ingredients as laurel beads, lobility pike livers and celery seeds didn't stop the intrepid Signor Necci. He even ordered ostrich eggs from Somaliland to make up one Apicius specialty. True to ancient style, he used only honey for sweetening.

Signor Necci has prepared such ancient Roman dishes as roast flamingo, stuffed parrots, and boiled peacock. Baked crane also is out.

Finally, he accumulated his sauces and recklessly advertised the first of the series (he hopes) on Wednesday night "Banquets of Caesar." Cost of the repast is 3,000 lire (about $2.50), not including tax and service.

Opening night gourmets who took the dare should have brought their Latin books. The menu, handwritten on real Apicuian wax tablets, was:

Translated, the specialties were turtle soup, roast deer, roast lamb a la Parpet (a section of ancient Rome) wrapped in oiled parchment, artichokes with head, roast wild boar with sauce of Taranto, and shrimp a la Pompeii.

Patrons got no help, either, when it came to the lura pastry section. This read: Liquamentis, trinalicionis, and lucullius. The translation is merely Apicius' after three of his admirers.

This reporter had trouble only with the stuffed octopus head. It was rubbery like an inner tube and tasted like alley. After he cracked off a piece of his tooth on something hard in the stuffing.

Pepped-Up Appetite

The roast wild boar was served up with an apple in its mouth and circled into the dining room on a huge latter borne by three waiters.

Apicius had something here to pep up even the most jaded of appetites. Right out of Apicius' cookbook this is the way its done:

"Introduce between the rind and the flesh a pointed piece of wood and with it separate the flesh from the rind. You will pour into the space with a funnel the excellent sauce (Apicius of course) to fill the space completely.

"Grind some pepper, beads of laurel and, if you want, add some loblolly pine (needles), grape juice, and many drops of green (olive) oil.

"When the ham will be filled with this sauce, you must bind it with a piece of linen, closing tightly in the part in which you poured in the sauce. Put it into a pot. Boil in salted water with some laurel leaves and Asiatic acid (dill) herbs."

Then comes the roasting. Signor Necci says the ancient Romans cooks slowly turned their meat on iron spits in huge brick fireplaces heated by charcoal fire.

"Of course," says Signor Necci, "Julius Caesar and the other ancients often ate from 6 to 8 different foods at one banquet.

Just for a gag, says the host, "I might one Wednesday serve fried ham and eggs. Did you know that the ancient Romans had three and four hole skillets for frying the eggs? There are lots of ham and eggs. It was a favorite dish."

"Delicious, what!" says Signor Necci. "It's my favorite too."

MONTH FOR SHOOTING DOG

In a booklet published about the pioneers of that part of Western Ontario which used to be called the Queen's Bush," there is a paragraph estimating the costs of a bad school fire in 1856 . . . The statement of fire damage recorded is: "Twenty seats at $3 each, $40; floor, 113 square feet destroyed at 6c a square foot for repairing, $6.78; removing seats, $6; cleaning schoolhouse $2; whitewashing, $2; damage done to stove and pipes $10; total $76.78." . . . No wonder people didn't need fire insurance in those days.

If you are bothered about losing the family's hair combs clean, there's quite an easy way to fix them. Gather up all the big and little combs from pockets and purses. Put them to soak overnight in a strong solution (just enough to cover) of ordinary washing soda and lukewarm water . . . Remove the combs from the solution, gently brushing them in it with an old toothbrush. They will come shining clean, leaving no traces of that men's hair oil accumulation which is the scourge of every homemaker's life.

Under the section gardening, a classified advertisement in a daily newspaper reads: "Fruit trees pruned and sprayed, phone Orchard 4002."

At a tenparty this week, conversation got around to the price of ackee in Jamaica, as tree is native to the island, from the Caribbean. Beautiful old mahogany furniture has always been rare and expensive there, the island, despite the prevalence of mahogany trees.

In the old days, the English colonists used to ship the trees back home to cabinetmakers who carved them into furniture and re-shipped it to the Jamaica families. Even today, you cannot buy new quality furniture in Jamaica. Only chairs and chairs, expensive stuff, is to attend a private auction at one of the old homesteads.

Uncle Frontenac says if our highways permit a speed of no more than 50 miles an hour, why do they engage traffic cops to speed-up cars in the interests of safety? Why isn't legislation put in which makes it compulsory for auto manufacturers to clamp a 50-mile speed governor on the motors? Then there would be no speeders, no fines, fewer traffic officers and fewer accidents.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A widow and her first-marriage rings

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a widow, forty years of age. I am going to marry again the last of June. For my first marriage I had a diamond engagement ring and a diamond wedding band, and I am still wearing these on "the" finger of my left hand. For my second marriage my prospective bridegroom wishes to give me a plain gold wedding ring, and I would like to have this if I can wear with it the diamond wedding band of my first marriage. Also because I am not having an engagement ring for this second marriage, I would like to wear my diamond engagement ring of my first marriage. Would these plans be proper?

S. L. B.

Wondering how your future husband feels about all these ring-plans of yours! Most men feel most strongly against having their wives wear the rings of their first marriage . . . and I certainly don't blame them. To me it makes best sense that when a woman marries for the second time she gives up wearing the rings of her first marriage. If you want to hold on to the sparkle of those diamonds, you'll show best taste if you have them set into a ring that will not appear to be the symbol of your previous marriage, and wear this re-designed ring on your right hand, preferably on your third finger.

When bride's mother and father are separated

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) My daughter is to be married soon. I do not live with my husband. She is not paying for any of the wedding expenses, but he may be at the wedding. Should the wedding invitations read "Mrs. Mary Davis" or "Mrs. John Davis"?

(2) The bride is being given away by her uncle. Would it be proper for my sister or a close friend of mine to sit with me in the church, as I do not wish to sit alone?

(3) Do the men have to be in the receiving-line at the reception?

Bride's mother.

(1) If you are not divorced, your name on the invitations should read "Mrs. John Davis". If you are divorced, you use your maiden surname in the place of your ex-husband's first name: "Mrs. Graham Davis". Under no circumstances use "Mrs. Mary Davis".

(2) Yes, you may ask your sister to sit with you . . . better form in having her rather than a friend. (If the bride wishes, she may be escorted up the aisle by her uncle, and then at the proper time in the ceremony, you may give her in marriage.

(3) Very often the bridegroom is the only man in the receiving-line. The best man and ushers are never in the receiving-line.

Best man not last in recessional

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Would like to see a correct recessional for my wedding: first, bride and groom; then maid of honor and the one bridesmaid walking together; next two ushers, together; last, the best man, alone?

M. H.

No. If the best man is to take part in the recessional, he walks with the maid of honor. So: first, bride and groom; next, maid of honor and best man; the bridesmaid, walking alone; last, the two ushers, walking together.

REACH FOR A RENNIE

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Facelifts become respectable.

Drawn for King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Wrinkles now parade as character lines.

Wrinkles have a new and nicer name. They are called character lines. "Show me no faces at fifty that are unlined," say some. They do not interest me," says the artist. "But show me rather faces that are beautifully older, that express courage that has come with the years."

Sounds pleasant, doesn't it? But not much consolation to the woman who has gradually watched the changes that have come over her portrait—crow's feet, marks of age appearing. She is in a state of rebellion. She thinks it is unfair business. The body stays young, has no wrinkles. Why must old means time put them on her sacred map?

So she flirts with the idea of getting a facelift. In the not-so-long-ago that would have been considered a very adventurous; sometimes it was, as charlatans flourished before the medical profession got after them. Now things are different. If facial defects are dreadful enough to interfere with a normal, happy state of mind, the trained surgeon will do some remodelling.

These rejuvenating treatments are expensive. Surgeons who specialize along these lines are few and far between. If a woman seeks the services of one of them, she should consult her family doctor, have him make recommendation. The plastic surgeon must not only be skilled with his instruments, but he must be an artist, in a way, be able to visualize what his patient's appearance will be after the operation has been accomplished. She should take no chances of falling into inexperienced hands.

When she finds the right man, he may refuse to do the job if the defects are trivial, get really disfiguring. He knows that tiny facial furrows never killed anybody, that a woman can live with them, especially if she has accumulated many birthdays.

No facelift can be guaranteed to be permanent. Much depends upon how well-established the wrinkles are and how depleted the tissues. Some famous actresses of the past had repeated treatments and their youthful appearance astonished their audiences.

Pouches under the eyes can be deflated. A crowsfoe incision is made, a tiny slice of flesh removed and the wound stitched. Double chins are made into one. Necks can be made smooth.

The ordinary facelift is accomplished by making incision at the temples, beyond the hairline, drawing up the flesh and anchoring it. At first there may be a markline appearance, but tissues gradually relax.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is this a girl who likes to be treated rough?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the last two years I have been going with a boy who has been gradually changing in his friendship with me. At first he was always very kind and thoughtful, but as time went by he would break dates with me at the last-minute, or if he did come, he was always at least half an hour late. Because I wanted to see him so much, I would wait for him.

When I tried to talk things over with him he would get angry, using very bad language, and sometimes he would even strike me. He humiliated me by treating me badly in front of my friends, giving the impression that I wasn't good enough for him.

Recently I broke up with him and have gone out with other boys, but these dates do not seem the same as those with him.

In spite of all the things he did to me, he claims he will always love me and I still care for him. I know I'll meet him soon and that he'll ask me to go back with him. Should I go back when he asks me, or if not, would you please tell me how to forget him? I am miserable with him but just as miserable without him. We are both 18.—D.D.

Dear D.D.:

It is contrary to me how you could possibly want to continue a friendship with a boy as crude and brutal as this one. Are you one of those feggies who like a man better when he treats them like dirt? If so, you had better change your tastes immediately, or one of these days you will find yourself even more unhappy than you are now.

I shouldn't think you would need any advice if this boy comes around asking you to take him back. Unless you are anxious for more of the same abusive treatment he has already given you, I should think you would have enough about his business.

As for how to forget him, if that is any real problem to you, which seems a bit surprising under all the circumstances, keep on going out on other dates, and instead of telling yourself they arn't as much fun as those with the other boy, keep reminding yourself of how mean the other boy was to you. If you follow this system, you will soon find you are thankful to be rid of him.

He's selfish and rude—where's th e problem?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and have been going with a fellow 21 for the past two years.

He says he loves me but has never shown it in any way. He never once has given me anything to indicate that he thinks of me. This has been quite embarrassing to me.

My parents are always arguing with me about this young man and have done everything they can to prevent me from continuing to see him. They think he is not the man for me. He shows no respect for my parents whatever, and on several occasions has been very rude to them.

Should I continue to see him, or should I break up with him? He is very attractive.—P.

Dear P.:

I can't see what puzzles you so much. For my part, I am puzzled as to why in the world you would have any interest in a young man who shows you no thoughtful intentions and who is rude to your parents. If he behaves like that now, do you imagine for a moment that he would be any different if you were to marry him? A selfish, inconsiderate, and unmannerly young man would, I assure you, be a husband who would humiliate and hurt his wife constantly. Is that what you want?

Neckwear in The Pink

By ALICE ALDEN

YOUR COLLAR and cuff set doesn't have to be white, not by any manner of means. For what could be sweeter on grey, black, navy or brown, than this tuck-in collar and cuff set of crisply starched pink linen touched with an edging of heavy white cotton lace. The pink and white touch looks new and is very pretty.

Fashion Flashes

FINE DETAIL is the distinguishing mark of some of the season's most effective clothes. A two-part short-skirted dinner dress of navy net covered all over with appliques of navy taffeta pyramids that narrow from the top down, and the hem up to the waist. Top is on soft shirt-waist lines with tiny cuffs, collar and revers of the taffeta.

FOOTSTEPS down fashion lanes fleclues very smart shoes, especially of the suit variety. An attractive, high-throat pump has the front heel and back quarter of black patent, with the rest of the shoe of white beige appliqued with tiny black patent leather dots. Most effective!

ORIGINALITY is the theme of new Spring clothes. Sheer wool crepe in navy makes a charming suit with boxy, flared jacket lined in white silk crepe with a print of tiny purple clusters and single blossoms of violets. The same print, but in silk chiffon for the soft, bow-tied blouse, and for the silk crepe gloves.

NEW NOTIONS add novelty and effective undulations to the latest lingerie. White or pastel batiste makes a strapless camisole with wide elastic inserts and side zipper and a long peplum to insure against slipping out. With it a matching petticoat with back zipper and ribbon-threaded and bowed lace ruffles at hem.

NEW TECHNIQUES help to give long-haired turs such as fox, a new and slimmer effect. A tunic jacket molded to the figure like a suit jacket is of platinum pearl fox spaced with gray silk. Hip pelts are worked like an all-around border, then cross in narrow stips and continued from hip border to waist.

La Junta, Colo., May 6 (AP)—About 1,000 sparrows and finches were electrocuted Friday morning in Courthouse Park. Power lines sagged against the wet tree branches used by the birds as a roost. Witnesses said that one second the birds were chirping merrily, and the next instant all was quiet except for the soft thump-thump of the falling bodies from the trees.

In Manhattan

Theatre-in-the-Round Newest Innovation in Seating Arrangements

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 6 (CP)—Manhattan play-goers don't often see the back of an actor, but they are about to get more rear views.

The occasion is the arrival in New York of the arena theatre—a circular stage in which the audience surounds the performers.

A theatre-in-the-round is due to bow into the ballroom of a midtown hotel (the Edison) shortly. Starting May 29, the room will be converted into an arena capable of seating 500 persons.

First production is billed as "The Show-Off," starring Lee Tracy. Three weeks later another revival, "Julius Caesar," will move in. The theatre will be managed by David Heilwel and Derrick Lynn—Thomas, and the producers hope the venture will become year-round affair.

Hartman Sauce

Paul and Grace Hartman injected a dash of seasoning to the local stage with their new revue, "Streets, Please!" The new occupant of the Coronet Theatre stage is spotty in character and some sketches are near-duds. But the proceedings take on zest when the Hartmans get on them and happily they are present often.

Christopher Fry's "Thor, Thanks Too Frequent" made a fleeting appearance on the Broadway stage but the play—part of a double bill—was withdrawn after five performances. The critics quickly put the skill on the first professional production of the young British playwright on any United States stage.

The three-character, one-act play in verse proved too tough for New Yorkers. The case appeared insufficiently rehearsed, although Vicki Cummings, as a Roman slave girl, gave a witty and disarming performance.

"Freight," the other one-acter in the bill, was a melodrama dealing with Negro-white relation in the southern states. Author Kenneth White made his sole non-negro character a deep-eyed villain and thereby—through overemphasis—failed to put over his point: that Negroes as well as whites are entitled to be treated as human beings.

Toronto-born Lloyd Richards made his Broadway debut in the short-lived "Freight," as Oz, one of a group of Negroes fleeing in a freight car from the scene of a lynching. Another Negro character was portrayed by Dots Johnson, who made his first stage appearance in Canada, in a touring company of "The Hasty Heart."

Foolhlit Footnotes

Play closings are in the news these days as well as openings. Victoria Trust Reports Year Of Progress

Victoria Trust Reports Net Earnings $215,229.85

The Fifty-fourth Annual General Meeting of the shareholders of The Victoria Trust and Savings Company was held in the Council Chambers, Belleville, at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, the 7th day of February, 1950.

The President, Mr. T. H. Stinson, K.C., occupied the chair and Mr. Gerald Phelps acted as Secretary.

After the opening formalities had been completed, the Annual Report of the Directors to the Shareholders and the Financial Statement for the year 1949 was read.

Mr. T. H. Stinson, K.C.-President

Ladies and Gentlemen:

In opening my remarks I should like to refer to the Executive and administrative changes which have taken place since our last annual meeting.

Mr. Gerald Phelps, who was 20 years with the Royal Trust Company in Montreal, has joined our staff and is now Assistant Manager.

Mr. Harvey Forsyth who was with me for twenty-four years in the law firm of McLaughlin, Fulton, Stinson and Anderson, has joined our staff and is Estates Officer.

Mr. Gilbert Malpherson is now Chief Accountant and will conduct an internal running audit of the three branches of the Company.

The most important change in the status of the Company since our last annual meeting has been the opening of a branch office in the City of Belleville. We received numerous requests for this office and after giving the matter some thought and discussion with the Belleville citizens, your directors came to the conclusion that it would be a profitable venture. There is a large territory to be served in this district and in which there was no resident trust company until our company opened its branch there on the first day of November. Belleville serves over one hundred thousand people and is one of Ontario's rapidly growing cities.

Its citizens are well known for thrift, energy and ability to achieve. Your Company has received a very kind reception from the citizens of Belleville who were instrumental in securing for us one of the best office locations in the City. Your Directors were also fortunate in the calibre of men who form the Belleville Advisory Board and who are all rendering excellent service and are of outstanding in the business life of the city.

Our Advisory Board believes that it is quite possible for the Belleville office, with its great population to draw from to eventually out pace its parent and, in due course, the parent shall be glad to experience that keen friendly rivalry.

Mr. Gordon Trill who was with the Canadian Bank of Commerce for a number of years, is the Manager of the Belleville office and Mr. Harry Barry of Toronto who is a Solicitor, and who has had wide business experience is the Estates Manager. We think, on the whole, that we are extraordinarily well serviced in Belleville with our Officers and a fine Advisory Board who are keenly interested in developing that branch.

Our branch at Cannington still continues to grow under the able management of Mr. G. H. Shipman and I am glad to be able to report to you that in 1949 it had succeeded in building up assets to an amount greater than the Directors had set as a maximum for the branch.

It is with a great deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I announce to you today that the financial statement presented to you is one of the best in the history of the Company. Fifty-four years of faithful service to the people of this community is something to be proud of.

It is fair to say that this Company is evidence of a safe depository for the savings of the people; and in helping them to finance the purchase of farms, homes and businesses, has added greatly to the wealth of the community. The Company has enjoyed the faith and confidence of the people of this district to a marked degree which has made it possible to gather together in one place, or depository, some nineteen million dollars. This is a large sum and it speaks very highly of the thrift, energy and ability of our people.

We are entrusted with people's savings so we owe them an obligation of security, service and accommodation. Because of the position, that banks and trust companies occupy in the economy of the nation, we must conduct our affairs with a knowledge of their impact on the economical health of the whole country, co-operate with Government agencies and its agencies, such as the Bank of Canada and supplying credit for the development of the country.

It is the policy of your directors to build up strong reserves for the rainy days, which we are bound to experience in the second fifty years of the existence of the Company. With that in mind, I feel it my duty to assert, that if we have erred at all in our statement it has been on the side of over-stating reserves. I may say that banks have followed the custom of building up secret reserves (which are not shown in their statement), during the years when times are good so as in order to "cushion" less favorable years when the value of assets may shrink, and the test of experience in all countries, even in this to be, the only safe policy to protect the interest of depositors and shareholders. These reserves are the principal means by which our banks and trust companies absorb their unforeseen losses and average their loses over good and bad years. Your Directors have followed and are following this practice.

While the Directors have increased its reserves for the year 1949, it also moderately increased its dividend. The Company is well able to make this increase and the Company has retained its policy of increasing the reserves each and every year.

The Company has paid to its shareholders from the first of January, 1929, up to January 1st, 1950, a total dividend the sum of $1,126,603.10 and has paid interest to its depositors and holders of guaranteed investment receipts during the same period of time $3,580,000.00 making a total of investment income of $6,706,603.10 that our people have had to earn by the sweat of their brow.

There are certain territories where investment trusts and trust companies flourish, as they have a tremendous field for profitable business and developed upon foundations that make for safety, and I believe we are operating in that class of territory. In Boston, the Massachusetts Investors Trust has developed a most profitable business by selling the small investor what the company calls "peace of mind". Boston is a conservative and those who work hard, save and build up an estate, desire to be sure that investments are best and safest kind of institution for their savings and they have come to look upon the trust companies belong to that class. The trust company has ever-failed in Ontario by reason of the basis upon which it is founded and the rigid government inspection to which such companies are subjected. Money is a fine respecter to the individual and to have a safe place to invest the same produces a "peace of mind" all of which is valuable to the health of men and women, especially in these troublesome and uncertain conditions. The Massachusetts Investors Trust is a shining example of how like kind of institution has gained the confidence of a great and growing class of small investors. It published its first statement of portfolio at 1924 which covered forty-five securities valued at $50,000 and in the year 1949, which is only twenty-five years later, it is managing and caring for two hundred and fifty million dollars of savings of United States citizens. This is an indication of what can happen when confidence is created in a safe depository which give "peace of mind" to those using the same.

The Victoria Trust and Savings Company has gathered a large sum of money for the district in which it operates and this could only be accomplished by the continued confidence and good-will of its customers and the people of the community and this creates in the minds of your Directors and staff a sincere responsibility to administer these funds wisely and well and to the best advantage of all concerned. This will help bring about a "peace of mind" for those entrusting their savings to the Company.

Mr. Spinney, who was president of the Bank of Montreal, speaking at the annual meeting in 1945, stated "I see no reason to believe that there are not ever evolved economic system so ingeniously contrived that everyone will have a high living standard and social security waiting for him as a matter of right whether he works or not. "It would be very nice" he said, "if we could all live on government cheques but life on this planet being as it is, some one has to do the work, plant and build, and exercise qualities of initiative, foresight and daring; and unless we do that the productive effort can provide a real and enduring basis for material well-being and security. Governments can distribute no benefits that individuals, through their industry, have not earned." Almost everyone in this room will agree with that statement.

We should not be exalted or depressed by the immediate conditions but we must realize that our national income has in the past twenty-five years been on a upport trade with a lag of from 3 to six months. The plain truth is that the future of our prosperity depends upon our handling a complicated foreign trade policy successfully.

The Canadian business outlook at the beginning of 1950 is in many respects one of uncertainty and clouded by adverse trade winds from Overseas. It is possible, in my opinion to have prosperous business with only minor commodity price recessions if business men, farmers, labour and bankers remain realistic and maintain a sane business outlook. Business is largely based on an optimistic viewpoint. When confidence is lost nobody can predict the reactions of the business world and we are living in far as unemployment is concerned. Some say if we can banish unemployment we can banish it for peace. The trouble with that theory is that what we produce for war does not have to be sold; it does not have to find a market; it goes at once into the ghastly work of destruction. The real problem in peace has to find a market; it must be produced at a cost that there can be a profit to the government buys what it cannot sell just for the purpose of making work and to keep the wheels going. Inflation is near at hand. Inflation makes misery unanimous; it is unjust.

Important as parliaments, governments and central banks are in the economic life of today, we in the business of finance must firmly enough on the ground, and our eyes level enough to realize that the more we encourage progress, and prosperity must and should always be producers, manufacturers, carriers, traders, promoters, investors and savers and what they do and believe, accept as right until proven wrong, and that governments can not work long against such a current, unless it convinces the majority it is right.

If people find the incentives great enough, to keep them working and competing, they can carry for years, a growing number of projects, on their bounty; other people will find that the government can settle all problems by fixing prices and wages, and who do not work voluntarily, but it can only be done by taxing heavily those who keep on working and producing, have a very wrong conception of the economic of the only ones who can provide subsidies for groups, favored politicians or countries and who make work as markets begin to fall away in favor of suppliers who are producing cheaper.

However long delayed, an unpleasant end always comes to that sort of policy. The producers and the work begin to lessen their effort at that point where they find the tax collectors take off all the cream; Tax-payers will stand for heavy taxation in wartime because everybody knows it is necessary for continued existence to supply the State with funds for adequate defence. The same arguments carry weight in peacetime when citizens observe that a strong and potential enemy is expanding its borders spending a regime of fear wherever it goes and spending immense sums on modern arms. Willingness to be taxed for that purpose is distinctly lessened however, whenever the tax payers sees the state, finances idleness, unwanted surpluses or unneeded capital expenditures.

The old purchasing power argument is being driven to absurd extremes to convince him, not only that all these things are in the earner's interest but to lead him to accept, without too much protest, wage increases just to maintain buying power and payment of prices much beyond what markets, if demand and supply functioned, could justify.

Fertile Soil

This Company had to provide for Government taxes in the year 1949 the sum of $1,781,785.84 which is about one-third more than what was paid to its shareholders who provided the capital for the business and all the personnel for the operation of the Company.

We have all the resources which we require and we do not need to throttle enterprise. The economics of development as far as Canada is concerned, can be boiled down into the simple statement that if we wish to be free, we must be willing to pay for it, we must be willing to pay for it perhaps as some visionaries promise us, but rich enough to justify a sacrificial standard of living.

All that we need is ambition, energy, honesty and thrift.

To spread the spirit of honest appreciation, and to do that daily is the main task of citizenship in this new age. Given this spirit we can laugh at the nonsense the wiles of propagandists who seek, to turn us, into slaves for their ideologies. Canada is a triumphant resistance against such propaganda will be the signal to resume the forward march toward an era of universal peace, freedom, prosperity and development. An era in which the soul of man, finally released from fear and tyranny can attain in this life, a growing measure of the spiritual fulfillment which God contemplated in the Great Design for man.

It should be, the thought, the dream and the ambition of every good citizen to help develop Canada and see her go forward into her great destiny of development and prosperity, thus becoming in the Twenty-first Century, the model for the rest of the world, of a united, enlightened, efficient and happy democracy.

I believe that more attention should be given to the responsibilities of our people in the responsibilities as well as the advantages of democratic citizenship. Too much stress is being placed these days on human rights and not enough on human obligations. Man should be educated to know that he needs to contribute his share to the welfare of the nation. We are getting to the point where too many think too much of security and not enough about getting out and accepting responsibilities for themselves. People of character are the greatest asset that a nation can possess.

I desire to say that the Directors are proud of the quality of its personnel. The spirit of cooperation is seen in the balance sheet and it is with deep appreciation, as well as sincere appreciment, that I say on behalf of the Executive, "Thanks to the staff for the year's splendid work".

I have much pleasure in moving the adoption of the financial report presented to you today.

MR. G. A. WEEKS seconded the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT, SHARE-HOLDERS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,-

This is the fourth annual report that I have had the privilege of discussing with the shareholders of the Company and each successive report has shown expansion over the previous year. I recall that one year ago I suggested to you that the 1948 report was the most satisfactory one ever presented to the Shareholders and I mentioned at that time some of the conditions prevailing during 1948 which made such a record year possible. I believed at that time as did many others that while there would be no depression in 1949 we could not expect the unprecedented good times of the post war years to continue indefinitely and it was unlikely new records would be established in 1949. But there was little or no levelling off of business during the past year and continued prosperity enjoyed by all our citizens as well as the nation itself has made it possible for our company again establish another record in growth and profits and to maintain interest and principal collections at high levels.

Our President has informed you of the decision of the directors to open an office in the City of Belleville, their reasons for doing so and the friendly reception we have received. As manager of Belleville I am privileged to come into frequent contact with the Belleville Officers. I have attended two meetings of our Belleville Advisory Committee and visited the office on several occasions. I believe that there is of mine is needed to add to what the President has said about the fine, capable, intelligent Advisory Committee and Officers at Belleville but I cannot pass by this opportunity of also telling you how impressed I have been with their committee meetings I formed the opinion that these men were successful in business world and handled the Company's interests with even more care and attention than they would exercise in the conduct of their own personal affairs. As long as we have the experience and direction of such men on our Advisory Committee it can only be a question of time until our Belleville office will be as profitable as any of the other offices.

Belleville is a beautiful and progressive city in the heart of a prosperous community. I further believe from many conversations I have had with the citizens of the city that they are pleased to have the Company establish an office there and they have responded to whole-heartedly support a trust company in their community if the company does its part in order to establish the many and beneficial services which only a trust company can render. We were assured of the good will and support of the citizens of Belleville and vicinity when we opened our doors and regrets upon our giving to them the highest quality of service and courtesy. Mr. Trill, the Manager there, and Mr. Barry, our Estates Officer, together with the rest of our Belleville staff will do their utmost to give still the highest possible service.

It is not my place or my intention to discuss the world conditions but none of us can brush aside the indubitable fact that the world situation rather becomes as large as The Victoria Trust and Saving Company would have to provide for its future and planning and establishing the Company's policy. We meet again the old problem of the battle of the shooting war under the shadow of the "cold war" and the uncertainties of the battle of ideologies between Capitalism and Communism forces all business into ultra-conservative channels and makes necessary the most intimate expansion which means that profits must be secondary to security. The fundamental principle with which to combat the spread of Communism is to make it possible for every man to enjoy financial security and it is here that The Victoria Trust and Savings Company is standing in the forefront of the financial institutions in providing a sound and systematic savings plan where our people can accumulate their savings with a fair interest return and provide for their present and future financial needs.

With your permission I would now like to review the Balance Sheet, item by item, giving the necessary take you behind the scenes and let you see how the Company operated at.

OFFICE PREMISES

On the assets side of the Capital Account is an item of $66,167.90, being the amount at which the Office Premises at Lindsay, Belleville and Cannington are carried as an asset. Last year you will recall the Company made major improvements to their Head Office in Lindsay and some of this work was not completed until 1949. In addition to further expense on the Lindsay office we also had the initial expense of renovating and furnishing our new office in Belleville. The Belleville office is held under a very favorable lease and with the appointments have not been extravagantly made the general effect of the office is to be keeping with good business taste. The vault is similar in design to our vault at head office and this vault together with the safety deposit boxes and office furnishings belong to the Company and account for a fairly large part of the increase in office premises account. I hope that any of our people who are passing through Belleville will make it their business to take a few minutes off and go through the company's office and I am sure they will be well satisfied with the general appearance of this office. The increased amount carried to this account over last year also represents some new equipment in both offices.

MORTGAGES AND AGREEMENTS FOR SALE

You will observe that in Capital Account the amount of Mortgages and Agreements for sale has been reduced slightly over $50,000 from 1948. As the majority of our Western mortgages are placed in Canada Accounts we are not making new loans in this field, it is quite natural that as payments are received there is a reduction by reason of the principal payments and mortgages being paid off.

In the Guaranteed Account, however, there has been an increase of some $30,000, not a very large increase but a decrease is in the right direction. Keeping in mind the large turn-over in our mortgage investments which means that many inspections have been made and mortgage applications investigated and that the Company to secure satisfactory loans to replace those which are paid off we feel that an increase in investment by over $300,000. There is no investment so pleasing and satisfactory to the Directors of mortgage investments as first mortgage. There never was and probably never will be a better investment than a first mortgage on real property where the investor is satisfied to invest his money at a fair rate of interest and mortgage companies are not so concerned as a private investor with the appreciation in value of real, a mortgage is the ideal investment for our company.

Again I am well dealing with mortgage investments I think you may be interested in a story published by the University of Pennsylvania which was as follows,

"On a sunny day in the year 430 B.C. a group comprising eight men who dwelt in the sacred city of Nipur in Babylon, borrowed from the temple treasury, 1 from a fellow townsman and pledged their ancestral lands as security for their loans. A tablet recording of record was unearthed in 1893 when the 730 clay tablets were discovered among the ruins of Nipur by an archeological expedition sponsored by University of Pennsylvania under the leadership of John P. Peters Translated the cuneiform mortgage read:

Two hundred bushels of dates were due Bel Nadin Shun, son of Marashu by Bel Bullitsu and Shu Nadin Ahi, sons of Nadin Ahi and their tenants. In the month of Tashri (month of the harvest) of the thirty-fourth year of King Artaxerxes they shall pay the date, thirty bushels, according to the measure of Bel Nadin Shun, in the Town of Bit Rahe. Their fields, cultivated and uncultivated their tief-estate, is held as a pledge for the dates. Should they thirty bushels, by Bel Nadin Shun Another creditor shall not have any claim.

You will observe that all the fundamental requirements of the investment return of the ruled transaction which took place over 400 years before the birth of Christ. The two brothers borrowed and things of value and pledged as security for the repayment their farm lands. The time of repayment was fixed as the month of the harvest and the document further stated that no other creditor should have a priority over the first claim of the lender. The only matter of importance missing from a modern mortgage was the lack of any interest payable for the use of the dates. Perhaps in this particular case there was some relationship between the parties or on the other hand it could be that the lender and borrower purposely avoided any mention of interest to avoid income tax but there is no doubt that income tax had an origin earlier than the mortgage account.

I take some pride in again reporting to you that during the year 1949 we earned on our mortgages a little over 5 percent and collected in cash on account of interest $414,872, or better than 5% on our total mortgage investment. This is a record which can never be bettered for it represents 100 percent of interest collected and much credit is due to the Board of Directors who select the loans and to Mr. Stuart Flavelle, who takes a major share of the responsibility in inspecting and recommending them, but notwithstanding how carefully the mortgage loans may be selected and how ample the security may be, it would not be possible to collect a full year's interest without an efficient mortgage department and the loyal and proper credit to those members of our staff who are responsible for the collection of the mortgage interest. It is a responsible work and requires constant attention to the mortgage accounts.

The total investment in mortgages at the end of the year amounted to $7,453,000 which represents about 42 percent of the Company's total Investment and during the year we collected on principal payments $1,457,000 approximately 20 percent of this total investment. This return of principal is higher than we might at large, about 5 years, but it should be so unfortunate as to run into losses in our business, this silent partner quickly reduces from the partnership and assumes none of the loss, but stands hopefully by until you recover when it comes back and in march shoulder to shoulder with you and give you every assistance in liberating the asset.

Having made these comments on taxes, I fully realize that we are paying for our share of war and are also faced with increases in the cost of national defence and social welfare. These expenditures have to be met and we have to consider our tax problem as something in the nature of additional insurance as well as the payment of our fair share of running the country.

MORTGAGE LIABILITY

This little item keeps appearing in different amounts each year and while it is slightly over seventy this a year ago and on several occasions I would just remind you that it is the mainly matured balances that may be owing on mortgages that could not be paid off before maturity and there we are in a position advanced a new mortgage but held back sufficient to pay off the small mortgage when it becomes due.

DIVIDEND

The dividend you will note, I think, with pleasure is somewhat larger than the corresponding amount a year ago and represents a return of 7 percent per annum to the shareholders. Our earnings for the year after taxes was $8.65 a share and this year is $10.51 a share. This increase in earnings is a most satisfactory and justifies the increased dividend.

In the Guaranteed Account Investment Receipts are now $10,122,000 and Trust Deposits $4,145,000. This is the first year in which that our Guaranteed Investment Receipts have exceeded $10,000,000 and Trust Deposit $4,000,000 and is the attainment of a goal we have long aimed at.

The total increase in these combined accounts is $1,180,000 and from these accounts the greater part of the monies for investment is made available. As the company pays an average of 3 percen on over two-thirds of this money you can understand that the margin of profit is a small one. It is only by maintaining a high volume of business and keeping expenses at a minimum that a fair return can be earned for the shareholders.

The last account on our Balance Sheet is the Estates, Trusts and Agency Account which stands at $2,898,000 and is only $168,000 greater than a year ago but comparison of growth so far as Es-

Fifty—Fourth Annual Statement Is Presented

tates Account is concerned cannot be appreciated if full particulars are lacking. Throughout the year 1949 there has been large distributions of estates. Our Estates Manager Mr. Harvey Forsyth, has completed a full year with the Company in the position of Estates Manager and his past training in this field under the direction of the President has ably fitted him for this important department of our business. During the year he has made final distributions and closed out a large number of estates and we have received numerous letters from beneficiaries attesting to the capable and businesslike manner in which the estates were administered, the increase in 1949 in this department amounted to $724,000, and while I have not the figures for 1950, I am sure from memory that this is the largest addition of new business that has ever taken place in the Estates Department, also during the year $561,000 has been distributed among beneficiaries, so that while the net increase was only $165,000, 1949 was really a record in the Estates Department as well as the general company business.

For several years past I have intended to discuss our Estates Department at some length as I consider that the administration of estates is one of the outstanding services that the company renders to the public but each year it seems that time does not permit me to do so and this year is no exception. We have a number of very distinguished visitors and I have no doubt our President will be called on some of them to make a few remarks and I will conclude by referring you to the Profit and Loss Statement. Profits of $215,000 are highest on record and as I mentioned before represent an earning of $15.81 a share. In addition to the annual earnings, the Directors have considered it good policy for some years to set aside a portion of the annual earnings as an extra reserve and the same policy was continued in 1949. As the Annual Statement indicates, our Company is in a strong position, and offers the highest type of investment to the public in its Guaranteed Investment Receipts.

In 1949 the Company was fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Gerald Phelps as Assistant General Manager. Mr. Phelps is young in years but old in experience and wisdom in the trust company field having had upwards of twenty years in different positions with one of the largest trust companies in the Dominion of Canada. His knowledge and experience of trust company affairs is of great value to our Company. His friendly and courteous manner in dealing with the problems of our customers has made him many friends since coming to Lindsay and I trust that our customers will make use of his talents and ability in discussing their financial problems with him.

Now, Ladies and Gentlemen, I have presented to you from the Balance Sheet some very important figures, each figure speaks for itself and tells a story of achievement and of a job well done but these are inanimate figures, pleasing to the eye, but lacking life and character. There are also other figures, human figures, in the Balance Sheet. It is true they are invisible but still they are there, interwoven into the very fabric of the Company's history. They are the blood stream through which courses the Company's life and character. These figures are too often lumped together and referred to as the staff but they are individuals, each possessing the individual qualities necessary to make the Company great. They are your servants, paid by you, but you have received from them much more than a full day's work for a full day's pay. You have received their loyalty and devotion to duty. As a Company grows larger and the staff increases, the lamp of loyalty may tend to grow dim unless it is replenished by clear and pure fuel. Those who have joined the Company in the immediate past have strengthened it and added to its lustre. Pride in the Company begins at the very top. Perhaps I have no right to refer to our President as one of the staff but he would be the first to agree that he is also your servant and in a greater field a servant of the public. His devotion to the Company and his outstanding and unselfish service in public life is an example for all of us and his help and assistance has developed a strong spirit of co-operation and pride in our institution. Our Directors are leaders in the business life of our Province. They work for the Company as well as shape and direct its policy. With this strong combination of executive and staff we can look forward to the year ahead with courage, confidence and peace of mind.

MR. H. J. McLAUGHLIN, K.C.
First Vice-President

MR. PRESIDENT,
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

I am sure that we are all agreed that the Annual Statement of the Company is a very satisfactory one. It shows continual steady growth through the adding of another 1 1-4 millions to its total assets under administration. We are not far from a 20 million total. There are some here who will be very disappointed if that goal is not reached and well passed by the turn of the second half of the 20th Century on the 31st December next. The increases in all Departments of the Company's business as shown in that statement are encouraging.

The Company has expanded. It has added to its Branches by opening one in Belleville where very warm welcome has been given to it and where six leading and highly respected citizens are acting as its Advisory Board. It is a great pleasure to see two of these gentlemen here and to have with them, Mr. Ross, one can drive around the Belleville area, North, South, East and West, without being impressed with the possibilities for Trust Company Business, and the need of that Community for such a business, I feel was very well met when we decided that the opportunity would not have remained for long.

All the Directors are very happy in the appointments of Mr. Trill and Mr. Barry as Manager and Estates Officer respectively of the Belleville Branch, these appointments are to that of the Advisory Committee would seem to insure that Belleville will one day rival Lindsay in the volume of business transacted. A very excellent job has been done on the Branch Office which has the space and equipment to do a substantial trust business. We hope that our shareholders when driving east will inspect this expansion project of the Company.

The Directors are equally happy with the expansion of the personnel in Lindsay which with the appointment of Mr. Gerald Phelps as Assistant Manager and Mr. Harvey Forsyth as Estates Manager should be adequate for the business of the Company for a time. Both these gentlemen have had a wealth of experience in the work they are doing. All the Staff of the Company you will find co-operative in any problems you desire to take up with them. Looking at conditions generally, there are many things to concern us.

The prosperity of the country has been almost continuous since preparedness for War became essential in 1938. The length of this period in itself is sufficient to indicate that historically there should be a set back. For about three years security markets indicated a feeling of uncertainty as to the future, an uncertainty that to some extent has evaporated with the failure in realization of the anticipated recession. The outbreak of hostilities on the part of the communists in the Far East

Toronto, May 6 — (CP) — The American Newspaper Guild (C.I.O.) Friday wired Labor Min- ister Mitchell protesting the dis- charge of a number of employees of The Canadian Press and Press News, CP's radio subsidiary, as "illegal interference with forma- tion and administration of a trade union."

The Guild said the com- pany had justified the eliminaste as an economy move necessitated by budget requirements.

The telegram, sent by The Canadian Press unit of the Guild, said the reason given "is ob- viously a flimsy excuse in view of the company's position and history."

InUS Corporations Big Moneymaker Motor Companies

New York 6 (AP)— Profits of United States Corporations in the first quarter of this year show a strong upward trend from a year ago.

A compilation made today by The Associated Press of 508 cor- porations in all fields of business and industry shows that combined profits were six percent ahead of the first quarter of 1949.

That earnings power came de- spite cut backs in post-war ex- pansion programs, tax increases, reductions, and strikes.

It was due in great part to the wide demand for automobiles and television sets by the public and the industry's ability to translate raw materials that go into a long list of products.

In this year's first quarter pro- fits of the 508 companies amount- ed to $1,402,143 as compared with $1,326,901,330 a year ago.

Significant advances were made by companies in the fields of motor, aircraft, chemicals, drugs and medicines, oil, electrical, metals and paper products, utilities, ra- dio and television and building.

Among the companies showing were brewing and distilling, coal, machinery and tools, non-ferrous metals, oil and petroleum, rail- road equipment, iron and steel, and railroads.

The big money earner this year was automobiles. Profits of 11 companies in that group amount- ed to $233,771,967, a 34-percent gain over the first quarter of 1949.

General Motors, the biggest U.S. profit-maker, reported first quarter earnings of $213,387,765, a gain of about 55 percent over the year ago.

Chrysler on the other hand, re- ported a deficit of $1,782,790 as compared with a profit of $22,- 707,951 in 1949's first quarter. The Chrysler showing resulted direct- ly from the 99 day strike when wss settled this week.

"Eighteen radio and television manufacturers accounted for $71,- 970,070 in profits up 44 percent.

Thirty drug companies showed a jump in profits of 24 percent to $123,496,997, a reflection of gen- eral industrial demand.

$22,750,000 Bill For Travelling Causes Clash

Ottawa, May 5 (CP) The government's $22,750,000 bill for travelling and transportation ex- penses this fiscal year sparked a clash in the committee of public accounts committee today.

Ross Thatcher (CCF-Moose Jaw) charged that some travel- ling civil servants are "running wild" at public expense.

The bill for the 1938-39 fiscal year was $4,742,000.

Maurice Sinclair, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Ab- bott, retorted that he knew of no civil servant in recent years who hadn't actually lost money on travelling and suggested that the CCF member name names.

Mr. Thatcher was assailed by George Drew, Progressive Con- servative leader, who called Mr. Sinclair's remark "most unfortu- nate" and advised him to "stop this nonsense of impugning sinister mo- tives in every question."

Out of it all emerged an agree- ment that the auditor-general of the treasury to give evidence on Mr. Thatcher's suggestion that some standard be laid down to govern travelling allowances. It was his contention that even a thir- ty-day fraction of civil servants are living in "luxury" in hotel suites and that he had first-hand proof. He had reason to believe—some pro- tections should be afforded the taxpayer.

Robert Bryce, assistant Deputy Minister of Finance, said that thousands of people are travelling weekly on government expense accounts and that he found it even a shade more easy to "stop this nonsense of impugning sinister mo- tives in every question."

Robert Bryce, assistant Deputy Minister of Finance, said that thousands of people are travelling weekly on government expense accounts and that he found it even a shade more easy to obtain a room as much as $40 to $50 a day in Montreal than in Ottawa where dates varied widely and were not to civil servants but to such persons as trade commissioners and lawyers. If they were flat rates they were taxable.

Urge Old-Age Pension Without Means Test

Ottawa, May 6. (CP)—Intro- duction of a country-wide system of Old-Age Pensions without the means test was urged today by two of Canada's provinces in concres- sions made to the joint parlia- mentary committee on old-age security.

Manitoba and Manitoba, asked to give their views, recommend- ed that a federal grant be provided for a contributory system of pensions to Canada's aged.

Other provinces, such as Sas- katchewan and Newfoundland, were expected to subsequently be given to a wider system of pen- sions, but made no specific recommendations on the question of the means test.

Their witnesses, with the excep- tion of Quebec, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, made replies to the requests of the committee for their views on pensions.

Welfare Minister Goodfellow of Ontario suggested a non-contribu- pension to persons 70 years of age and over, and that in addi- tion consideration be given to establishing a contributory Old- Age security program with a means test.

Mr. Goodfellow added that the province recognized the drastic change in the current pensions system would require considerable time to implement.

He urged, too, that, a lesser period of residence be considered, because the long 20-year resi- dence clause in the legislation tended to be "discriminatory".

The $10-a-month pension, he added, was inadequate to meet the needs of Ontario's aged. He also advised that regulations restrict- ing the amount of money a pen- sioner may earn be relaxed.

Welfare Minister Schultz of Manitoba believed that the fed- eral government should assume full responsibility for the plan and to provide for social assist- ance for other age groups.

Govt. Publicity Releases to Press Cause Heated Argument in House

Ottawa, May 6—(CP)—A heat- ed discussion developed in the Commons when Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) asked the government to say whether statements attributed in a press report to a government spokes- man represented government policy.

James Sinclair, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister of Abbott, and Works Minister Four- nier, government leader in the House, both hinted that when the government had policy announce- ments to make they were made through cabinet ministers and not through unnamed spokesmen.

The discussion developed after Mr. Fleming referred to a Can- adian Press dispatch of Jan. 11. It stated in part:

"The revenue department has stepped up its campaign to force large surpluses of unused and un- distributed income accumulations in corporation treasuries, a gov- ernment spokesman said today.

"Corporations have been asked to use the surpluses for expan- sion and development or pay them to shareholders or face addi- tional tax action by the govern- ment."

Causes Uneasiness

Mr. Fleming continued:

"Statements of this kind and action of the kind referred to in the name of threats, have created a feeling of disquiet throughout the country."

He asked if the statements in the story represented government policy.

Mr. Sinclair said when the gov- ernment wants a spokesman the spokesman is identified by name. Government announcements of policy on taxation would come from the minister of finance.

Mr. Fleming replied:

"I do not propose to let that remark pass unchallenged, be- cause every member in this House knows perfectly well that when the government wants to make some publicity, to make a state- ment without committing itself too far to it, or fly a trial balloon, publicity is given in the various de- partments head one of these statements to the press, and the remarks are attributed to a gov- ernment spokesman. . .

"What I want parliamentary assistant undertakes to say that the statement reported in The Canadian Press, and ascribed to a government spokesman, is to be repudiated in the government re- lease, then he is just flying in the face of the facts. As every hon- orable member knows perfectly well, The Canadian Press would not take that statement unless it came from an accredited govern- ment spokesman."

Mr. Fournier said that when the government decides on a policy there are enough ministers to make the announcement and "that is the way we proceed."

Reiterates Statement

Mr. Sinclair said Mr. Fleming had made the inference that The Canadian Press was the publicity agent of the government. He re- iterated that government policy was announced by ministers.

He added:

"But the honorable member is naive when he makes the sug- gestion that a statement should get up and immediately deny any kite that flies in the face of the opposition—because they want to lead these hard-working gentlemen of the press up some blind alley and fly a kite because they want to challenge the government to put out government policy in advance. It would be an easy way to find out future government policy to have the press fly a kite and then get up and demand that the government either deny or accept this press release."

The argument ended after Mr. Sinclair said "no" to Mr. Flem- ing's repeated question as to whether or not the government has stepped up its campaign to free large surpluses and undistributed income held by accumulated in corporation treasuries.

Pains Partly Due to the Emotions Cured by Hypnotism Studies Reveal

Detroit, May 6—(AP)—What hypnotism can do to ease pain was revealed to the American Psychiatric Association yester- day.

The studies were made at Johns Hopkins University Medi- cal School. They were reported by Dr. Harold Rosen of Balti- more.

Hypnotism helps because pains are often partly due to emotions.

One case was a truck driver who hurt his back in an automo- bile accident. He could not walk and could not sleep.

When hypnotized and told he could walk, he did so without difficulty.

The trance studies showed he was feeling himself without real- izing it. He hated his job and his deep-seated emotion kept him from working by causing pain in his back.

Woman Wanders Eleven Hours In Dense Bush

Cartier, Ont., May 6—Mrs. W. H. Wymonds, 78, of Winnipeg, wandered all night in dense bush near here after leaving a train during a brief stop at the Can- adian Pacific Railway station here. She had been on her way from Winnipeg to visit a daught- er, Mrs. A. Balmforth of 381 Louise St., Ottawa.

Searchers found her half a mile from the station. She was taken to hospital in Sudbury, 60 miles southeast of here, in an Ontario provincial police cruiser and she was suffering from a bruised left eye, a cut on the bridge of the nose, shock and exposure.

She was in the bush 11 hours.

The train was delayed five min- utes while a preliminary search was made in the area of the sta- tion. When this search failed, an police-army-air force-rail and 18-man party of provincial townsfolk was organized to look for the woman.

At daybreak, searchers found a shopping bag and a handkerchief which led them to the belief that they were on the trail of the elderly widow. They followed her tracks through dense bush and discovered her sitting under a tree.

She told searchers, "I'm fine!" But added that she felt cold. She gave no explanation of why she left the train.

Gentle Blasting Used to Break Subway Rock

Toronto, May 6 — (CP)—To- ronto's subway builders soon will dynamite a section of Yonge St. The excavators have run into a barrier of shale rock in the section stretch from downtown block between Wellington and Front Streets. The only way to get through it is to blast it.

"We'll be using plenty of dyna- mite," R. A. Dunbar, chief en- gineer of the Toronto Transpor- tation Commission, said today. "But you may be sure that the builders employ the gentlest of gentlemanly dynamiters. They will use little sticks of dynamite and explode them only in spots where cave-in hammers can't shatter the shale."

Dr. Gaston Jean, medical offi- cer at this Indian reservation, said it would take "about 10 days" before Sioui could get back to his home and family and a normal physical condition.

Dr. Jean, who was called every two days to the asphalt shingled house combining the Indian's home, grocery store, and barber shop, said Sioui broke his strike by drinking a cup of tea.

He described Sioui as satisfied with his decision to give up his fast and said Sioui planned to employ other means to awaken public opinion to the situation of the Indians under white rule. What the measures would be was not revealed.

Early last week, a federal gov- ernment official told Sioui in a statement that his strike would neither bring a visit from Mr. St. Laurent nor any acknowledge- ment of his claims.

Grotesque Movie Cartoons, Horror Films Affect Children Survey Shows

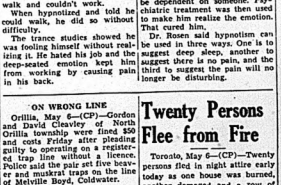
London, May 6 — (Reuters)— Donald Duck can horrify child- ren, a British government sub- committe reported Friday.

After an inquiry of more than two years the committee issued a 60,000-word report on the influ- ence of movies on children.

Declaring that many horror films produced after-effects of fear, nervousness and insomnia the report said: "We saw a Donald Duck film which we considered should have had a horror certi- ficate."

Some gangsters films, it was decided, could be less frighten- ing than some grotesque movie cartoons.

The committee condemned the movie industry for not giving false values of life and signi- fied out the sort of continual preaching from Hollywood that the only thing that matters is to be smarter than the fellow next.



"The regular portrayal of false values is more pervasive and dangerous than the depiction of crime or impropriety.

Many films contain sequences that are brutal, anti-social, or il- centious, commonly centred on the glorification and gratification of crime, violence, and sexual licence, the latter none the less objectionable because it is often coated with a thin layer of con- ventional morality."

The horror technique in serials shown at children's matinees was the smarter than the fellow next. report said: "we have seen child- ren, in tears or hiding their heads in fear, compelled to sit through a special control committe to classi- fy films for children and the di- vision of all films into a new ar- rangement of categories involv- ing one which no children should be allowed to see.

It is asked for seven years to be set as a minimum age for child- ren attending the movies unac- companied by adults and that all unaccompanied children under 12 should leave theatres before 8 p.m.

Acheson Leaves for Big Three Meetings With Expectation Defences Will be Tightened

RUSSIA PUTS END TO REPATRIATION

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany, was forced to call the German cabinet into an emergency meeting at Bonn, on Friday, to discuss the Moscow announcement that Russia has completed repatriation of all German prisoners of war. The announcement, made by the official Soviet news agency, Tass, added that since Germany's surrender in 1945 the Soviet Union has repatriated 1,939,163 prisoners including 58,103 discovered in 1947-48 among prisoners of other nationalities in the Soviet Union. According to German officers, announcement, that was "termed unbelievable" meant that there were still 400,000 prisoners left in Russia.—Central Press Canadian.

Washington, May 6 — (AP)— State Secretary Dean Acheson leaves for Europe today to join in diplomatic conferences which he confidently expects will tighten western defences in the cold war with Russia.

The meetings in Paris and London are being held in the shadow of a prediction by the United States State and Defence Departments that by 1954 Russia will be in a position to overpower the U. S. alone — both in atomic weapons and conventional arms. Against this background, informed officials were forecast decisions for:

(A) Expand the work of the North Atlantic Treaty Council, (B) provide for closer co-operation among the United States, Britain and France and (C) study steps toward ending the occupation of Germany.

Officials here said the Foreign Ministers will review their policies throughout the world—particularly those involving efforts to stop communism in the Far East, relations between the west and Russia, and the problem of the future of Germany.

They are expected also to come to vocational agreements on action they will advocate in the 12-power North Atlantic Council meeting to be held in London the following week.

Associates said Acheson leaves here with a strong conviction that the west still has the power of eventual cold war victory in its hands.

They said he is confident the North American and Western European governments will make the initial decisions necessary to close their ranks, politically and economically, and to throw more of their resources into a proposed new armaments program under the Atlantic Pact.

Working Against Time

Acheson is due to tell Foreign Minister Schuman of France and Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain that in these endeavors the west is working against definite time limits in respect to Germany and Russia.

Concerning Germany, he has accepted the estimate made by U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy that the western powers have only about 18 months left in which to work out the fate of the occupied country, insofar as they control it.

Acheson believes, therefore, that primary steps must be taken now to start winding up the occupation and to bring Germany into the North Atlantic community.

The time element in relation to Russia is fixed for Acheson by the decisions of the State and Defence Departments that the western nations have no more than four years in which to build up their combined strength for defence against the Soviet Union.

Unemployment Falls Rapidly Across Canada

Ottawa, May 6—(CP)—Unemployment in Canada is falling rapidly.

From a peak of 634,700 at April 6, numbers of unemployed dropped to 424,300 at April 20 with indications of a rapid seasonal increase of employment in most industries.

The labor department reported Friday that the actual decrease in unemployment at April 20 was higher than figures indicated, since many registered job seekers had found work but had not notified the National Employment Service offices.

Of the total of 424,300 job seekers registered with employment offices at April 20, some 69,000 were workers claiming supplementary unemployment insurance benefits.

Exclusive of those who had registered for supplementary benefits, which went into effect Feb. 28, there were 355,300 persons registered for work with the employment service at April 20—a decline of 12,600 from April 6.

The department said by far the largest proportion of workers seeking supplementary benefits were found in the logging districts of Quebec and the Maritime provinces.

It was exggested that the total number of persons in most industries and regions would exceed last year's records. The outlook for the construction industry was "particularly favorable," and labor requirements in agriculture and transportation should be "at least as heavy as last year."

"New construction expenditures in 1950 of an anticipated $2,300,000,000 or 12 per cent higher than in 1949, while the over-all level of public and private investment for new construction and for machinery and equipment is expected to reach $3,800,-000,000 in 1950, or five per cent higher than in 1949."

The department said many of the new job openings had been created by the opening of navigation on the Great Lakes.

GREEKS USE MAINLY BRITISH EQUIPMENT

Athens, May 6 — (Reuters) — The army uses mainly British-made equipment, Maj.-Gen. Charles Douglas Packard, British military mission chief in Greece, said today. One hundred per cent of the Greek army's armored cars, 90 per cent of its guns, 30 per cent of trucks and automobiles, 60 per cent of field guns and 60 per cent of rifles are of British make, he said.

WILL ERECT CAIRN

Owen Sound, May 6—(CP)—A cairn will be erected at the Cape Croker Indian Reserve, 40 miles north of here, in memory of James Newash chief and warrior of 1812. Official unveiling will take place in July.

Honor Toronto's First Mayor, Also Grandson

The memory of William Lyon Mackenzie, Toronto's first mayor, will be honored next Tuesday when his restored home will be officially opened as a historical museum of Toronto's colonial years. Mackenzie's illustrious grandson, former Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, is seen, beside painting of mother, Mackenzie's youngest daughter. The former prime minister on Thursday received the Grand Cross of Luxembourg for "great services" rendered to the tiny European duchy during the war. The presentation was made by Hugues le Gallais, Luxembourg minister to Canada and the United States, in an investiture at Laurier House, Mr. King's residence. Central Press Canadian.

RCMP Will Not Supervise Saliva Tests at Tracks

Ottawa, May 66 — (CP) Commissioner S. T. Wood of the R.C. M.P. said Friday that the force no longer intends to supervise saliva tests at Canadian race tracks.

He said the decision to stop supervision of the tests was made "recently." It would be up to the various racing associations in the country to make arrangements for such supervision in the future.

The R. C. M. P. has supervised saliva tests at race tracks in Ontario, the three prairie provinces and Quebec for a number of years.

The tests are conducted at all regulated race tracks to ensure that no winning horse in a race is given a stimulant that would artificially raise the animal's normal performance. Tests also are carried out on any other horse whose performance is subject to suspicion.

SENATORS WANT WORK

Ottawa, May 6 — (CP) — The Progressive Conservative leader in the Senate Friday appealed to the government leader to see what he can do about stirring up a little more work for the Chamber.

Senator John T. Haig said he had been told that the government was preparing a new batch of bills for presentation to Parliament at the current session, and yet the Senate had seen no part of them.

Commission Will Appoint Own Officials for Test

Toronto, May 6 — (CP)— The Ontario Racing Commission has its own appointed officials to look after the saliva and urine tests "for the time being" and "it makes for a happy solution," Chairman Clapper Bigelow said in an interview Friday.

But it was a different story when the 1950 racing season opened at Toronto's Dufferin Park. The Dominion government did not send an R. C. M. P. officer and a veterinary to look after the tests, necessitating a hurried call for a Toronto veterinary.

Incorporated Canadian Racing Association — now the Ontario Racing Commission — first asked the Federal Department of Agriculture to make the tests. The department agreed, provided its veterinary was supervised by the R. C. M. P., and they took on the job hopeful it might help the war on drugs.

It believed this didn't help and this year the R. C. M. P. found it was unable to spare the men for the job.

LEFT DEBRIS ON ROAD

Brantford, May 6—(CP)—Kenneth McLean Friday paid $16 for a bumper he had no use for. It all started when his front bumper was ripped off in a traffic accident. Police found the object and charged him with leaving debris on the roadway. He was fined $16.

Salesman Fined But Counsel Says He Will Appeal

Toronto, May 6 — (CP) — George Hamilton Babcock of Ayr, Friday was fined $5,000 or three months on charges of violating Ontario securities regulations.

The 53 - year - old securities salesman was fined $2,000 for dealing in stock without being registered with the Ontario Securities Commission and $1,500 each on two charges offering stocks without registering a prospectus. Babcock's counsel said he will appeal the convictions.

Alternative to the fine is three months on each charge to run consecutively.

While the last Crown witness was giving evidence Magistrate Thomas Elmore rebuked Defence Counsel W. Mitchell Sinclair of Ottawa for his action in obtaining subpoenas for five members of the Securities Commission "for insufficient cause."

Babcock, president and general manager of both the Thirty-One Mile Lake Hematite Company and the Babcock Corporation, did not take the stand in his own defence. It was claimed during the 10-day trial that $37,000 was received from sale of stock in the two properties, located about 60 miles north of Hull, Que.

SAYS INTENDED BRIDE HAS TO GET DIVORCE

Montreal, May 6 — (CP) — Walter Smercuick, 29, who, at his own request several weeks ago, was given the choice between marriage by May 5 or a jail term, appeared before Judge Gerald Almond Friday and admitted he was still a bachelor. He asked for another delay saying his intended bride first had to obtain a divorce. Judge Almond gave him until Sept. 19. Smercuick pleaded guilty previously to a charge of illegal possession of a firearm.

Three Senators Assail Britain For Witholding Co-Operation In 'Fuchs' A-Spying Case

Washington, May 6—(AP) — Three Senators assailed Britain today for withholding full co-operation from the United States in the Klaus Fuchs atomic spying case.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Dem., Colo.) a member of the Senate-House of Representative Atomic Committee, told a reporter he is shocked at reports that Britain has agreed to give the federal bureau of investigation only limited opportunity to question Fuchs, convicted of passing atomic secrets along to Soviet agents.

Senators Styles Bridges (Rep.—N.H.) and Homer Ferguson (Rep.-Mich.) said information the F.B. I. might get from Fuchs may be vital to defence plans under the North Atlantic Pact and ought not to be denied the U.S.

There has been no official statement but reliable reports are that the British government insists on fixing conditions under which F.B.I. agents can talk to Fuchs—an arrangement the F.B.I. is said to regard as inadequate if it is to get at the bottom of the atomic spying system.

A senator who asked that his name not be used publicly said even these unsatisfactory arrangements were agreed to by the British Government except under pressure exerted by high American officials.

Johnson said he thinks this amounts to "very shabby treatment of the security problem" by Britain, adding:

"They ought to give us full and complete co-operation so that the whole case can be fully explored and to that any aides or assistants of Fuchs in this country can be unearthed."

(In Ottawa Tuesday night L. B. Pearson, Canadian Minister for External Affairs, said Fuchs' name was one of five given to Britain at the time of the 1946 Canadian espionage investigation. Fuchs' name was one of 438 found in an address book seized in Canada Feb. 15, 1946.

Prime Minister Attlee is to be asked two questions by a conservative M.P. May 11: (A) why Fuchs' remained at his atomic research post at Harwell, Berkshire, after Canada forwarded his name; and (b) whether "spy operations have ceased" or the four other Britons whose names were forwarded with that of Fuchs.)

ENROLMENTS DROPPED

Ottawa, May 6—(CP)—University enrolments dropped this year from their all-time peak of 83,000 two years ago.

However there still are nearly twice as many persons seeking higher education than in the pre-war years when enrolments totalled less than 40,000.

The Bureau of Statistics Friday reported about 70,000 students had signed up for the 1949-50 term—a drop of 13,000 from the peak year 1947-48 when many a Canadian war veteran returned to the campus to complete his studies.

Equips Jets to Track Enemy Bombers in Dark

Washington, May 5 — (AP) — The United States Air Force is equipping late model jet fighters with new automatic radar devices which will track enemy bombers through night skies or bad weather, shoot them down, then bring the pilot home for a landing.

Officials said this whole family of robots is being installed in its new interceptors to meet problems posed by the development of high-speed bombers and atomic weapons.

The growing speed of the bombers gives defending fighters less time to climb to meet them, and the enormous destructive power of the atomic bomb makes it more important than ever to destroy the bombers before they reach the target.

Sarnia, May 5 — (CP) — The widening search for two-year-old Brian Marshall of Port Huron—one of the greatest hunts in Michigan's history—fanned across the St. Clair River into Ontario today.

In the belief that the boy's body may have been washed ashore on the Canadian side of the St. Clair River near Stag Island, Port Huron police today asked for the co-operation of the Ontario provincial police. Stag Island is five miles down the river.

Brian, the adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Marshall, was wearing a light blue waterproof snowsuit and helmet when last seen.

projects at level crossings. Transport Minister Chevrier said many new projects were planned.

Requests Change

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, urged the government to change administration of Trans-Canada Air Lines from Trade Minister Howe to the Transport Minister, who had charge of its parent company, Canadian National Railways.

Getting no answer to his question, he brought it up again at night with considerable elaboration. He charged that Canada had not made the progress she should in civil aviation and said one reason was because of "unnecessary divorcing" of various aviation administrations. The aeronautics act was under the transport minister and T.C.A. should be there too.

Mr. Chevrier told the House a report was expected shortly from an interdepartmental committee which studied air sea rescue facilities along Canada's coasts. He was replying to questions by Gordon Higgins (PC-St. John's East) who urged the necessity for setting up a Canadian Coast Guard service.

The pipelines debate on a private bill to incorporate Prairie Transmission Lines Limited continued for another hour with the bill making no progress.

Rents With Board

Prime Minister St. Laurent said the final decision as to the amount of the gas pipe line the company proposes to build from Alberta to the Pacific Coast would rest with the board of transport commissioners.

Western members have been filibustering the legislation, demanding the pipeline follow an all-Canadian route.

Mr. Chevrier gave the House a brief statement on the new shipping policy of cutting the Canadian Merchant Marine to not more than 40 subsidized vessels. He said 93 ships had been transferred to British registry and transfer of 23 others were pending. Subsidies had been approved for 31 vessels and nine subsidy applications were pending.

At present Canadian shipbuilding yards were employing 9,000 men and had orders "in preparation or under construction" totaling $67,000,000.

DEMOLITION COMPLETED

Kiel, Germany, May 6 (Reuters) — British squads Friday completed final demolitions at the former German armament centre on the eastern side of Kiel Bay, once the largest on the German Baltic coast. The giant plants, which at the height of the war employed over 50,000 workers, comprised docks and armament factories of the former Krupp combine, the Deutsche Werke and, the Howaldt shipyards.

Reeder Mainstay On Pitching Staff Of Red Wings

(By The Associated Press)

Big Bill Reeder, after a year with parent St. Louis Cardinals, once again is shaping up as a mainstay on the pitching staff of Rochester Red Wings.

Reeder advanced to the Cardinals last year after wining 19 games for the Red Wings in the 1948 International League season.

However, Bill won only one game in the big time and was sent back shortly before the current season began.

The 28-year-old righthander gave up 11 hits as he turned in his second victory of the season Friday. He pitched the Wings to a 6-3 victory over Baltimore Orioles.

The league-leading Montreal Royals scored twice in the ninth inning to edge the Jersey City Giants, 6-5. The victory was Montreal's eighth in nine starts.

Rookie Walt Fiala knocked home the winning runs. Pinch-hit singles by Toby Atwell and Charlie Thompson and a sacrifice preceded Fiala's winning blow.

Ray Villmer Loses Main Bout When Wagner Sticks Out Foot To Disconcert 'Rassle' Plans

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Figure this one if you can. Two wrestlers, natch, were belting in there in the main bout of the card in Memorial Arena last night.

Each had won a fall. Fair enough?

But a third wrestler, if you can call him that won the third and deciding fall. Funny eh? But true. It was the windup and the fall of the main bout between dynamic Ray Villmer and ruffy tuffy Wild Bill Longson, he from the cement-mixing plants of Oregon.

Wild Bill and he looks as though he had been on a diet figured he had the match well in hand after dropping the second fall.

However, it seemed that the Wild William was not taking any chances. Spectators looked as pre-main wrestlers took the strategic positions.

The Strangler Waits

One strangler Bob Wagner a pugnacious cuss, at the best who had survived a thirty-minute time-limit draw with popular Earl "Moose" McCready in the semi-finals, waited outside the perimeter of ringside spectators.

Came the moment when dynamic Ray Villmer had the former world champion to the point where he tossed him out of the ring with Villmer in full pursuit.

Finally it developed into a 'rassle ring-round-rory. Longson poured out of the ring before a furious onslaught, Villmer slid through the ropes in full pursuit.

Round and around, they went. Villmer furious overtook the Longsolan carcass.

Then it happened Strangler Bob Wagner loosen pal of the Wild William, smiled as his pal went by. Then by accident or design the Strangler developed a sudden complex. He stuck his foot out, believe it or not, it happended to pass between the flying legs of La Villmer.

The Mighty Atom

Villmer, the mighty atom of wrestling, crashed to the ground Referee Bunny Dunlop (the old no-and-so) who had been given a good jaw smash and who in turn did not pull the punches when it came to the point where the boys got, perhaps a little bit tough, playing to the wrestling Marquis of Queensbury Rules and like Dara Barry of old, delivered the fatal ten-count before Villmer could get back into the ring.

The crowd went wild. They surged around the ring. Villmer they figured, had the boot in the bag. And he had, according to performance.

But, it wasn't so, kiddies. Villmer failed to get back into the ring before "Bunny" tolled the final count, and that was that. It was a good show.

In the semi-finals, a former Belleville favorite, Earl "Moose" McCready, received a fine ovation on his first appearance here. He was pitted against, as we said before, Bob Wagner. It went to a 30-minute draw.

The preliminary backed up a fine card, Bobby Nelson, a promising newcomer, bade fair that night to make good. He did a grand job and it was not his fault perhaps that he was matched against an opponent in the person of Wee Willie Davis, twice his size.

"EAD THE BALL, LAD"

If you see anything in the sky this afternoon around 3.30 don't be alarmed. It won't be a flying saucer; merely a soccer football that has left the toe of Hinsmer Mayor Jack Allin who kicks off (the ball, that is) at the first intercity match between the Belleville Navy team and the Belleville United elevens.

Yup, the foot of the chief magistrate will wind up in a big arc this afternoon and the fifths boys will be on their toes, "Head on like trains about to smack" pedestrians on a one-way track, ready to "flick Belleville or Bust" according to our soccer - minded Admiral Beatty, and if his mates can't play the game as well as he talks it, the United is in for a good old-fashioned drubbing.

However, methinks ye United may have something to say about that. In fact they say they're going to scuttle the Navy and make 'em swallow their own bilgewater. But that may just be scuttlebutt. In any event and to be serious about the matter, the game should be an outstanding attraction for lovers. Game starts at 3.30.

A NICE GESTURE

"Tarney" Parsons, representative of the Labatt Brewing Company informs us that his bosses have generously consented to donate a trophy to be awarded annually to the champions of the 'B' Section of the Commercial Softball League. The handsome agreement will be worked by both league officials and management of the teams in the lower bracket section of the loop. The Labatt Company is well-known for its interest in clean wholesome sport, and the gesture in presenting the trophy to a Belleville organization is but another indication of its desire to further and foster recreation for young Canadians. Its action is deeply appreciated by the league executive, President Don Lee said on receipt of the announcement.

"THEY'RE OFF!

The mint julepe in frosty glasses (they cost a buck apiece); white-whiskered Kaintucky colonels in black slouch hats and shoestring ties; the sheen of the "sunny grass"; the pulchritudinous beauty of southern belles in colorful Spring apparel; the gay young blades and old ones too; the roar of the crowd as the blud of horse flesh, the mint-julep turf, the frenzied rush around the parl-mutuels after the races; that's part of the picture of the famous Kentucky Derby being run, with "Ole Bardy Dog" down south and all southern chivalry and beauty as well as that of the north will be present. Hotels will do a land office business. The mint will take an awful beating, and so will the purses of a lot of people. But rest or no rest, 'tis Derby time and that's all that matters. Extending ourselves out on the well-known limb we'll take Your Host by a couple of noses. The race will be aired over CJBQ at 5.15 this evening.

Pittsburgh Pirates Hitless Wonders of National Loop, Only Half-Game Off Top

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Hitless wonders of 1950—Pittsburgh Pirates.

Batting a sick .224, Bill Meyer's Pirates make a habit of winning five hitters. Only a half-game behind the league leading Brooklyn Dodgers, the Bucs continue to do it the hard way.

Friday night they got just five hits in defeating New York Giants 5-4. Great relief work by Letty Bill Werle choked a Giant rally in the ninth.

If Pittsburgh wins without hits, Boston certainly makes up for them. The home-run happy Braves hammered four eight consecutive hits against his old teammates. Sisler was stopped by Harry Brecheen in the ninth as the Cards edged the Phillies, 3-2.

With Stan Musial on first base and Marty Marion back at short, the Cards showed the form that built big league line-up for the first time.

Hurling Fails Apart

Brooklyn pitching fell apart in the ninth inning again and the Dodgers lost to Chicago Cubs in the 10th inning 7-6. Rookie Ransom Jackson's homer off Clarence Podbielan broke up the game.

Although Ralph Branca, making his first start, was knocked out in the first inning, the Dodgers took a 6-3 lead into the ninth, thanks to Cub errors. Frankie Frisch Chicago manager, was tossed out of the game in the eighth, but Cliff Chambers, ex-Bluebird, hit a homer with two men on.

Hank Sauer sent the game into extra innings with his first homer of the year, It came off Carl Erskine with two men on base and two out.

Detroit clung to its one game lead in the American, capitalizing on shoddy Washington support for Steve Nagy to trim the Senators 9-6. The Tigers scored five unearned runs.

Nagy's work with a triple, double and single led the Tiger 10-hit attack while Ivy Noren and Gil Coan honeered for the Senators.

Ted Williams' fifth homer helped the Boston Red Sox whip Chicago, 5-2, to move into second place.

Vern Stephens also rapped a homer to ease Joe Dobson's ride to his third victory.

Primeau Says Marlies Ready For Third Game

Calgary, May 6 — (CP) — Coach Joe Primeau says his eastern Canada champion Toronto Marlboros are "anxious to go" against Calgary Stampeders tonight—the third game of the best-of-seven Allan Cup final.

The Marlies mentor, who returned Friday from attending his father's funeral in Toronto, reports no casualties on the Dukes' lineup. Stampeders also were in the pink.

Ted Kyle of the betting fraternity apparently think its going to be anybody's bet on this series. Originally the Marlies were 8-5 favorites but odds now are reported to have shifted to even money.

"We anticipate a tough series right down the line," Primeau said. "All the games in this series are big games. It won't be easy for either club to come through with a win in any game."

The Stamps' coach, Butch McDonald, wasn't making any predictions of an easy victory either. However, he said he felt his charges "are coming" and should reach their peak in tonight's contest.

On the basis of the two games played, the meeting should see no big margin for the winning club. In the first game Toronto edged Calgary 4-3 and took the second 5-4 to tie the series and each team's total goals.

Patrick Resigns As Manager Of N.Y. Rangers

New York, May 6 — (CP) — The long and brilliant reign of the Patrick clan in big - league hockey circles has come to an abrupt ending with the surprise resignation of Lynn Patrick as coach of New York's Rangers.

The 36-year-old son of Lester Patrick, the famed "Silver Fox" of hockey, announced late Friday that he is leaving the Rangers to take up a coaching job with Victoria Cougars of the Pacific Coast Hockey League next season.

At Victoria, his birthplace, Lynn will join his 66-year-old father in running the Cougars. The Patrick's have a financial interest in the club which has a working agreement with Montreal's Canadiens.

The news of Patrick's resignation came as a distinct shock to hockey fans here, since no evidence of any trouble had previously had been hinted. He had done a solid job in piloting the Rangers to the final round of the Stanley Cup playoffs in his first full year as coach and will be shoved out to the champion Detroit Red Wings four games to three.

Three Without Coaches

In announcing his resignation, Patrick said:

"I am a partner in the Victoria team and feel that my future lies with that organization. That has been in my mind for some time. Another factor that helped me make my decision is that I would prefer to bring up my family some place other than in a big city".

A third child, a boy, was born to the Patricks here last week.

The resignation left the last three finishers in the N. H. L. this season without coaches. George (Buck) Boucher, brother of Frank, manager of the Rangers, was released by the fifth - place Boston Bruins, and Charlie Conacher resigned from the last-place Chicago Black Hawks to devote more time to his oil interests in Western Canada.

Lynn the tough son of Frank Boucher Dec. 22, 1948 but the Rangers finished last. Last season, after a heavy turnover in Ranger personnel, he piloted the Rangers into fourth place and a playoff spot.

In the playoffs the Rangers really were a "Cinderella" team. Given little chance of getting past the semi-finals, they eliminated Montreal in five games and battled Detroit to the limit in the finals.

Fifteen Colts Entered to Start In Run for Roses

By JOHN CHANDLER

Louisville, Ky., May 6 (AP) — Fifteen classy colts will get together today at historic Churchill Downs in a quiz show called the Kentucky Derby, and the one with the right answer will tote off the better part of $100,000.

Thousands of racegoers, with thousands of visitors from all parts of the continent, and the guess of any one of them is as good as another on the big horse to win one of the widest-open derbies in history.

The general consensus is that Bill Goetz, the Hollywood movieman, has the horse to beat in Your Host, speedy California-bred colt he bought for $30,000 from his father-in-law, Louis B. Mayer, in January, 1949.

At any rate, the odds have been in Your Host's favor since he cracked the seven furlong track record at Keeneland recently. Jockey Douglas Dodson, the Ala.-reared saddle veteran, can bring him home on top of this 76th derby, Your Host will be the second California-bred horse to do the job over the mile and 1-4-mile route. Morvich was the first, winning the roses in 1922.

However, there is a swelling growth of sentiment for Chris Chenery's Hill Prince, the handsome Virginia number with the stubby tail. Hill Prince has impressed in workouts, and is the big rugged type to bounce around and by his sire Eddie Arcaro's nose under the wire first.

The latest odds put Your Host at 2 to 1, with Hill Prince 3 to 1. That could change any time, especially after the expected crowd of around 100,000 barges into the premises.

A lot has been said about the weather which could change the whole picture.

Rain Drenches Track

Rain drenched the track the early part of the week and was still sloppy late Friday night. More showers were predicted this morning. Clearing skies, however, would leave the track fast today.

Two of the other entries which can't be overlooked when they go to the post at 3.30 p.m. EST are Middle-Ground and On The Mark, from Robert J. Kleberg's King Ranch.

That also goes for Mr. Trouble and Doolys, a coupled entry owned by C. V. Whitney, and a third (6).

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ROBERT MARJORIBANKS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 6 (CP)— With four cities already promoting themselves as the site of the 1954 British Empire Games, Canada's capital also has its cap in the ring.

Toronto, Vancouver, Montreal and Hamilton have been singing their own praises as the logical scene of the big show. Toronto points to the Canadian National Exhibition Ground as ch- ideal location. Vancouver says it will be nearest to most of the competitors. Hamilton and Montreal offer other inducements.

Art (Cornwall Standard-Freeholder) Cameron says some Ottawans are getting games-conscious.

"So far the city fathers have made no announcement regarding their intentions to do some toe-thumping in favor of staging the games in the shadow of Parliament Hill. But with the National Council on physical fitness apparently in favor of Ottawa as the site of the keenly anticipated games, it may that the city's elected rulers will fall into step."

Ideal Site

Cameron quotes Ernest Lee, chairman of the council, as picking Brewer's Park "that beautiful expanse of green and brown nestling on the banks of the Rideau River" as a site.

"From the standpoint of sheer scenic beauty that particular park would probably be as good as anything available in any Canadian city," Cameron says.

He readily admits "there may not be facilities extensive enough for the various games" but adds "these could easily be installed."

Diplomat Sportsman

Incidentally one of the capital's most enthusiastic sportsmen is External Affairs Minister Pearson. Mr. Diplomat, who once coached a football team and a girls hockey team at Victoria College, University of Toronto, attributed his skill in international scrimmages partly to his knowledge of sport.

George (Belleville Ontario Intelligencer) Gilmore suggests the minister as telling a Rotary Club: "I think that in the diplomatic and international fields a knowledge of an experience in outdoor sports stands me in good stead. Diplomacy is nothing helps me better in a tussle with Vishinsky than the knowledge of a good clean body check. And in politics I find that an adeptness in broken-field running is a great aid."

The Teal Trout Fly

(By John Alden Knight, noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables).

You'd think by this time that every possible color combination and design in trout flies had been thought of, constructed, and given exhaustive try-outs. Now and then, however, a new one will show up.

This time it is the Teal Fly. It first came into being in Wisconsin or Minnesota last season. My friend, Jack Cornelius, of Minneapolis, told me about it at the New York Sportsman's Show last February.

Told Fantastic Tales

Jack had heard fantastic tales of the fish-taking potentialities of this wonder fly but he accepted the information with reservations. He'd heard all that before and the flies turned out to be simply trout flies, much like other trout flies.

But he was curious, so he took a dozen Teals with him on his vacation. He had them in various sizes and included them in his kit, promptly forgetting about them.

One day on the Clam River he found himself confronted by a super-selective rise of brown trout. The fish were feeding selectively but try as he would, he could not find a fly that interested them.

Then he remembered the Teal flies.

Selecting one that was about the size of the drifting naturals, he cast it and cast it up over the rising trout. Bang! He hooked a fish immediately.

The rest is history. He and his companion, Ed Cashin, caught and released until their arms were weary. They'd select the trout they wanted, drift a Teal over the fish and that was that. It was that easy.

When talking about it that evening they charged it up to coincidence and remained only partially convinced. At the end of three weeks, however, they returned to Minnespolis completely sold.

"It's the darndest fly you ever saw," Jack told me. "I don't care what kind is drifting. Simply tie on a Teal about the same size and your worries are over. You can hook every rising trout you see."

Has to be Shown

All fishermen are credulous creatures and, after all, I am a fisherman. Show me a new and different item of tackle and I'll go on point like a setter dog on scent of quail.

Just the same, I find myself unable to swallow hook, line, and sinker about this Teal fly the way those boys have done.

After all, I've introduced a few flies — the Mickey Finn, for instance — and I'm familiar with propoganda. Now, in the clear light of many years of experience I must admit that there have been some occasional trout which the Mickey Finn failed to interest.

The outstanding novelty of the Teal is the manner in which the wing is set on. Only a single feather is used—a breast feather from a bellow, the given-wing teal. Formerly such feathers have been used in tying fan-wing flies.

In the Teal, this curved feather is set on with its plane at right angles to the shank of the hook, the convex curve of the feather facing the eye of the hook.

The body is tied this way—at the "belly" of the fly there is a red rag of twisted silk floss, the tag behind about half the length of the body proper.

The body itself consists of a fat rib, peacock herl, taken from the "eye" feather and not from the "sword."

Has No Tail

The fly has no tail, and the theory is that the supply houses call "medium ginger," probably from a Rhode Island Red cock.

The head is tied off with red twisted silk floss, the same material that is used to make the tag.

You will no doubt note that the body is of the same general design as those of many other flies, such as the Coachman series, the Welshman's Button, the Grey Goodness. That, decided or less, guarantees it is a fish-getter.

But the wing is different. Maybe that makes it more effective. I don't know as I'll worry about it too much.

Come to think of it, there's a spare Solunar Period scheduled for around 2:00 p.m. tomorrow. I guess my work is in shape so that I can spare a few hours away from my desk.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I'll like to go to my fly-tying table. I'd better tie up a few of those new Teal flies.

Sports Writers Must Wait for 15 Minutes

(By The Canadian Press)

Two groups of gentlemen — those who work at playing baseball—dominated Friday on a question of privacy.

The Red Sox announced with considerable gusto that they wanted no writing gentlemen barging into the privacy of their dressing room after games— at least for 30 minutes.

The sports writers protested with some vehemence that most of the Red Soxers were fast dressers and that at the end of 20 minutes most of them had departed from the dressing room for parts unknown. That made it difficult for the writers to thresh out knotty points about the game not clear in the press box — questions of scoring, or just what happened in a double play. After all, they had a job to do, too.

So reasonable did this seem to the baseball players that their spokesman, Don Dimaggio, Friday announced they had relented by 50 percent. The reporters now are unwelcome in the dressing room only during the first fifteen minutes after each game. After that, say the modest baseballers, it's open house.

Harry Doughty, president of a Toronto Senior Agency has been appointed to the board of directors of the Toronto Argonaut football club, it was announced Friday night. He succeeds John A. Stuart, who resigned last week.

In making the announcement, Bob Morea, president of the big four club, emphasized that Argos "are engaged in a major rebuilding job. . ."

Morea said he intended to build Argos into a major league. Several outstanding Canadians and imports have been lined up, he said.

Kitchener Legionnaires of the Intercounty Senior Baseball League leave tonight for Indiana to open their best-of-seven series for the North American sandlot baseball title against Fort Wayne Zollmen.

Eighteen players will make the trip, including six pitchers.

At the end of last season Legionnaires were informed they were entitled to a title by default because the Zollners had disbanded. However, officials later decided to hold the championship series.

Goody Rosen, former fence-busting major league baseball player and an outfielder last season with Galt Terriers of the semi-pro Ontario Intercounty loop, has turned to softball.

Manager Sam Shetsky of Toronto Tip Tops announced Friday Rosen will not be returning to the Intercounty this season but had signed with the Tip Top club.

Walter (Dip) Nichol has been signed to manage Waterloo Tigers in the Intercounty Junior A baseball league, it was announced Friday. He succeeds Johnny Moyer.

At Washington, Lt'l Arthur King of Toronto, British Empire lightweight champion Friday night scored a technical knockout over Herby (Biff) Jones of Washington at two minutes, 43 seconds of the sixth round in a main bout at Uline Arena.

Port Colborne Will Not Play In Final Series

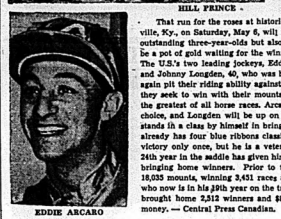
Port Colborne, May 6 (CP) — There will be no Eastern Canada Intermediate A hockey final between Port Colborne Merchants and Bagotville Allies, the Port Colborne club learned late Friday.

A telegram from Hanson Dowell of Middleton, N.S., convener of Canadian Amateur Hockey Association playoffs, said: "Asrie Choquet (Bagotville manager) advised this morning (Friday), Bagotville not interested in playing further games." Bagotville defeated Rouyn Flashes in a series at Rouyn this week.

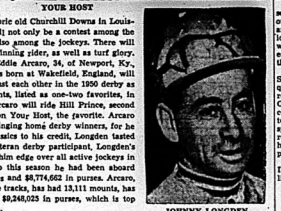
But according to Port Colborne club officials, Ontario Hockey Association champions for the second consecutive year, they will retain the Eastern Canada championship won from Rouyn last year at Fort Erie.

In some seasons, the C.A.H.A. intermediate A group has not been played for with the team who won it last retaining the trophy until it was contested again.

FAVORITES IN 76TH RUNNING OF BLUE GRASS CLASSIC



HILL PRINCE -



YOUR HOST

That run for the roses at historic old Churchill Downs in Louisville, Ky., on Saturday, May 6, will not only be a contest among the outstanding three-year-olds but also among the jockeys. There will be a pot of gold waiting for the winning rider, as well as turf glory. The U.S.'s two leading jockeys, Eddie Arcaro, 34, of Newport, Ky., and Johnny Longden, 40, who was born at Wakefield, England, will again pit their riding ability against each other in the 1950 derby as they seek to win with their mounts, listed as one-two favorites, in the greatest of all horse races. Arcaro will ride Hill Prince, second choice, and Longden will be up on Your Host, the favorite. Arcaro stands ih a class by himself in bringing home derby winners, for he already has four blue ribbons classics to his credit, Longden tasted victory only once, but he is a veteran derby participant, Longden's 26th year in the saddle has given him edge over all active jockeys in bringing home winners. Prior to this season he had been aboard 18,035 mounts, winning 3,451 races and $8,774,662 in purses. Arcaro, who now is in his 19th year on the tracks, has had 13,111 mounts, has brought home 2,512 winners and $9,248,025 in purses, which is top money. — Central Press Canadian.

Resignation Big Loss to League Says Smythe

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—Resignation of Lyan Patrick as coach of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League will be "a big loss to the League," said Conn Smythe, managing director of the Toronto Maple Leafs, today.

Patrick, the youngest N.H.L. coach, announced his resignation in a surprise move at New York Friday, saying he intended to join his father, Lester Patrick, in operating the Victoria Cougars of the Pacific Coast League.

The younger Patrick in a telephone call from New York said that "unhappiness" is the big city plus a desire to learn the actual business end of hockey from the ground up, prompted his decision. Patrick's team, Rangers were defeated by Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup finals last week, but he and his wife were both unhappy in New York because "it's no place to bring up kids, especially living in an apartment." He has three small children.

Smythe expressed regrets at the league's loss. "He knows hockey and lit players and he was a credit to the N.H.L. in which he had a definite future," the Leafs manager said of Patrick.

Regina Pats Hoping to Win Fifth Game

Montreal, May 6 — (CP) — With a little more of the spirited play that has kept the west in the Memorial Cup final, Regina Pats can give Montreal Canadiens a run for their money in the Canadian Junior Hockey championship series.

Although 3-1 under-dogs in the best-of-seven contest, the Westerners can pull up another notch tonight when they take on the Eastern champions in the fifth game of the series.

Optimistic about his team's chances of pulling a major upset on the highly-favored Canadiens, coach Murray Armstrong said determinedly: "We're going to win this thing."

Neither Pats nor Canadiens scheduled a practice session for today, both teams resting up for each crucial game.

Coach Sammy Pollock has no comment on Canadien's surprising loss in Thursday's fourth game when Pats came from behind a 4-1 deficit in the second period to trounce the Montreal squad 7-4.

Sports Shorts From Britain

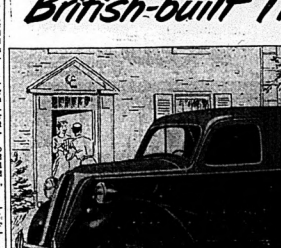
London — (CP) — Gib Hutchinson, 37-year-old Regina-born goalkeeper of the Brighton Tigers, is the recipient of the sternest decision handed down this year by the disciplinary committees of the British Ice Hockey Association.

Gib drew suspension for the balance of the season after a match between Tigers and the Harringay Racers at Brighton in which referee Jimmie Chappell was felled by a fling puck from Hutchinson's stick. The puck caught Chappell in the mouth just as the game ended.

The committee ruled that while it was felt that Hutchinson had not intended to strike Chappell with the puck his act nevertheless was "irresponsible and uncalled-for" and had to be penalized.

The game ended 2-2 with Chappell lying on the ice unconscious. Irene Jerring, throwing coins and programs and both linesmen skaters at breaking point, Chappell had disallowed a Tiger goal 20 seconds from the end that would have given the locals the victory.



After the game, police had to clear a path through the crowd outside the rink when Chappell left by car. About 100 fans had waited outside his dressing room, shouting threats and abuse.

Germany came back to the big-time sport in Britain with a bang, winning every championship in the European roller skating tournament in Wembley arena here.

Irma Fischlein took the women's title; Lothe Muller won the men's; P. Falk and R. Baier triumphed in the pairs.

Two gold cups and jewelry valued at more than £3,000 ($8,300) were stolen from the London home of Sir Alfred Butt, prominent turf sportsman.

The trophies were the Manchester Gold Cup which Sir Alfred won in 1933 with Robber Chief, and the Edinburgh Gold Cup won in 1937 with Noble King.

Armand Savoie Still Favored To Beat Thompson

Toronto, May 6 — (CP)—Armand Savoie, 19-year-old Montreal fighter who tickles the ivories (by ear) and carries a stick of dynamite in each fist, will shoot for his 14th straight knockout and his 18th in 22 professional fights Monday night. Ring experts figure his shot will be on the button.

Armand, not old enough according to boxing regulations to fight a 10-rounder, will be up against southpaw John (Spider) Thompson of Buffalo, N. Y., in the main-bout eight-round go at Maple Leaf Gardens. The way the smiling-eyed Armand is going in training he should pin the American's ears back in short order.

Armand's record speaks for itself. Two weeks ago he knocked out Alex McFater, Toronto's pride and joy in the lightweight division, in seven rounds and hardly worked up a sweat. McFater earlier won two decisions over the Buffalo lefty.

That record calls for another Savoie K. O. Monday, but the quiet and unassuming fighter who represented Canada in the 1948 Olympics isn't saying much except that he is "confident." Interviewed after a fast three-round sparring bout with fellow-Montrealer Rocky Armando, black-haired Savoie said he has "never predicted a win."

"Something might happen, and I don't. So he makes me look like a chump, eh!"

INNOCENT OF SLASHING

Columbus, Miss., May 5 (AP)— Mrs. Virginia Holliday was found innocent Thursday night of slaying her husband when she caught him hugging another woman. The 41-year-old defendant told a jury she hid in the back seat of an automobile, while her husband, ED, 46, drove to a tryst with Mrs. Estelle Moore on a lonely side street. Then, she said, she shot him.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Xibliser

When you press the bulb of a squirt gun the water is forced out. A squeeze play in bridge is something like that. It forces opponent to give up a card with which he expected to help take a trick.

When are you able to force a player to give up a winner card? Only when he has nothing else to spare. So, a squeeze usually works best when opponent is down to the fewest possible cards.

Here we have a deal:

NORTH
♥ A 9
♦ 7 6 5 4 3 2
♣ K 7 6

WEST
♠ K Q J 10
♥ K J 10
♦ None
♣ J 9 8 5 4

EAST
♠ 8 7 6 5 4
♥ 8 7 6 5 4 3
♦ None
♣ 10 3

SOUTH
♠ A 3
♥ A
♦ A K Q J 10 9 8
♣ K Q 2

South must make a grand slam in diamonds. Opening lead (fifth) west is the spade king. South takes this with ace of spades. Now what?

There is a seeming loser in spades. South can see no ordinary way of saying it. The only hope is with some unusual play that will promote the spade loser into a winner. But how?

Getting west to give up his spades and hearts would do it. Of course west is not willing to fall in with this idea. So, it is up to declarer to force west to comply against his will.

How can west be forced to give up control of some suit he is protecting? Only by getting him into a position where he can not help himself. When he can play only from the suit he is protecting.

So after taking spade ace, south takes six trump tricks. Then he cashes three club tricks. Two tricks are thus gone. This leaves only three cards in each of the four hands at the table.

West is reduced to holding the spade queen to protect spades. He keeps heart K Q to protect hearts. South leads his seventh trump and west is squeezed into squirming out one of his queens.

If west throws spade queen, dummy nine of spades is good. If west gives up heart queen, dummy nine of hearts is good. West is pinched into doing one or the other.

It is the squeeze who gives and gives.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

Maybe it doesn't downtown in the car today, but it's striking me with her on account of me needing new shoes again, and on the way home the car started to go jump, and bump and stop, and ma said, Oh dear, I'll have to stop at a service station, but I dont intend to let one of those men charge me whatever he feels like for whatever he says is wrong with the car.

How are you going to stop him ma? I said, and ma said, I'll take your father's advice. Your father says these service station men really know very little about the inside of a car, so all you have to do is talk fast and give them the impression that you're a naturel mechanic and then they'll just go ahead and fix whatever little thing is wrong and charge you accordingly, she said.

And the car stopped 3 more times before we came to a service station and ma drove in, saying to the man, I've got a little petty trouble here, and thawt you mite be a ble to take a minute to fix it. It may be a loose carburator or perhaps there's a missing spark in the gas feed, she said.

Strange things happen to a car, that's a fact, the man said.

And he lifted up the front and looked in, saying, Oh, I see.

I knew it couldn't be mutch, ma said, I thawt maybe the trubble was in the degenerator or elts perhaps it was the timing of the oil coils, she said, and the man said, Well, I'll tell you, lady, this little wire was unhooked but now I've hooked it and your car will run okay. I thawt at first it was the coaxail cable or the superdupper herodyne, but it was just that little wire. There's no charge lady. I feel more than repaid by the addition to my education, he said.

Probably being sourcastic.

MILITARY

All other dikes in the Winnipeg area threatened to collapse, eroded by the constant pressure of the still-rising Red River which already had left all but Southern Manitoba town under water.

Radio Blares Warnings

Radio stations blared warnings through the night, and admonitions to residents of the two cities to be calm.

The Red River level at Winnipeg at 4:30 a.m. E.D.T. was 36 feet—eight feet above the flood-risk level and the highest it has been here in 88 years.

City Engineer W. D. Hurst said it might well go up another foot. That would threaten at least part of Winnipeg's power system.

Strong winds put choppy waves on the rain-pounded river during the night and into today. The weather warning for the whole Red River Valley continued.

Some Taken Home

"Army and civilian ambulances were taking every patient out of King Edward and King George hospitals in Riverview. Forty or 50 were moved during the night to Deer Lodge Military Hospital. Another 135 or so less seriously ill were taken to their homes.

Donald M. Cox, secretary-manager of the hospitals, said none of the patients in the hospitals was in critical condition.

The high St. Boniface hospital, across the Red River from Winnipeg's business section, was seriously threatened. Emergency radio calls went out for volunteers to bolster its shaky dike.

All day Friday, the Red River level rose. Flood workers toiled ceaselessly in a heavy downpour. By nightfall the situation was urgent; by midnight it was critical.

Then the river took over.

At 3:25 a.m. E.D.T. the gale pushed the Red through a dike fronting a commercial-residential section between the Louise and Redwood Bridges in North Winnipeg near the C.P.R. Station. Barber, Edward, Grove and Hallet streets were inundated.

Within minutes, the tributary Seine River—swollen by a back-water from the Red—overflowed in North St. Boniface.

Radio Station broadcast urgent calls for volunteers to try to stem the breach. The water spread quickly from Canada Packers feed division, near Whittier Park race track, south to Provencher Street.

Families in the semi-industrial area were warned to get out. They were taken on railway cars spotted at St. Boniface.

Then a dike parallelling Henderson Highway in North Kildonan was reported broken. Only one secondary road remained open to the east.

Homes Quickly Flooded

Another dike was breached on the Red's west bank in Riverview, at Brandon Avenue. Some homes were quickly flooded and the King Edward and King George hospitals were threatened. Plans to evacuate all patients were put into effect immediately.

The Red had risen a foot in 12 hours up to early today. City engineers warned residents that cracking of the most important dikes would mean three or four feet of water over three or four square miles of residential property.

"All previous estimates of the flood crest are likely to be exceeded," said City Engineer W. D. Hurst.

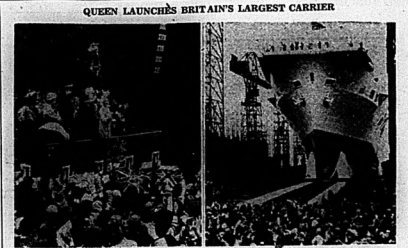
The crest, which three days ago swept through Morris, 41 miles south, was not expected here for several days.

Morris was a ghost town today. The last handful of soldiers and residents fled yesterday after a dike guarding the Morris hospital, last cell of resistance, was ripped out for keeps.

Ten other Southern Manitoba communities were isolated. Others had still-passable rail or highway lines, but no place to go.

Food, blankets, feed and flood-fighting equipment were at a premium. Cattle were being shot.

A Canadian National Railways train brought 160-odd persons—including 13 hospital patients—out of Morris Thursday. Late last night the remainder left by army amphibious "duck" or boat, on a second attempt. The first was unsuccessful because the barrier Morris river was too choppy.



A Canadian Pacific Railway relief train arrived early today from McTavish, about 34 miles southwest of Winnipeg, with 32 other evacuees. Most of the surrounding farmland was flooded. Cattle were packed into box-cars to sit the crisis out on a railway siding.

Only town to survive the onslaught was Letellier, nine miles north of Emerson. Emerson, on the International Border about 60 miles south, took the first shock of the flood.

It and every town but Letellier were almost completely under water.

Isolated were St. Norbert, Cartier, Glenlea, Ste. Agathe, Union Point, Silver Plains, Morris, St. Jean Baptiste, Letellier and Christie, on the Red's course from the international boundary.

QUEEN LAUNCHES BRITAIN'S LARGEST CARRIER

Before a crowd of cheering subjects, Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth wielded the traditional champagne bottle to launch Britain's largest carrier on Wednesday. The new carrier, the Ark Royal, replaces its famous namesake sunk by the Nazis in World War II. It is capable of handling the British Navy's largest and heaviest planes including the latest design jet aircraft. At left the Queen acknowledges the cheers of the crowd in the shipyard at Birkenhead just before she launched the battlewagon. At right, the Ark Royal slides down the ways after the ceremony. The 803-foot long carrier with a displacement of 36,800 tons is expected to be ready for sea duty in 1952. — Central Press Canadian.

Kingsridge

By Alice Ross Colver

She was saying softly "and of course, even though you found out that the school wasn't such a bad place after all, you couldn't go back to it, could you. They'd have been afraid to take you in." He lit a match with a fierce flick of his thumb nail, "Right." "And you couldn't come to us, either."

He leaned toward her with such fury in his eyes that she drew away from him slightly. "Your people had their chance when I was a kid. They made me. . . ." He stopped.

The match burned his fingers and he dropped it. She watched its blackened shape twist and writhe and lie still in the little saucer.

"Well, I had nothing to do with that," she said then quietly.

"I know."

"That's good." She stood up. "Just don't forget. And please don't be sorry you talked to me, either.

He rose with her. She reached for her red mittens that were lying on the table but before she put them on, she laid one hand lightly against his cheek.

"Please," she repeated. "Because now I can help you."

He looked at her and saw her holding her purpose in her heart like a sword, clean and sharp and shining.

"How can you?"

"I don't know. But I will."

He was silent a moment. "Sus-

"Yes?" She waited. His eyes contained such black fire. "Yes?" she said again.

But there were no words for the strange inchoate churning within him.

The dining room at Kings Ridge looked out onto a terrace and beyond that to the gardens and the orchards which sloped in a natural grade down to the County Road. This cut the town in half. And in the wintertime when there was no foliage, Elizabeth, sitting in her chair at the foot of the table, could see clearly the depot with the little park around it and the cluster of shops at the intersection where County Road met the avenue leading up to Kings Ridge on one side of the valley and to the Country Club Ridge on which the Brandts lived, on the other. She could see, too, the old frame hall a block this side of the tracks, the firehouse next to it, and, beyond the traffic on the opposite side the ungainly shape of the Inn close to the Catholic church and school.

It was at the Inn now that she was looking and at a red roadster slowly visible in the driveway before it. Was that Donald's car? If so, what was it doing down there?

She glanced around the table. Steven, at the other end, was immersed in the financial section of the Sunday morning paper. Frank, on her right, was looking at the sport section. Next to him Audrey sat staring at nothing as she slowly sipped her coffee Donald's and Susan's chairs were both empty.

Elizabeth spoke suddenly, "It seems to me if it's time your children were down here, it's nearly eleven o'clock, if you don't know it."

"What? Oh." Frank dropped his paper and looked quizzically at his wife. She answered, still staring at nothing, and still sipping. "They'd just as soon skip breakfast."

"Do you mean to say they're both asleep at this hour?" Elizabeth demanded.

Audrey put down her cup and spoke lightly, "After all, Mother, the time for my checking up on their sleeping habits ended long while ago."

"I only asked," Elizabeth's smooth tone was faintly acid, "because one or other of them seems not to be skipping breakfast. One or the other of them seems to be having it at the Inn, with, I presume, Gerry Barton."

Frank turned his head slowly in her direction, his heavy face growing still, his eyes hard and bright. "What makes you say that?"

Elizabeth nodded toward the window behind him. "Because that looks to me like Donald's car down there."

Frank got up and went to see. For a long moment he stood gazing out. Then he came back to the table. Audrey lifted her glance with cool calm to meet the challenge in his. But she was feeling neither cool nor calm.

"Well?" he asked, a trifle truculently.

Between them both was the memory of last night. She had exhibited he thought, a feeling of indifference toward him. Would she, he wondered, have been relieved if he really had found a German woman? And at the question he was suddenly beset by the fear that he had come home, not to a loving family, after all, but to an indifferent group of strangers. First Susan. Then Audrey. In this mood he had hardly heard her as she began talking about Susan again, until she caught his attention by saying that she thought he was really being extremely narrow and stupid not to see and admit that Susan was vastly improved in every way. What, exactly, did he think was the matter with her? Could any girl of eighteen be lovelier than she? More natural? More morning? More intelligent? All he had to say was "let's forget it" when she had wanted to forget and Susan would now spring there in the darkness beside him and ask what's to know. Was it simply because the child had shown a little Christian tolerance?

He had interrupted, both irritated by her words, Christian tolerance! It was he wasn't it, who had sent him to interfere between Gerry and Susan? What had come over her that she was backtracking now? "Do you want her to go with this fellow? Do you like it that she's taken such an interest in him?" he had ended.

"I wasn't talking about Gerry. I was talking about Susan and your criticism of her," Audrey had replied coldly, and had turned over and refused to discuss the matter further, leaving him maddened at her illogical aldestepping of the issue.

Now he asked "is that Susan down there?"

"Yes. It's Susan."

Steven put down the paper. "How do you know, Audrey?" he asked.

"I woke early. I heard the car going out and I got up to see who it was."

There was a little silence. In it Audrey resumed the drinking of her coffee. Outwardly she was still calm, but her hand trembled slightly. She was thinking how horribly mixed up and wrong everything was. It wasn't what she had planned for Frank's return at all. She had always prided herself on being able to meet all his needs. Her reason had told her long ago that if she could do that, everything else would be easy. But last night she hadn't been able to. She had been concentrating on Susan instead of on him. He had known it, too, and it had turned him into a bear. She hadn't meant to speak with such asperity to him but abruptly the whole thing had been too much for her— Frank's requirements and Susan's — both making demands of her at the same time, together with her own sense of bewilderment.

Because she wasn't ready yet to admit that she had been totally in error about the school. Dr. Morgan, the Headmaster, was, truly a marvelous person, and his motivating idea an excellent one. It was terribly upsetting to say the least to find that his theory wouldn't work out in actual life. It left her not knowing what to do. Really, what she had needed last night, although it never occurred to Frank that she might ever need anything, wife, was an adult with whom she could discuss problems, not another child peevishly demanding her attention!

It was at this moment that Donald came racing downstairs and at the same time Susan drove up to the front door.

Donald let Susan in.

"You've got a nerve!" he expostulated. "That car's supposed to be mine!"

"Well, you weren't using it," reasonably 'why shouldn't I?'

"You ought to ask me first."

"Don't be a drip." She was tossing off her outer garments. "You were asleep. Would you have liked me to waken you? Anyway, I knew I'd be back before you were up."

"Well, you weren't."

She kicked off her red boots, her laugh sounding on the air. "Do I hear grandfather's legal exactness in you?" she asked gaily, and, blowing him a kiss, she linked her arm in his and walked with him toward the dining room. At the door they both stopped, feeling instantly the atmosphere within.

"What's this?" Donald asked. "The graveyard hitch? Or just the merry morning after the naughty night before?"

Senator Tries Hard but Vainly To Get Facts on Building 'Scandal'

Ottawa, May 5—Senator John T. Haig tried hard yesterday but without success, to get the facts behind what he called a "scandal" in the business of erecting government buildings.

The 73-years-old Scot, who heads the Progressive-Conservatives in the Senate, kept up a running battle of words with the public works department's veteriziging veterans affairs estimates.

Senator Haig said he would be "hammered" between the two committees trying to get the information, "and he would get no place."

Mr. Murphy interjected that he was not trying to be "evasive." The hospital had been started at a time when the public works department's facilities were heavily taxed.

The work had been handed over to the defence department to carry out the job for the veterans affairs people, and either of these bodies would have all the information that was available.

Senator Haig charged that Mr. Murphy and the public works department was responsible for that state of affairs. Mr. Murphy denied the charge and said the whole matter was the concern of the veterans affairs department.

"I can't get information," said Senator Haig, and pointing at Mr. Murphy, he added, "but this man could."

Senator T. A. Crerar (L-Manitoba), the committee chairman, said the matter could be brought before the health committee which was responsible for investigating veterans affairs estimates.

Legal Question Must Be Settled By Ont. Courts

Toronto, May 6 — (CP) — A new legal question growing out of an international marriage mixup must be answered by the Ontario Supreme Court, Chief Justice McRuer said Friday.

The question is whether a woman who remarried when her first husband was believed dead can collect on the estate of the first husband who turned up alive after the second husband had died.

It all happened to Mrs. Ruby Eddols, now 62, of Kingsville.

She married John Eddols, in 1905 in Woolwich, England. They lived together three years. Mrs. Eddols said she left him because he was cruel to her.

In 1911 she received a letter from her sister saying her first husband had died. Three years later she married Lewis Stewart. They lived together until 1927 when he died.

Then in 1934 Mrs. Eddols discovered her first husband was alive and living in Mimico, a suburb of Toronto.

Mrs. Eddols was arrested subsequently and charged with bigamy but she was found innocent. Eddols died in 1946. Now Mrs. Eddols is claiming a share of his $7,000 estate.

312 HOMES ARE LEVELLED IN RIMOUSKI BLAZE

1,450 Evacuated From Low-Lying Winnipeg District

New Flood Crest Threatened As River Rises in N. Dakota

Winnipeg, May 8 — (CP) — The director of Manitoba flood-fighting operations said today: "So far we're holding our own."

But as Brig. R. E. A. Morton of the Canadian Army spoke these words, the weather bureau predicted that rain would fall in the Red River valley this afternoon.

The weather bureau said a storm now developing in Colorado is causing "grave concern" as it relates to the flood situation. It said the storm is "very similar to the one which formed in the same locality last week and swept northward over Manitoba giving two inches of rain to the flooded Red River Valley."

Brig. Morton, General Officer Commanding the Prairie Command, told a press conference at Flood Control headquarters in the legislative buildings he would not speculate on what might happen in the event of heavy rain.

"We'll probably have to warn residents in certain areas to evacuate from time to time," said Brig. Morton. "We'd like them to take this as an order, because of the danger to life."

He advised evacuees to prepare to stay away at least a week.

More Army Personnel

It was disclosed at the conference that several hundred more army personnel have been called up for flood fighting duties. The entire Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry regiment will be brought in from Calgary. Members of the 22nd Field Squadron at Chilliwack, N.B., will be flown here.

Possibly 10,000 persons now have been forced from their homes throughout southern Manitoba by the floods. Latest evacuation affected residents of low-lying areas of Norwood, East Kildonan and Point Garry, in the suburbs and part of Glenwood Crescent in the city. More than 1,500 persons were involved in the shift.

Military authorities said today the order to evacuate low spots in the Winnipeg stands despite the fact that an inspection by army, provincial and municipal engineers shows that the dike there is still steady. However, residents in the Point Douglas district fear that the dike do not need to move.

Up until Monday, August current — already higher than any year since 1826 and still increasing — was only a shade above 5 in dozen places. Hundreds of service men and civilians stacked sandbags against the barriers through the night.

The Red still was unsatisfied. United States Army engineers in Fargo, N.D., where it rises, said a new and still more violent attack is coming.

The river rose rapidly overnight at Crookston, Minn., and Grand Forks, N. D. A flood crest of 48 feet at the border town of Emerson, Man., was forecast for later this week.

69 MEN ARE HELD BY LONDON POLICE AFTER CLASH

Demonstrators Sing And Carry Red Banners

London, May 8 (AP) — Sixty-nine persons were arrested Sunday as police clashed with demonstrators, many of whom carried pro - Communist banners and shouted anti-American slogans.

Singing the "Red Flag" and jeering police, the marchers extended their demonstration from Trafalgar Square to Oxford St., about a mile away, where mounted police rode into crowds which were snarling traffic.

The demonstration had been called together by the London Trades Council, despite a Home Office ban on political demonstrations.

Some banners read: "We want peace, stop the American warmongers". Others urged "Stop the war in Malaya."

Earlier police had to break up crowds at pro-Fascist rallies held in suburban Dalston and Bethnal Green by Sir Oswald Mosley, who was jailed as a Nazi sympathizer during the war.

Miss Forsch's 93-year-old bedridden mother was frightened by the men who wandered every room in the building.

Miss Forsch told police one of the youths was armed with what looked like a .22 calibre rifle.

She said the youths pulled telephone wires from the wall and drank some soft drinks before searching the store safe.

Police kept the robbery silent for three days at the request of Miss Forsch.

American Women Frigid and Men Are to Blame French Writer Claims

Paris, May 8 (Reuters) — Onehe has to say:

In every four women in the United States is frigid, and this is entirely the fault of men, French journalist Raymond Cartier says in a long magazine article analyzing the American women.

He also says that European war brides in the United States are in a "living propaganda for a form of feminism" that the resignation of the American man was in danger of abolishing."

He sees in the infiltration of war brides the best hope for the future of the American woman — and the American man, who is "infantile and obedient to his wife and mother."

Cartier's conclusions were published Saturday.

RUSH AID TO TINY SETTLEMENT

Food and supplies were sent to it and its sister town of Rosenhof, by boats from Morris. Most residents in the little community have stayed in their homes trying to save livestock and other possessions. Red Cross headquarters have been sending out emergency crews with boats, outboard motors for flooded towns. — Central Press Canadian.

Girl Rushes Into Blazing Barn to Rescue Nephew

Presence of mind of a 21-year-old girl who without thinking of her own danger, rushed into a blazing barn in search of her nephew, was credited today with saving the life of five-year-old David Chalmers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Chalmers, Trent Road.

When she learned that her small nephew was trapped in the blazing barn, Miss Rosebud Prentice kicked in the barn door and pulled the small boy from a hayloft from where he was afraid to jump.

Minutes after the rescue the entire barn was a blazing mass and a half an hour later the building was nothing but a smoldering mass.

Started at Noon Hour

The fire started during the noon hour and it is believed the Chalmers boy and a neighbor lad Terry Kingzens, aged five, had been playing in the building. When the fire was first noticed the Kingzen boy ran to the Chalmers' house and with tears rolling down his face said the Chalmers boy was trapped in the barn.

"I was absolutely frantic," recalled the brave Prentice girl following the fire. "The whole centre of the barn was already afire so I kicked in a door at the end of the barn and after getting inside was just able to see David's legs protruding from the loft."

She said she jumped and grabbed the boy's legs and pulled him from the loft. The lad skinned the side of his face as his aunt pulled him down.

The fact that the wind was blowing the smoke away from the house allowed the fire to gain considerable progress before it was noticed. Mrs. Prentice said they had smelled no smoke and did not know the barn was afire until the Kingzen boy came running.

Traffic along No. 2 highway was held up for over an hour as firemen ran hose across the pavement to bring water to play on the burning barn. Efforts to save the structure were without avail, however, and firemen concentrated their efforts in preventing spread of the flames.

Nearby Residence Saved

Although the wind was blowing directly out of the west the roof of a residence south and directly across from the barn, owned by William Vance, caught fire in two places. Firemen ran up ladders and directed hose onto the burning shingles.

A small grass cut of the blazing barn also caught fire in several places.

The burned barn was a rambling old structure used principally as storage but the dry pine timber and lumber made a terrific blaze. Owner of the barn who operated a small grocery and gasoline service station estimated building loss and contents at approximately $1,000.

ACHESON BEGINS COLD WAR TALKS WITH SCHUMAN

French Ask Assistance Against Communism

Paris, May 8 (AP)—State Secretary Dean Acheson began a round of cold war talks today on French pleas for speedy American assistance against communism in Indo-China. In recent diplomatic moves said, the United States wants a guarantee of genuine independence for the Indo-Chinese.

Acheson flew into Paris Sunday for western diplomatic conferences which will shift Thursday to London. The meetings will deal with ways to contain communist expansion all over the world.

But Acheson's meeting with Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France today was reported to deal primarily with Indo-China. The French have been fighting a stalemated jungle war there since 1946 against the guerrilla forces of Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh.

The U.S. Secretary of State was expected to urge that the reportedly firm U.S. government position behind the French-sponsored ruler of the Indo-Chinese State of Vietnam, must be made a more valid symbol of opposition to communism.

Request Will Be Made

Bao Dai's regime is opposed by Ho's jungle government, which is recognized by Russia. Acheson's assurances that steps toward independence will be taken as fast as the guerrilla war allows.

Americans have stated repeatedly that United States policy contains not the slightest suggestion of opposition to the French under whose metropolitan France with her overseas territories.

All Acheson wants to know now informed sources said, is whether the French can get true independence, with the French Union's relationship to the diplomatic links similar to the British Commonwealth, or whether the U.S. is being asked to foot the bill for French colonial conquest.

In the course of his talks with Schuman, Acheson also is expected to discuss France's attitude toward Germany and Premier Georges Bidault's suggestion for a new Atlantic Assembly to coordinate economic and political activities of the western countries as well as dealing with military problems.

Find of Medallions Raises Hope Sunken Galleon Real Treasure Ship

Tobermory, Scotland, May 8 — (CP)—Royal Navy divers claimed today to have found the hulk of a 16th century Spanish galleon in the mouth of Loch Sunart.

And now it appears to be up to the Duke of Argyll to find out if a legendary treasure ship of gold coins is really in the vessel.

Ancient legend, now entirely substantiated by historical research, says the galleon, part of the 1588 Spanish Armada, carried 20,000,000 gold ducats — about $95,570,000.

With the finding of the hulk, however the Royal Navy gave orders to discontinue operations. The navy's agreement with the duke, who by tradition owns the galleon and the treasure, if any, was merely to locate the hulk.

Now the duke wants to investigate further about the ducats, he'll have to do it himself, presumably

Report No Deaths, Damage Estimated At $20,000,000

Countless Persons Treated For Minor Cuts and Bruises

Rimouski, Que., May 8 — (CP) Stunned and bewildered, weary residents of this gateway city to the Gaspe Peninsula today counted the loss in one of the most disastrous fires in Canadian history.

A thin mantle of snow that moved in with cold, biting weather shortly after midnight covered the blackened ruins of 312 homes and a dozen business, educational and religious buildings — prey of a roaring conflagration that caused monetary loss of $20,000,000 and made 2,500 of the 15,000 population homeless.

So far as could be learned by army and police officials, there were no deaths in the fire that raged more than 30 hours.

Fire Under Control

It was 1.20 a.m. EDT, today when Maj.-Gen. R. O. G. Mortson officer commanding Quebec command, announced the fire was under control. It began about 8.30 Saturday night.

Red cross emergency headquarters treated scores of persons for minor cuts and burns.

The fire is believed to have started when a power line snapped in Saturday's heavy wind and set fire to lumber yards of the Price Brothers Lumber Company. It raced through the wards and spread with astonishing unbelievable speed, whipped by the wind that at times reached 80 miles an hour.

Throughout Saturday night and all through Sunday until the early hours of Monday exhausted firefighters—Rimouski firemen, volunteers, army troops and contingents from nearby points, battled hopelessly.

St. Joseph's Hospital, a four-storey brick building, and the Sisters of Charity Orphanage were destroyed.

Score of Stores Burned

Other buildings swept by the flames were the Rimouski Seminary, the Technical School, Rimouski Hospital, two hotels, a motion picture theatre and a score of stores, large and small.

The fire cut its path through the western section of the city, licking and leaping as fire are one.

Thousands of dazed residents loaded belongings on vehicles of all descriptions and fled amidst smoke and showering cinders.

Many of the homeless were taken into homes of residents in the undamaged portion of the city and nearby towns. Others were sheltered in tents and buildings thrown open to them.

The army made preparations to dynamite buildings standing dangerously. Police and Red Cross workers prepared to evacuate persons still wandering about in dangerous areas.

FIRES, FLOODS AND WINDSTORMS CAUSE 5 DEATHS

(By The Canadian Press)

The forces of nature were pulled fully and heavily over Canada during the weekend.

In a triple-threat multi-million-dollar weekend of disaster, that take the lives of death in at least five persons and perhaps others, the fist of nature hammered at the country with floods, fires and windstorms, almost unmatched in their combined ferocity.

Sudden and most brutal was the $20,000,000 blaze that razed in Rimouski, Que., where firemen, soldiers and civilians fought for more than 30 hours to bring under control flames that blackened and destroyed most of the once proud industrial city on the south shores of the St. Lawrence River.

Some 1,200 miles to the west the swollen Red River in Manitoba threatened the homes of thousands of residents in low-lying municipalities in Winnipeg's suburbs and the province ordered the evacuation of the Norwood and East Kildonan areas.

Fire chiefs and mill owners warned Brig. R. E. A. Morton, controller of flood relief in the Red River Valley, water 23 feet deep might pour over the two sections of greater Winnipeg.

"The damage is real," he said. "Everything is being done to prevent a calamity."

Meanwhile, in central parts of the country, gale winds lashed Ontario points Saturday causing death to four persons and unknown damage in torn roofs, toppled telephone and power line poles, fires and highway accidents.
